It is unnecessary to prefix to this Valuable Collection any account of the very able man, whose Papers are now presented to the Abbotsford Club.

Being aware that this Collection of the Papers of our common ancestor would have formed, more appropriately, the contribution of the present Earl of Haddington to the Bannatyne Club, I am desirous to state that the Collection had been designed for publication for the Abbotsford Club by another of its Members, and that it is only through his kindness in ceding the privilege to me, that I am enabled to present, in this form, a Collection which, while it is historically of the greatest value, illustrates, in a conspicuous manner, the great talents, and influence, and authority displayed by the first Earl of Haddington, in the management and direction of the affairs of Scotland.

To the principles and political views, which this Collection manifests on so many subjects, his descendants are in no respect committed.

For the preparation of this important Collection, in its present form, for the Club—for the order in point of time assigned to many letters having no date—for the accuracy with which the dates have been examined and ascertained—for the careful revision of the proof-sheets, and for much other laborious and valuable assistance—and, in particular, for the very useful Index, which I hope will add so much to the value of the contribution, I am wholly indebted to Mr MAIDMENT, without whose aid I could not have presented the Collection to the Club in any satisfactory form.

JOHN HOPE.

[The Letters and State Papers contained in these Volumes are chiefly referable to the interval between the accession of James VI. to the Crown of England, and his demise; and as being anterior in date to the noble writer's adoption of the title of Haddington, have therefore been described as The Melros Papers. Many of the Letters of the Privy Council are in his Lordship's handwriting, and several documents have been included which either relate to matters in which he was personally concerned, or in which he took an interest, such, for instance, as the correspondence relative to the assumption of the Earldom of Eglinton by Sir Alexander Seton, and the Papers connected with the visit of James VI. to Scotland, in 1617. Considerable difficulty was experienced from the want of dates to almost all his Lordship's Letters; and it is not improbable that one or two mistakes may have occurred in the arrangement, but, in general, it is believed they have all been inserted in their proper order. With the exception of three Papers from the Balcarras Collection, and a few from the originals in the Charter-Room at Tynningham, the rest have been taken from the Balfour Manuscripts in the Library of the Faculty of Advocates.]

XI.—SIR THOMAS HAMILTON TO KING JAMES VI.

MOST SACRED SOUERANE,

MY conſaued feir, that my ſilence could not find owt any lawfull excuſe, if I ſould not aduerteis your maieſtie, of the progres and euent of the criminall perſute of Maiſters Johne Forbes, Welſche, and vtheris, thair complices, before your maieſties juſtice, for thair treaſonable declyning your maieſtie and your Secret Counſallis jugement, makis my [me] bauld to wryte in that mater; which, als weill in reſpect of ane moſt heich poynt, and lairge pairt, of your maieſties authoritie royall, brocht in queſtion, be the ignorant and inflexible obſtinacie of theſe defendares, as in regaird of the moſt cairefull expectatioun of ane great pairt of your hienes ſubiectis in this your kingdome, ouerdoutſumlie diſtracted, during the

incertane euent thairof, pairtlie be ſuperſtitious, and pairtlie be fayned zeale to thair profeſſioun, and affectioun to thair perſones for thair profeſſions ſaik, being of ſo heich and dangerous conſequence, as the miſcaireing thairof micht haue exemed ane great pairt of your maieſties ſubiectis, from your maieſties juriſdictioun and obedience in maters of doctrine and diſcipline, and all vther thingis which thay ſould haue pleaſed to affirme to be of that nature; and thairwith haue giuen them occaſion, and, as it wer, lawfull libertie, or libertie be your maieſties awin lawis and ſentencis, to haue menteaned that libertie anis purchaſſed and daylie to haue increaſed the ſame, to the manifeſt perrell not onlie of farder impairing, bot, with tyme, of vtter ſubuerſioun of your royall power within this kingdome. God having now brocht it to that gude end, that, efter langſum, difficill, and moſt contentious trauellis, thay ar conuict be affyſe of that treaſonabill declinatour. I ſould omit als neceſſare ane poynt of my dewtie, as if I had not replyed to their moſt probable alledgences, if I ſould conceale from your maieſtie, that the firſt and greateſt prayſe of this gude ſucces ſould be giuen to your maieſties ſelf, for foreſeing this mater to be of ſik difficultie and danger, as it requyred the particular directioun of your maieſties awin moſt excellent wiſdome, be the report and proſecution of my Lord of Dumbar, who I am aſſurit, in all his lyfe wes neuer ſo ſoliſt for the euent of the tryall of vther mens lyues; for at his heir cumming, finding that mater full, not onlie of foreſene, bot alſo of vnexpected difficulties, his caire and diligence thairin hes bene ſo aſſiduall, wyſe and prouident, that having maid ſecret choiſe of this tyme and place, which be effect hes proued moſt proper, and ſo viuelie expreſſed to your maieſties juſtice, juſtice clerk, and vtheris, members of that court, your maieſties caire of the menteanance of your royall power, brocht in queſtioun be that proces, with the vndoubted favour which they micht expect be doing thair dewtie, and moſt certane diſgrace and puneiſment gif in thair default ony thing ſould miſcairie; he proceided thairafter to the preparatioun of ſufficient forces, habill to execute all the lawfull commandementis of your maieſties counſall, in your ſeruice, and for that pourpoſe hauing brocht with him to this towne, ane very great number of honorabill baronis, and gentilmen of gude rank and wourth, of his kinred and freind-ſchip, finding, beſyde vther great impedimentis, the cheif perrell to conſiſt in the want of ane honeſt aſſyſe, who, without reſpect of popular fauour, report, threatningis or imprecationis, wald ſerue God and your maieſtie in ane gude conſcience; for knawin default of conſtancie and gude affection in vthers, he wes compelled to cauſe his awin particular and privat kinſmen and freindis, to mak the maiſt pairt of the aſſyſe, who being admittit vpone the ſame, gif he had not dealt in that poynt, but ſcrupuloſitie or ceremonies, to reſolue thame of the wounderfull dowt, whairin, by many meanes, and cheiflie be the thoundering imprecationis of the pannell, and contentious reſiſtance of thair awin aſſociat aſſyſouris, thay wer caſſin, that haill pourpoſe had failled, to oure infinite greif and your maieſties ouer great preiudice. For the gude ſucces whairof, I ſall ever thank God, and euer pray him and your maieſtie, to put ws to als few eſſayes in the lyke caiſſes, as may poſſiblie ſtand with the weill of your maieſties ſeruice, in reſpect of the ſcaircetie of ſkilled and weill affected aſſyſoures in thir caiſſes; for gif my lord of Dumbar had wanted your maieſties moſt prouident directioun, or if we had bene deſtitute of his wyſe and infinitlie ſoliſt diligence and actioun in this pourpoſe, in all mens jugementis it had loſſed, whairin oure miſluke could neuer haue fund any excuſe, which micht aither haue geuin ſatiſfactioun to your maieſtie, or contentment to oure awin myndis. Albeit, oure conſciences and actions did beare ws recorde, that we ſerued with moſt faithfull affectioun and cairefull diligence. Bot now we haue to thank God that it is weill endit, and I moſt humblie to craue your maieſties pardoun for my bauldnes and ouer long letter, whilk ſalbe alwayes ſchort in compariſoun of my long and endles prayers to God, for your maieſties honour, healt, contentment, and long happie lyfe. Moist Sacred Soueraynе, Hauing reſſaued commandment from your maieſtie, to try the meanis of Maiſter Johnne Forbes, his verification of that whilk he had writtin to your maieſtie, of the behauiour of your heynes chancellair in his foirknawlege, aduyſe, and approbatioun of the lait pretended aſſemblie at Abirdene, albeit, in the opinioun of mony not of meaniſt credite and knawledge in this countrey, the mater ſeamed without example, and not without dangerous conſequence, gif ane man in Maiſter John Forbes his caice ſould be hard to bring in queſtioun, the fame and fortune of ane nobilman of ſick birth, rank, and authoritie vnder your maieſtie as your heynes chancellar. Yet oure moiſt humble and faithfull dewtys in all thingis to obey your maieſtie, and oure monyfauld experienceis of the ſingular wiſdome and vndouted reaſoun, whereupoun all your maieſteis directionis ar infalliblie grounded, haueing moved ws iuſtlie to acknawlege the waiknes of oure awne privat opinionis, and reuerentlie to acquieſce, to your maieſteis moir excellent iudgement, and the chancellair not onlie conſenting, bot ſo earneſtlie ſoliſting the exact, diligent, and moiſt perfyte inquiſitioun of all circumſtanceis, wherby the ſimpill and pure treuth of that haill purpois, myght be moiſt cleirlie and certanelie diſcouered, we aſſigned ane terme to maiſter Johnne Forbes, with ſo competent ane ſpace for preparatioun, and vſing of his probatioun, as he being ſatiffeit thairwith, and haueing wairned all ſick witneſſes, as he pleaſed to inſert, in the blank of your maieſteis letter, grantit to him for wairning of ony, whome, he thocht maiſt able to cleir the trewth of his dilatioun. Vpoun the threttent of this moneth we examined Maiſter Walter Balcanquole, Maiſter James Balfour, and Maiſter Robert Cathcairt, witneſſes produceit be Maiſter Johnne Forbes, whoſe depoſitionis we haue ſend heirwith to your maieſtie, and onlie omitted to examine Maiſter Johnne Welſhe, whome, he had alſo requyred to beir witnes, becaus we wer affrayed, that your maieſtie ſould haif imputed to ws for ignorance or malice, gif we fould haif examined that man as ane witnes, whofe fame hes reffaued the wound of ane capitall convictioun befoir your heynes iuftice, onlie curable be your maiefteis clemencie. We haif in that refpect abfteined frome examinatioun of him, the rather alfo, becaus albeit he fould afferme, all that is alledgeit be maifter Johnne Forbes that he could fay, he wald onlie be teftis fingularis. But vndirftanding that boith the chancellair and Maifter Johnne Forbes declairit that the laird of Leyis, Burnett, wes prefent at thair conference concerning that affemblie, for better tryall of the treuth, we haif of oure office, alfo fworne and examined him, and fend to your maieftie his depofitioun with the reft, wherin we will not prefome to wryte oure opinioun to your maieftie, boith becaus God hes infpyred your maieftie with fo excellent iudgement and fingulair wifdome, as gevis your maieftie moir reddy and perfyte refolutioun in all fick materis nor we ar able to confaue, and als, becaus in fa rare ane caice as this, the fentence can nevir haue ony warrand, whilk may ather, for the qualitie of the perfonis, equitie of the determinatioun, or confequence of the example, be fua fure and vniuerfallie allowable, as when it falbe knawne to haue procedit frome the fontane of your maiefteis royall prudence. And in this oure proceiding humelie requeifting your maieftie gratiouflie to accept of oure faithfull intentioun, we befeik God lang to profper and preferue your maieftie in perfyte helth and contentment. XIV.—THE LORDS OF PRIVY COUNCIL TO KING JAMES VI.

MOST SACRED AND MOST GRACIOUS SOUERANE,

THE parlement appoynted to be haldin in this towne, vpon the firft day of this moneth, being now fo begun, as yifterday, the lordis of Articles wer chofin according to your maiefties letter, fend for that effect to the eftaites, and the roll of the names prefented to thame in your maiefties name, withowt change of any ane, of the haill number recommended to thame be your maieſtie, or contrare vote of any of all the eſtaites. Theſe lordis of Articles being this day convened, the firſt article preſented to thame wes the ratification of your maieſties prerogatiue, whilk being red with great attention and reuerence of all that wer preſent, wes with ſo ioyfull vniformitie and hairtlie conſent of the haill number approvin, as thair appeired ane dewtifull contention amang thame, who ſould moſt viuelie expres the ȝeale of his moſt feruent affection to your maieſties honour, obedience, and ſeruice; ſum regraiting that it had not bene thair gude fortune, ſoner, to have offered that declaration of thair dewtie to your maieſtie, vthers profeſſing that thay longed for occaſions of geving more effectuall pruiffis of thair loyall deuotion to your maieſties ſeruice, nor by vourdis of dewtifull recognition; and ſum confeſſing that this acknauledging of the princes ſouerayne prerogatiue wes dew to all the kingis, that euer rang in this realme, bot ſo mekill more to your maieſtie, nor to any vther that euer poſſeſſed that royall dignitie, as be the merite of your maieſties awin peculiar qualities and moſt rare vertewes, thay thocht gif the kingdome had bene electiue, that of all that leivis in this aige, your maieſties ſelf wald be fund wourthieſt to be choſin be election to reſſaue and poſſes all ſouerane power.

Efter whilk happie concluſion of that article, the biſchopis act wes nixt preſented, whilk being curiouſlie reaſoned be many of the principals in rank and learning of the lordis of Articles, efter exact conſideration of all that could be alledgit in that pourpoſe, it is ſo concluded as be the moſt pairt of lordis of Articles, it is allowed with verie few verie tolerabill exceptions, and les hurtfull nor the biſchopis thameſelfis, and your maieſties vtheris moſt cairefull ſeruandis did before apprehend; whairin we may withowt vanterie or vntrewth, affirme to your maieſtie, that gif continouall caire and exceiding paynis, had not bene tane to conqueis and conſerue all honeſt mens affections to the aduancement of that important ſeruice, the contentment, whilk now we found vpon this fortunat beginning, and the hope of the lyke gude ſucces in the end of this mayne poynt, had turned to the greateſt greif, that honeſt hairtis can ſuſteane in the diſaſtre of thair chairge, whairin we had the reſolued oppoſition, curiouſlie imprented, be the buſie policie of ſum malicious brethren, in the myndes of

mony vnfreindis to purge, and the wilfulnes of vthers forefeing thair awin loffis in the proceiding of this act to ouercum, with the argumentis takin from the finceritie of your maiefties intentions, greatnes of thair obligation to your maieftie, and neceffitie of the erecting of that eftait, whilk withowt this help could not ftand. Nather wanted we croffes, not onlie be the flewth of fum having entres in it, bot alfo be the indifcretion of fum of thair wourdis and behauiour, whilk, becaus it proceided not of malice, bot of rafhnes, or lak of experience, is the more excufabill, feing the turne is done, as fall be more particularlie fignified to your maieftie, whan it fall pleas God to grant ws that happines and honour to fie your moft gracious maieftie. In the meantyme we can not omit particularlie to beare witnes to your maieftie, of the wifdome and great dexteritie, vfed be my lord Chancelar in proponing, difpofing, and directing of maters in fik maner, as ferued beft, to bring all to this gude end, whairin my lord Secretar be his perfuafiue and pithie reafoning fecunded him verie difcreitlie. Oure pourpofe is to follow the courfe of this gude difpofition, whairin we find the lordis of Articles, and the morne, to founde thair affections in the mater of the fubfidie, God willing, whairin as we find that happie euent whilk we defyre, and be the haill powers of oure weak jugementis and vttermeft indeuores of oure trauellis, fall preas to procure, your maieftie fall be certified of the fucces of it. And as we haue bene baulde to impefche your maieftie, with the difcours of thir thinges, whilk, in refpect of the difficulties whilk we haue fund and removed, feimis to ws to be brocht in ane gude cours of liklie fucces. So we mon not conceale ane difordour fallin furth in this towne, whairvpon, praifed be God, no great hairme hes followed. That grudge borne be the freindis of the houfs of Eglinton, to the erle of Glencairne and his freindis, is notour to your maieftie, amangis whome, thair is affurance ftanding, whilk we fupponed fould haue bene ane fufficient band to haue ftayed troubill and inuafion betuix thame during thair remayning heir at this tyme. Neuertheles vpon tyfday at nicht, immediatlie efter fupper, the maifter of Wintoun and his brother fir Alexander Seton, being accumpanied with nyne or ten, going to the erle of Eglintones ludgeing, rencontered be the way, the erle of Glencairne, accumpanied with threttie or thairby, who in refpect of the evill will borne betuix thefe folkis, and him abfteaning from all wilfull occafion of inuafion, his lordfhip being in the beginning of his cumpanie, and the maifter of Winton in the fore end of his cumpanye, paft by vther ane reafonabill fpaice, till fum rafcall feruandis in the end of thair cumpanies, being more malicious and querrellous nor thame felfis, drew thair fwourdis and began ane tumult, whilk having lefted verie long, ended be the great travellis of the townefmen and of your maiefties gairde, withowt any farder fkaith, nor the licht hurting of verie few, and more dangerous woundis of ane Johne Mathie, feruand to the erle of Glencairne. Whilk fact, as it wes verie offenfiue to the haill nobilmen and counfall, in refpect of the tyme and place, fo hes it in particular fo greived my lord Chancelar, as having difchairged his brothers fones, and all that wes with thame, any wayes to cum in his prefence, fo is he als bent as any man leiving, to haue the trewth of the occafion and beginning of that infolence precifelie tryed and condignelie pvneiffed, withowt refpect or fauour of any perfone; whilk the counfall hes begun to do, and will cairefullie profecute, lyke as thay wald haue prefentlie endit it, gif thair earnift defyre to haue thir publict turnis, whilk your maieftie hes gevin thame in chairge, rather perfyted at this tyme be the eftaites, nor delayit be interruption of fik maters, as the counfall efter the end of the parlement may more convenientlie do, nor to giue occafion of longer working, to fum, whois onlie caire is indirectlie to difapoynt your maiefties intention in thir prefent effaires. Whairin hoping, that your moft excellent maieftie, in your accuftumed gracious maner, will accept of oure gude meaning and diligence, and not onlie excufe oure weaknes, bot ftrenthin it with the perfection of your moft prudent directions; whilk fall euer be to ws ane inviolabill law and vnchangeabill reule of moft humbill, reddie, and conftant obedience, we befeik God long to beftow and incres all wiffed bliffinges vpon your maieftie, in moft conftant health and perfyte contentment. PLEASE YOUR MOST SACRED MAIESTIE,

OURE ſlawnes in making aduerteiſment to your maieſtie, at this tyme of parlement, of the proceiding of the effaires of this your maieſties kingdome, wer inexcuſabill, gif be the progres of thir publict turnis, it did not appeare, that your maieſties faithfull ſeruandis thocht it ane mair neceſſair degrie of thair dewtie, to provyde ſurelie that your hienes adois ſould go weill, nor to ſpend tyme, or vſe prepoſterous diligence, to kep the idill thankis of firſt aduertiſares. And thairfore having ſuperſeidit to direct this packet, till this mater of ſubſidie wes paſt in articles, we haue not ſo great cauſe to thank God for obteaning the taxation, as for the vnſpeakabill affection vttered at the granting thairof, be your maieſties ſubiectis of all eſtaites to your maieſties moſt ſacred perſone, whois gracious, wyſe and loving letter being red to thame, the hope geuin thairby to thame to inioy thair moſt deſyred bliſſing, in the effectis of your maieſties promeiſed repaire to this your natiue cuntrey, did ſo raviſh thair hairtis, with moſt perfyte contentment, as thay thocht not thair haill guddis ane ſufficient pryce, to redeme the ineſtimabill loſs and greif of mynde, whilk thay daylie ſufteane by your hienes abſence, or the incomprehenſibill meaſour of all earthlie bliſſingis, whilk, thay promeis to thame ſelfis be your maieſties gracious preſence in this kingdome, and thairfore haue more willinglie granted, nor we can wourthelie expres, ane taxation of foure pund the pund land, with the conformabill proportion to be payed be the prelates and borrowes for thair pairtes, to be compleitlie payed to your maieſtie in foure yeiris, be equall portions, the firſt yeiris payment beginnand at Candilmes nixt, and ſwa from Candilmes to Candilmes, till compleit payment be maid of the haill ſowme, whilk is the lairge doubill of the greateſt taxation, that ever wes granted to any prince in this kingdome, whairin it hes bene thocht meit to ſuppres the name of the ſowme, becaus whan oure peopill hes done far aboue thair power, to ſatiſſie your maieſtie, thair haill vailȝant will be les nor your maieſtie wald wiſs ſould be knawin to ſtrengearis. Bot in effect the taxation will come to foure hundreth thoufand merkis, whilk wes helped be my lord Chancelar, als far as poffiblie he could, be propofition of many great and gude reafons, to induce the eftaites to it, whilk thay moft willinglie imbraced, evrie ane contending to exceid his nichtbour in the expreffing of the hairtlines of his confent; and albeit the difficultie and travellis wer infinit, to bring this mater to this gude poynt in articles, we feir that the darned malice of fum peopill remayning in this towne, for no vther pourpofe, bot to breid ws bufines in thir your maiefties affaires, fall giue ws muche ado to obteane to it, the approbation of the generall houfs of parlement; whairin oure trauellis fall be diligent and faithfull, and hope affuredlie, that the fucces fall not be deftitute of that conftant happines, whairwith God hes heirtofore bliffed all your maiefties interpryfes. MOIST GRATIOUS AND SACRED SOUERANE,

YOUR maiefteis two letters, the ane, concerning the inconuenientis, whilkis haue ariffin by the intermiffioun of the ordour eftablifhed by your maieftie, anent the beftowing of one day euery weik, vpoun materis concerning the eftate and commoun weil of this realme, and the vther concerning the bauldnes and libertie, whilk ſome nobilmen of this kingdome hes tane to mak moir publict profeſſioun of their fals religioun, nor thay did during your maieſteis reſidence heir amang ws, wer preſented to your maieſteis counſaill, who wer convenit in a frequent nomber of the nobilitie and clergie, by your maieſteis faithfull and worthie counſellour the erll of Dunbar, who alſwa maid a breif relatioun to ws, of ſome repoirtis gevin oute to your maieſtie, anent the grudge and miſcontentment whilk your maieſteis ſubiectis had conſaued, vpoun the granting of the lait taxatioun, and anent the preſent miſreule of the incuntrey, and vnquietnes of the heylandis and low bordouris. Thir letters and creditt of the erll of Dunbar, being reuerentlie hard and conſidderit be your maieſteis counſell, and firſt, that point tuicheing the grudge and miſcontentment of your maieſteis ſubiectis for the taxation, being examinat, and euery manis knowledge of that mater being demandit, we will aſſuir your ſacred maieſtie, that as that taxatioun wes moiſt freelie, with the generall applauſe and hairty conſent of all the eſteatis (no man contradicting) yealdit vnto, without ony appearance of grudge, murmour or miſcontentment, ſwa to this hour, thair wes nevir one of your maieſteis counſell, who hes hard ony kynd of quhiſpering, concerning that mater, bot a fer greatar quietnes and contentment in this, nor euer wes had, in ony of the taxationis preceding; and we can not bot winder, of the preſumptioun and raſhnes of thoſe, who without a ground or warrand wald put your maieſtie, in diſtruiſt of the loyaltie and honneſt hairtis of your maieſteis faithfull ſubiectis of this kingdome, who we ar certane will be moir grevit, that ſuche ſiniſter conſtructionis ar maid of thame, nor thay ar for the mater of the taxatioun. And thairfoir we wilbe bauld in all humilitie to requeiſt your ſacred maieſtie to examine this mater moir ſchairplie, and to try vpoun what ground, euidence, and preſumptioun, ſuche conſtructionis ar gevin oute againis your maieſteis goode ſubiectis, wherin we doubt not bot your maieſtie will find moir folie and raſhnes, nor probabilitie of a treuth.

As to the grouth of the nomber of papiſtis, and thair bauldnes to continew in thair erroris, and refuſall to hant the preicheingis, and to commvnicat, we aſſuir your maieſtie thair wes nevir ony ſuche dilatioun maid vnto ws be the churche, who ſould haif gevin ws informatioun in that mater; alwayes, at this meiting and aſſembley at Lynlythgw, thair is a very goode courſe tane anent the ſuppreſſing of papiſtis, whiche being ſene and allowed by your maieſtie, the executioun thairof ſalbe proſequuted without reſpect of perſonis, with all extremitie, and no thing dew to your maieſteis counſell, anent that particular, ſalbe omitted nor neglected.

Anent the eſtate of the Heylandis we haif not hard of ony great inſolence thair this lang tyme, except onlie, the murther of Kinſawnis men, wherin albeit no complaint nor informatioun wes gevin be the pairty to the counſell, yitt vpoun the firſt brute thairof, and your maieſteis directionis thairanent, delyuerit be your maieſteis ſecretair at his returning, thay directit chargeis aganis the erll of Athoill for exhibitioun of the criminallis, and in reſpect of his diſſobedyence, efter two continwationis granted vnto him, he is denunceit and regiſtrat to the horne, and ane act maid, that no ſuſpenſioun ſalbe granted, whill he firſt enter in warde within the caſtell of Edinburgh; lyke as for quieting of the reſt of the heylandis, the actis of cautioun for the generall band, and perſonall compeirance ar reviſed, and executioun ordanit to pas aganis ſuche as hes not found cautioun, and all other directionis ſo wyiſlie ſett doun be your maieſtie thairanent, and reported by your maieſteis ſecretair, ordanit to be putt in executioun.

We haif had the commiſſionaris of the bordouris afoir ws, and hes ane new dyet appointed to thame, and the ſpeciall baronis and gentilmen of the three marcheis, agane the nynetene of this inſtant, at whiche tyme we hoip that ſuche goode ordour, ſalbe tane for the perfyte ſatling of theſe boundis, as ſall rander vnto your maieſtie ſatiſfactioun.

Archibald M'Coneill being committit to the caſtell of Dunbartone, he hes laitlie brokin warde and eſchaiped, whereupoun the conſtable being convenit befoir the counſell and granting his ouerſicht and negligence, with proteſtationis alwayes of his innocencie, the counſell hes committed him to the caſtell of Edinburgh, whill ye forder knowledge of your maieſteis pleaſour.

The bipaſt ouerſicht, anent the intermiſſioun of the counſell day, for matteris of eſtate ſalbe repaired, and that day ſalbe preceiſlie keipit in all tyme comeing, wherein no thing ſalbe treated nor handlit, bot materis importing the quyet of the eſteate, and actionis of pairtyis ſalbe referrit to the thuriſdayis counſell.

Your maieſtie wilbe gratiouſlie pleaſed to accept this our excuſe in goode pairt, yff we haif not in ſo exact forme as your princelie wiſdome hes ſett doun, performed euery thing belonging to your maieſteis ſeruice. The deſolat eſteat of the countrey in regaird of the vniuerſall plague, wes ſuche, as we could nevir haif ony ſetled reſidence, or convenient directing of thingis, requireing a ſteidfaſt and continuall diligence but intermiſſioun. Bot now yff it ſall pleis God, as we hoip in his mercy he ſall, to ſtay the devoiring plague, we hoip with ſuche diligence to repair all bigane negligence, as materis ſalbe done to your maieſteis contentment, and to the peace and goode of this your maieſteis kingdome. And ſo ending with oure hairtlie prayeris to God, for your maieſteis lang lyffe, proſperous and happy reignne, and eternall felicitie, we reſt

Edinburgh, the 16 of December 1606.

XVII.—SIR THOMAS HAMILTON TO KING JAMES VI.

PLEASE YOUR MOST SACRED MAIESTIE,

MY vndewtifulnes wer inexcuſabill, gif any thing ſould occur, conteaning mater of apparent preiudice to your maieſtie, whairof, I ſould not with diligence mak your maieſtie aduerteiſed, and thairfore will moſt humblie craive your maieſties pardon and pacience, that I preſume to ſignifie to your hienes, that be occaſion of ane queſtion broght before ws, betwix ane having your maieſties gift of ane baſtardrie, whairvpon he had obteaned declaratour, and ane vther having the gift of that ſame baſtardrie, by my Lord Duke of Lenox diſpoſition, as lord of the regalitie of Santandrois, at ſik tyme as his lordſhip had right to the biſchoprik be your maieſties gift thairof, ratifiet in Parlement. In the diſputation of that cauſe, mention arrayſe of the priuilege of that regalitie, whilk wes affirmit to be ſo ampill, as be ane chartour, whilk they call the goldin chartour, whairof I haue ſene the copie, your maieſties moſt nobill progenitour, King James the ſecund, had geuin to the Biſchop of Sanctandrois and his ſucceſſours, priuilege of regalitie, which amangis mony vther prerogatiues conteaned thir clauſes following, " Cum quatuor punctis et querelis ad noſtram coronam regiam ſpectantibus," and thairefter, " cum itineribus juſticiariæ et Camerariæ etc. Cum parliamento ſolito et conſueto ac monetæ fabrica ;" as alſo this vther clauſe. " Inſuper volumus quod inhabitantes, tenentes, aut firmarii terrarum, dicti epiſcopi, aut eorum bona, infra aquas de Forth et Tay commorantes, affuturis temporibus, non attachientur ſeu arreſtentur, ad quæcunque itinera juſticiarii et Camerarii, vel ad quaſcunque curias, pro quacunque tranſgreſſione aut delicto, niſi tantum ad itinera et curias dicti epiſcopi, et quod inhabitantes et tenentes prædicti, a nobis hæredibuſque et ſucceſſoribus noſtris, nec a quibuſcunque noſtris officiariis, nullatenus cogantur in futurum, ad perſoluendum tallias, taxationes, exactiones, vel onera, ſeu aliquod ſeruitium ſeculare. Sic quod tenentes et inhabitantes dictarum terrarum liberi ſint in perpetuum, a quibuſcunque oneribus, auxiliis, priſis, talliagiis, taxationibus et contributionibus, per nos, hæredes et ſucceſſores noſtros, impoſitis ſeu imponendis." Whilkis ar ratified in Parliament and ſince confirmed be the chartours of King James the third, and the quene, your maieſties mother. I gat knawledge alſo, that the clerk of Regiſter in the recherche of the antiquities of this cuntrey, had fund that ſum of your maieſties progenitours had grantit to certane biſchopis, ſecundas decimas, whilk wes declared to be the teynd of the victuallis and prouiſion of the king's howſe, as of breid, aile, mowton, beif, etc. and the tent pennie of your maieſties caſualties, of certane ſchyres, whilk being writtin in the bouke of his collection of theſe antiquities, whilk he intendis to publeis, wer be my advyſe, verie willinglie deleited and ſuppreſſed be him. Neuertheles, I haue hard ſenſyne, that within thir two ȝeiris, ane man pretending richt to ſum ſik ſecund teyndis, be diſpoſition of the biſchop of Aberdene, perſewed for thame befoir the ſeſſioun, whairby I am induced to ſuſpect, that ſum tyme furder clame may be maid vpon ſuche rightis, whairin if I knew what wer your maieſties royall pleaſure, I ſould be moſt cairefull and diligent to ſie it performed. For gif your maieſties will be, that theſe moſt ſouerane and royall priuileges, onlie proper and dew to your hienes crowne, and gevin from it be ſuche kingis, as wer ſore ſantes to the crowne, ſall remayne with any ſubiect in your hienes kingdome, I ſall vſe your princelie will, as the reule and warrand of my conſent or ouerſicht, if ſo I be commanded. Bot if your maieſtie loue your awin eldeſt ſone, better nor any ſubiect of this kingdome, and reſpect the prerogatiue of your hienes crowne, more then the aduancement of any eſtait whatſoeuer to the preiudice thairof, I ſall oppone my ſelf to that whilk ſall be ſignified to me, not to haue your maieſties allouance, and having warrand to declaire the ſame to the lords of Seſſion, I am certane thay will beare that reuerence and regairde to it, whilk becumis thame: beſydes that I aſſure myſelf, that gif your maieſtie think meit, that any of the biſchopis aither renunce thair regalitie in haill or in any extraordinar priuilege thairof, they will proue ſo thankfull for your maieſties many great and moſt conſtant benefites and fauours to thame, that thay will verie hairtelie do, whateuer ſall ſeame gude in your moſt excellent wiſdome. Your maieſtie may alſo be pleaſed be informed, that the lord of Torphechin affirming, that be his erection he is exemit perpetuallie from all taxations, ſeikis ane command of the counſall to the collectour and clerk of the taxatiounis, to deleit all his landis and his vaſſalis landis, furth of the roll of taxation for ever, the exempill whairof, appeirantlie, will mak mony men curious to eik that clauſe, to the priuileges of thair former infeftmentis, anent whilkis maters, humblie requeiſting that it may pleaſe your moſt gracious maieſtie to ſignifie your gude plea-ſure, I beſeik God to grant to your maieſtie lang happie lyfe and eternall contentment. At Edinburgh, this 23 Januar, 1607.

Your moſt ſacred Maieſties moſt humbill, faithfull and bund ſeruand,

XVIII.—SIR THOMAS HAMILTON TO KING JAMES VI.

Please your most Sacred Maiestie,

My father haveing reſſauit by your maieſties moſt gracious fauour, ane place in your hienes Seſſioun, whilk geuis him occaſion to beſtow in your maieſties ſeruice, the reſt of that lyfe, whilk according to his moſt bundin dewtie, hes euer bene dedicated by him to that end, as he hes thairby obteaned greater honour and fauour, nor him ſelf or his poſteritie can by thair endeuors any wayes merite, ſo hes your maieſtie, in the hairtis and mouthes of many of your hienes gude ſubiectis heir, reſſaued the juſte commendatioun of your moſt vertuous nature, who of your awin royall motiue hes inclyned to reuairde his ȝeiris, guddis and bloude faithfullie ſpent in your maieſties mothers ſeruice, and that ſincere affection whilk your maieſtie hes knawin in him, to do the lyke and farder in your maieſties ſeruice, to whom, if he or I wer habill to expres by effectis, that thankfulnes whilk in oure hairtis according to oure infinite dewtie we haue vowed to your maieſtie, as your hienes hes kythed the moſt gracious, vertuous and moſt wourthie of all kinges of this aige, ſo ſould your maieſtie be moſt faithfullie, thankfullie and worthelie ſerued, bot oure waiknes forces ws, for lak of meanes and effectis, to haue recours to wiſhis and to beſeik God, who hes geuin your maieſtie ſo great power to do vertuouſlie, and ſo naturall inclination to do graciouſlie, long to preſerue your ſacred maieſtie and your royall poſteritie, in moſt flouriſhing and contented poſteritie, and to diſapoynt and confound all theſe that intend, or wiſh the contrare. At Edinburgh, this 29 of May 1607.

Your moſt ſacred Maieſties moſt obleiſed humbill and faithfull
ſeruand,

PLEIS YOUR SACRED MAIESTIE,

WE reffaued your maiefteis lettre anent the affairis of the Yllis, and hes appoynted the xxiij of this inftant, to the Marques of Huntley, for putting of him to ane poynt, anent the North Yllis, bot in that poynt of the yearfie dewtye, whereupoun we and he contrauertit, your maieftie hes gevin ws no refolutioun. Alwayes feing your maiefteis comptrollair is now to be with your heynes, we remitt that poynt to be refolued vpoun betwix your maieftie and him. Anent the Weft Yllis, thair is ane infeftment of fewferme paft to the erll of Argyll, of the landis of Kintyre, and fett doun be the advife of your maiefteis ordinair officers the Aduocat, and Clerk of Regifters, according to the prouifionis and reftrictionis, formarlie fend vp to your maieftie. Thair hes bene findrie offeris gevin in be Angus M^c^Coneill, and Sir James his fonne, this laft wynter, anent the Weft Yllis, and cautioun wes promeft for performance of thair offeris, bot thay being remittit to deale with your maiefteis comptrollair, and to gif him fatiffactioun in the fuirtie and cautioun, thay failyeit in that poynt, fua that no certane conclufioun could be tane with yame, as mair amplie your maiefteis comptrollair will informe your heynes, as alfua of his particulair dealing with the reft of the Weft Yllis, wherin we doubt not, bot he will gif vnto your facred maieftie, contentment and fatiffactioun.

Thair hes bene fome queftioun betwix the comptrollair and the fermoraris of your heynes cuftomes, anent ane defaulcatioun and allowance, craved be thame, for the cuftome of the commodities, paft in commerce betwix the twa kingdomes fra Nouember 1605 to Nouember 1606, and accordinglie yairefter during the yearis of thair tak, conforme to ane expres conditioun fpecifeit in thair contract and fett of the cuftomes. The cuftome of the whilkis commoditeis, with the fuperplus of the impoift of wynis, attour that whilk is defeafit, for furniffing of noble menis houffes, extendis within the yeare foirfaid to xxiiij$^{m\ lib}$, according to ane booke produceit be yame, and fubfcryued with yair handis, contening a particulair note of the faidis haill commodityis and wynis, off the whilk fowme the fermoraris ar content to accept in defeafance, ten thoufand pundis, or vtherwayes thay crave a toleratioun and libertie, for lifting of the cuftome. In the firft poynt, the comptrollair wes very ftrait, and in the fecund poynt anent the toleratioun, your maiefteis Counfell wald do no thing, without your heynes allowance; and yairfoir your maieftie hes to advife, whedder it will pleis your heynes to accord to the defalcatioun or toleratioun foirfaid, in whiche, boith the fermoraris ar indifferentlie contented, and whateuir falbe your maiefteis will and pleafour herin, wilbe accordinglie embraceit, and fua refting to your maiefteis anfuer in this poynt, we pray God to grant vnto your facred maieftie a lang, happy and profperous reign and eternall felicitie. XXI.—THE LORDS OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL TO KING JAMES VI.

Moist Sacred Soueraynе,

We reſſaued your maieſteis lettre of the xvj of this inſtant, and wer extreame ſory, that your maieſtie ſould haif reſſauit ony miſcontentment in that mater of the Erll of Athoill, wherin we had no vther reſpect bot to juſtice, and the obedyence of your maieſteis lawis, for that warrand not being directit to the Counſaill, bot to the Chancellour, not writtin by ony of your ordinary ſecretaryes deputis, not caſſheted with your maieſteis caſſhett, and being conditionall, that the Erllis cautionaris ſould ſtand good for his reentrie, bred ws ſuſpicioun that it had bene furreptitiouſlie purcheſt, no vther ſignificatioun having come of your maieſteis mynd, eyther to the Counſell or Capitayne of the caſtell of Edinburgh, beſyde, that it implyed a great iniuſtice, which is far frome your maieſteis diſpoſitioun, that your Chancellour ſould releve the erll of Athoill of his warde, and nottheles that his cautionaris ſould ſtand bound for his reentrie, to the whilk thay alluterlie diſaſſentit, and in no reaſoun could be aſtrictit yairunto. All whilkis preſumptionis concurring with the hinderance of your maieſteis ſeruice, for the whilk he wes wardit, wherin thair is nothing done, beſyde the interes of a infinite nomber of creditouris of all rankis, who by his removing oute of the countrey, felt thair awne wrak, and maid ſuche miſerable exclamatioun aganis your maieſtie, and the iniuſtice of the ſaid warrand, we thoght it ſould haue gevin your maieſtie moir contentment, that one ſould attend your maieſteis certane commandment, nor be raſhe in obeying a ſuſpitious warrand, ſo far from your maieſteis accuſtumat regaird to iuſtice. And wheras your maieſtie is miſcontented, with his putting in moir ſtrait warde, ſince that warrand, the caus of it, wes the deſyre of the creditouris, that he ſould not eſchaip, who having lettres of captioun, and commandmentis to the gaird to tak him, whilk thay were content befoir to ſuperſeid, hoiping, that he ſould not eſhew being arreiſted at yair inſtance, wer eirniſt and did putt yame in executioun, and wher your maieſtie thinkis that a counſellouris houſe ſould ſecure ony of your heynes rebellis, except in materis of treaſoun, yff your maieſtie think that ony ſuche thing ſould be allowed, yee neid looke for no executioun of juſtice in this kingdome, wherein we think thair is mo counſellouris, nor in England, France, Ytalie and Spayne, and yff that nobilman had bene preſent, we knowe he wald haif harbourit none of no qualitye that had not bene anſuerable to your maieſteis lawis: wherupoun we ſend for his ſeruand, who had the keiping of his houſe, and willed him that he ſould mak the ſame patent to the baillies, according to thair warrand whilk he refuſed. So the inopportune exclamatioun of the creditouris, and the haſarde thay apprehendit of thair wrack, maid thame to beg iuſtice, in theſe termes of the Lordis of your maieſteis Seſſioun, to putt their decreitis till executioun, and the lordis chuſeing rather that ane of thair awne nomber, ſould ſuſteane a tuitche in ceremonye, nor to gif occaſioun to the creditouris, to haif exclaimed to your maieſtie, that be thair tolleratioun and ouerſeing of rebellis, ſa mony of thame wer wrackit, thay grantit thair petitioun as a commoun benefit, whilk in reaſoun could be refuſed to no lauchfull ſubiect, and wherof thair is a nomber of preceding obſeruationis and examplis, vſit in the lyke caiſſes, within counſellouris houſes, and yff thair had not bene a moir fauourable regaird had be your maieſteis counſell to the erll of Athoill his eſtate, he had bene by his creditouris laid faſt in the tolbuith, wherfra he had gottin no relieff, bot by thair payment or ſufficient ſuirtye. We wiſhe that your maieſtie ſould be informed, that none of the counſell hes ony particulair aganis the erll of Athoill, bot all wiſhis he wer one, that myght ſupplee that place, for the honnour of the countrey and goode of your maieſteis ſeruice, and what the want of ſuche a man dois, the miſerable eſtate of the countrey of Athoill and all the bordouring boundis to it, dois declair. And not aucht dayis ſince, Johnne Dow M'Gillichallum, for whome he is anſuerable, hes hocheit and goirit to the laird of Leſmoir, aucht ſcoir of nolt, and daylie worſe and worſe is lookit for. Alwayes ſence it is your maieſteis pleaſour that he be at libertye, we haif advyſed the erll of Mar, thir and all vther reſpectis whatſoeuir ſett aſyde, to putt him free.

And wheras your maieſtie findis fault with the Maſter of Craufurdis repairing to Edinburgh, he wes not bot one day yair, and that ſecreitlie, upoun dealing betuix his pairty and him, and neuir ſeine upoun ony ſtreit in day lyght, and your maieſtie knowis that malefactors may be in Edinburgh, without the Counſellis knowledge, and all that hes bene done aganis that man, alſweill, in his criminall purſute befoir the iuſtice, as befoir the Counſell, proceidit from your maieſteis Counſaill, without the concurſe, informatioun or complaynt of the pairty, and what diligence we haif done, and how mony wayes we haif employed the capitane of the gaird to tak him, we remitt to his awne declaratioun, who is preſent with your maieſtie, lyke as ſa ſone as we gatt knowlege of his beeing in this toun, albeit he wes deidlie woundit and in haſaird of his lyffe, we cauſit a very diligent and ſtrait ſearche to be maid for him, be the baillies, alſweill in James Henderſonis houſe, whervnto he wes caryed efter his hurting, and in mony vtheris pairtis of the toun, where he had his accuſtomed reſſettis, afoir his denunciatioun to the horne, and we examined James Hendirſoun vpoun his great aith, yff he knew quhair he wes, who deponit and declairit, that immediatlie eftir his pauſing that nyght of the combatt, he reteirit him ſelff frome his houſe, bot knawis not whair. We ar alſ free of love to the maiſter of Craufurde, as haitrent to the erll of Athoill, and did no thing till oure knowledge for the one, nor aganis the vther, bot that whilk we hoiped ſould haif gevin your maieſtie contentment, bot we mon beg your maieſteis pardoun, not to tak in ill pairt, that we foirſee your maieſtie, that the lowſenes of that cuntrey, and the miſerable exclamatioun of ſa many creditouris, wherwith we wilbe perturbit for a whyle, will come neirair to your maieſteis earis, yff regaird be not had in this tranſlatioun of the erll, boith to the countreyis quyetnes, and thair ſatiffactioun, and that your maieſtie wald be pleaſed to direct, that no warrand of conſequence come to ws, bot vnder the handis of your ordinarye ſecretaryis, and authorized with your maieſteis caſſhett, that the officers may be anſuerable, and we haif no caus to ſuſpect yame.

According to your maieſteis directioun, we wryte to Maiſter Robert Bruce, for his reſolutioun in the mater of Gowry, whoſe anſuer returnit vnto ws, with his awne lettre directit vnto your maieſtie, we haif heirwith ſend vnto your heynes: and ſua craving pardoun of your ſacred maieſtie for this oure lang lettre, we end with our hairty and humble prayeris to God for your maieſteis lang, happy and proſperous reigne. Frome your maieſteis burgh of Edinburgh, the 26 day of Junij 1607.

TRUSTIE and weilbeloved Counſellour we greit you hartiely weill. Whereas at the tyme of Sir John Hamiltons being here, wee did ſett downe an order betwene the marques of Hamilton, and our ſervitour Patrick Maull, for making a ſecuritie to our ſaid ſervitour of the teynds of his awin lands, wherwith the ſaid Sir John Hamilton in name of the ſaid Marques, reſtit well contented. And vnderſtanding, that the ſame is not as yit done, wee ar to deſyre you, to cauſe put an end to that buſynes, and to ſie the ſame performed, according to our will and pleaſure, ſignified thereanent, and not to linger any more tyme, we having iuſt cauſe to finde fault, that the ſame haith bene ſo long delayed alreddy, notwithſtanding of our earneſt directions for diſpatch thairof, which we referring to your care and dilligence, committ you to God. From our courte at Oatelands, the xxiiij of Julij 1607.

XXIII.—THE LORDS OF PRIVY COUNCIL TO KING JAMES VI.

Pleis your most Sacred Maiestie,

We haif conforme to your maieſteis directioun in preſence of the Lord Duke of Lennox, at the inſtance of Johnne Naſmith and George Hereot, convenit beſoir ws, the taxmen of the cuſtomes, who finding thame ſelffis challengeit, vpoun reparatioun of the damageis, ſuſtenit be the complenaris, and to aſſotiat thame in the ſotietie of thair tak, whiche wes a mater of very greate conſequence, to the whiche thay could mak na anſuer, except thay were cited beſoir the ordinair iudge vpoun terme of law, and we having no other courſe of proceding, without the voluntair conſent of pairty, could do no moir bot in all humilitie acquent your maieſtie with thair anſuer; and becaus the natur of this complaynt propirlie belongis to the ſeſſioun to certifie your maieſtie, that we ſall moiſt cairfullie attend to ſie iuſtice miniſtrat in the mater with all convenient expeditioun, according as [eac]he pairty ſall require. Thus humilie craving your maieſteis pardoun, we wiſhe your maieſtie, efter a lang and proſperous reigne, eternall felicitie. Frome your maieſteis burgh of Edinburgh, the 13 day of Auguſt 1607.

Your Maieſteis moſt humble and obedyent
ſubiectis and ſeruitouris,

To the Kingis moſt excellent Maieſtie.

XXIV.—SIR THOMAS HAMILTON TO KING JAMES VI.

PLEASE YOUR MOST SACRED MAIESTIE,

I HAUE this long tyme bygane, abſteaned to giue accompt to your maieſtie of the eſtait of the mynes heir, becaus the chairge thairof being deuolued in the handis of Sir Bevis Bulmer, in doing whairof, I reſpected more your heighnes ſatiffaction nor my awin weill. So ſone as be ſum ſchort experience I did perſaue his humour, I douted not bot his aduerteiſmentis wald be more frequent, nor aither ſure or conſtant, yet that tread being his profeſſion, whairwith I wes litill acquent, I thoght it verie unſeimlie for me to mak to your maieſtie any information of the eſtait and wourth of theſe workeis, contrare to that whilk I vnderſtude he did giue owt, alſweil by letters to your maieſtie, as by ſpeaches to many vthers, of the exorbitant valew thairof: bot exſpecting the euent of his lairge promeiſſis to my ſelf, whairby I wes creduloufflie induced to put him in poſſeſſion of my workes and ſtok, I found my ſelf in end ſo mony wayes fruſtrat be him, alſweill be the maner of his ſtrange proceidings to my diſgrace and preiudice, ſo far as in him lay, as be his inhabilitie to performe theſe condicions, with the faire ſchew and hope whairof, he had at oure contracting allured me to credite him; that he confeſſing, that he had no ſik ſtok, as he had vndertane to advance for furneiſſing the workis, and likwayes regraitting his want of meanis to ſatiſſie my ſelf according to his condicion. Vpon his voluntar renunciation ſend be him to me, I reenterit to the workis in ane troubilſum tyme, great ſuſpicion of the plague being amangis the workmen, whairby the greateſt pairt of thame withdrew thame ſelfis from the workis, efter that I had payed to thame the waiges whilk Sir Bevis wes auchtand to thame, and vthers of thame wer debauchit from the workis be Sir Bevis, for my hinderance, as I am informit. Albeit I ſpaired to ſtrait him with payment to me of his condicion, or ony vther extremitie, notwithſtanding whairof, it being reported be many, that he hes not onlie gevin owt to all men, with whom [he] hes conferrit heir, bot alſo writtin to your maieſtie, that I haue dealt rigourouſlie and iniuſtlie with him, the neceſſar iuſtification of my awin proceidings forcis me to informe your maieſtie of the trewth of our dealing; whilk is, that he having ingyrit him ſelf verie importunelie, to haue ane tak of my workis, vpon his band to advance ane thouſand pund ſterling of ſtok, and to mak quarterlie payment of greater rent to my ſelf nor I wald haue craved, gif his awin offers had not perſuaded me,—I, finding by experience, that he had no ſik ſtok as he had promeiſed, and that his bypaſt actions had tane from him all moyen and credite to purchas money from any man, except that whilk he drew from your maieſtie for bigging of his milnes to ſtamp his gold, whairof thrie thouſand pund ſterling of your heines money hes not broght thrie vnces of his gold, to be ſtamped at your maieſteis mint heir. I hope your maieſtie will not blame me, to haue rather accepted his renunciation of my work, to be profecute to your maieſties benefite, and weill of this your heighnes kingdome, vpon my chairges, nor to haue left my workes waiſt and deſert as he hes left your maieſties gold mynes in Craufurdmure, efter his vnproffitabill conſumption of ſo mekill of your maieſties money, without performance of any pairt of his great vndertaking.

As to his affirmation, that I have ſtudied to conceale from your maieſtie the trew wourth of my myne, it wants all likliehood, for it wer madnes in me to preaſe to ſuppres from your maieſtie, the trew availl of that work, whilk being knowne to ſo mony workmen, can not be maid vnknowne to your maieſtie, ſpeciallie, ſeing in all the ſpace of foure moneths of his chairge heir, the eſtait of that myne wes better knowne to Sir Bevis and his ſeruandis nor to any men leivand, during whilk tyme, I remitted all thingis to him, and he wes ſo loath to let my ſelf knaw the eſtait of it, that he preaſſed to haue debarrit perforce, theſe, whom I appoynted to ſie the progres of the workis for me, gif I wald haue ſufferit it. And albeit his ſpeaches be ſo ſtrange, that I will hardlie refer any thing that concernis my credite to him, yet I am aſſurit that he can not deny, that mony tymes I haue earniſtlie ſoliſted him to do his vttermeſt indeuores to mak your maieſties dewtie to arryſe, to the greateſt proffeit that poſſiblie could be, to the effect our ſeruice might be the more acceptabill to your maieſtie, whan it ſould bring with it your maieſties ſene advantage. And althogh I did anes perſuade him to fynne your maieſties pairt, with his awin, vpon his chairges, yet he left of and flatlie refuſit to do it, and without my privitie, wrait to his freindis at court, to purches right of your maieſties pairt, to the intent he might haue it in leaſe, and no vther man might haue the handling of any pairt of that vre bot him ſelf, in ſo far as he vttered great miſcontentment whan he vnderſtude be me, that I wald haue that ſmall portion whilk belonged to me, for the fie of my office, to be wroght be oure countrey peopill, to traine thame vp in the knowledge of handling that whairof he ſtudied ſo curiouſlie, not onlie to conceale the wourth, bot alſo to mak your maieſtie to want your dewtie. For my pairt, in reſpect of his confident and vnliklie ſpeaches, I will be loath to extenuat the wourth of that, whairof the greatnes were my great weill, bot will rather refer it to that exact tryell which your maieſtie ſall pleaſe preſcryve, nor to enter in fouliſh conteſtation with him, anent the certane valew of that myne, whilk nather of ws can trewlie declaire, bot I hope that it ſall proue, God willing, gude and proffitabill, whairin nather my travell nor ſtok ſall be vnbeſtowed for your maieſties commoditie and contentment. Swa humblie craiving your maieſties par-doun, for my forced langſumnes, to purge my ſelf of the vniuſt calumnies vttered aganis me in this mater, whairin I hope to do your maieſtie gude and acceptabill ſeruice, I beſeik God to bliſs your maieſtie with lang health, proſperitie and contentment. Binning, this 12 Sept. 1607.

Your Maieſties moſt humbill and faithfull
and bundin ſeruand,

Sr. Th. Hamilton.

To the Kingis moſt excellent Maieſtie.

XXV.—SIR THOMAS HAMILTON TO KING JAMES VI.

Please your most Sacred Maiestie,

Knowing that your maieſtie will expect and requyre of me ane diſchairge of my dewtie in performing your maieſties commandement geuin for perſewing the Lord Maxwell, and Sir James Makoneill, for thair treſonabill breaking wairde furth of your hienes caſtell of Edinburgh; becaus I haue hard that ſum, whois opinion may haue place, in ſum of the circumſtances of thair tryell, inclynes to iuge that vnles the crymes for the whilk thay wer impriſoned haue bene treaſonabill, that thair break of wairde can not import treaſoun, I haue beine the more ſoliſt to inquyre of thair vther offenſis, which may be found treaſonabill of the law, and albeit be examination and reexamination of Sir James Makoneill, I haue had ſmall aduantage, in reſpect of his reſolution to deny all the poyntis of his crymes, at the ſlauchter of his vncle, and taking of his parentis, whilkis might infer treaſoun, yet I hope that ſufficient information ſall verie ſhortlie cum of the trewth of his moſt heynous and vnnaturall factis, from thoſe to whom my lord Chancellar hes writtin to that effect. As to the Lord Maxuell, I haue hard of his raiſing of fyre at Dalfibbill, whan he ſlew Willie Johneſtoun, callit of Eſchieſcheillis, and ane vther Johneftoun; bot becaus he hes fenfyne had the honour to be admitted to your royall prefence, I wald not prefume to fummond him for that fact, whill firft I fould knaw your maiefties mynde thairanent, the knawledge whairof fall lead me to proceid or defift. The progres of the Commiffionars at the mynes I hope your maieftie hes hard from thamefelfis, and what I knew, I haue writtin to my lord of Dumbar, becaus I fand him moft defyrous to vnderftand the fucces of that whilk concernit your maiefties feruice and contentment. Swa attending moft humblie your maiefties farder pleafour for my direction, I pray God long to bliffe ws with the continouance of your moft gracious regne, and your maieftie with all honour and wiffed contentment. Edinburgh, this 28 Januar 1608.

Your moft facred Maiefties moft humbill and bundin feruand,

Sr. Th. Hamilton.

To the Kingis moft Sacred Maieftie.

XXVI.—SIR THOMAS HAMILTON TO KING JAMES VI.

Please your most Sacred Maiestie,

I haue reffaued your maiefties letter, declairing the direction fend be your hienes to Sir Johne Arnot, concerning my workis at the mynes of Hilderfton, and your hienes will, that I fould conforme my felf to the execution thairof. I hope that befyde the progres of my haill bypaft actions, euer tending to giue your maieftie moft euident pruif of fo humbill, faithfull and reddie mynde to ferue your maieftie, as might procure to me greateft hope of the continouance and increas of your royall fauour, the promptitude of my fo willing and hairtlie confent to your hienes Commiffionars, to wonne and tranfport fo great ane quantitie of my vre of fuche wourth as thay had chairge to dig, will perfuade your maieftie, that gif my head, or the heart within my breift, wer neceffar for your maieftie, I wald beftow or yeild thame to your hienes, or for your feruice, als reddelie, and with als litill regrait, as any fubiect leivand can do to his prince. And thairfore I moft humblie befeik your maieftie to beleive, that none fall be found fo bent as myfelf to fulfill your royall commandements, in difpofing upon any thing that is myne, for your contentment.

I dowt not your maieftie hes bene aduertifed, what hes bene thoght be the fubiectis heir of this intended alteration of the eftait of the mynes, whan I was abfent in England, vpon thair apprehenfion, that the tranfport of the vre furth of this cuntrey, to pairtis that ar not thoght more commodious for wourking of it, may fruftrat thame of the relief thairby expected, of the great fcaircitie of money, euerie day increffing in all the corners of this kingdome; and thairfore fearing leaft any new and vnaccuftomed courfe, vfed in this fubiect, might haue geuin occafion of greif or grudge, I haue willinglie offered to your maiefties Counfallouris, whom your maieftie hes chairged with this bufines, more effectual performance of your maiefties will, nor the direct fulfilling of your hienes letter, be the meanis thairin prefcryved could have effectuated; and yet efter fuche a maner as will cairie les fchew of noueltie nor the vther, as I hope thay will relait be thair letters. Whilk I moft humblie befeik your maieftie graciouflie to accept, according to the finceritie of my moft faithfull intention, and als conftantlie to retreave your maiefties wounted opinion of my great zeale eurie way to ferue and content your maieftie, as I am confirmit in my belief, that your maieftie will not onlie deale juftlie, bot moft royallie and bontifullie with me, who, be the prouidence of God, being maid the inftrument to difcouer to your maiefties honour and benefite, the greateft and moft excellent bliffing, whilk the bowels of the earth hes produced, for the reputation and greatnes of any monarche, thir many yeires bygane, I do moft confidentlie affure my felf, that your maiefties beneficence to me fall not onlie anfwer to the proportion of your preceiding liberalities, euer exceiding the merite of mens feruices, bot in this raire caice fall furpaffe your felf, who naturallie excellis all vther princes in that moſt royall vertew. I haue this day hard that the lairgenes and riches of the veyne arryſis eurie day more hopefull, whairof I thank God, and beſeik him to grant your maieſtie moſt happie incres of all honour, health and contentment. Edinburgh, this 29 Jan. 1608.

Your ſacred Maieſties moſt faithfull and moſt humbill ſeruand,

Sr. Th. Hamilton.

To the Kingis moſt ſacred Maieſtie.

XXVII.—SIR THOMAS HAMILTON TO KING JAMES VI.

Please your most Sacred Maiestie,

As I am commanded be your maieſties letter of the ellevint of this moneth, I ſall, God willing, repaire to your maieſtie, with all conuenient diligence, and bring with me the extract of the grant of the myne which your hienes requyres; and as it hes euer bene in all my preceiding journayes my greateſt contentment, confort, and deſyer, to ſie your maieſties moſt gracious face, ſo at this tyme haue I greateſt reaſoun to wiſh to my ſelf that happines, hoping, that whan it ſall pleaſe God and your maieſtie to grant me that gude occaſion, I ſall be habill, be declaration of the motives and maner of my proceiding in this mater of the mynes, (whilk to my infinit regrait and ſorrow I heir hes offendit your maieſtie) if not to iuſtifie my proceidingis, whilk I will neuir preſume to do, ſeing thay ar found vndewtifull in your maieſties moſt iuſte and excellent jugement, at leaſt to find that gudenes and fauour in your maieſties moſt gracious eyes, that my errour may be found ignorant and not willfull; for I proteſt to God, that or I had thoght, far les had wittinglie done, anything, that might have offendit your maieſtie, I had rather the earth had ſwallowed me quik. What my ſupplication to the Counſall dois proport, I will refer to the writ, becaus I heir that your maieſtie hes commanded it to be ſend to your hienes. Bot the cauſe that moued me to preſente it, wes the information I had, that Sir Bevis Bulmer, whois great malice aganes me, hes bene mony wayes manifeſted, wes dealing with ſum of my nightbours, to clame right to my landis and mynes for my vexation, and trauelling to perſuade his collegues to joyn with him in wryting to your maieſtie, and ſum nobilmen at court, to procure ane prohibition to me, to reenter to the poſſeſſion of the myne, efter thay had fulfilled thair commiſſion, and ſum warrand to him ſelf, or ane to his behoue, to enter to the poſſeſſion of theſe workes; who having pretended ane right to all the golde and ſiluer mynes of this kingdome, and thinking no man capabill of any ſmall pairt of that, whairof the haill wes litill aneuch to him ſelf, becaus he had no reaſon to poſſeſſe any thing thair to my knauledge, longer nor he had wonne the quantitie of vre expreſſed in the commiſſion, whilk I knew wes done before I offered my ſupplication to the Counſall, I ſuſpected not that any offence ſould thairby have enſewed, ſeing I had neuer hard that it wes your maieſties mynde, that I ſould any longer want the poſſeſſioun of the workis, nor thay had wonne the ten tunnes of vre: and vpon that occaſion having obteaned the Counſallis warrand, whan your maieſties letter came thairefter, commanding Sir Johne Arnot to tak poſſeſſion of the earth workis, it wes ſo reddelie and effectually obeyed, that evin than he diſplaced all my ſeruandis from the myne, cloſed and neidnailled the mouthes of all the ſchaftis, except ſic as were neceſſar for voyding the water from the myne, whilk he hes cauſit be done, be men fied and payed be him, who and no vthers daylie wourkis thairat: ſo that the onlie and full poſſeſſion is in his perſone, and I and all myne vtterlie ſecludit thairfra; and gif I had knowne that the preſence of any of myne that day, or any imaginarie ſchew of poſſeſſion, might have ſo offendit your maieſtie, as now I heir it dois, I ſould ſoner have offered to haue bene buried in the boddome of the work, nor to haue meanit to any poſſeſſion to your maieſties miſcontentment, whilk nather my bodie, mynde, nor fortune can ſuſteane, whilk all dependis vpon

your maiefties gracious fauour, and ar and euer fall be, fubmitted to your maiefties gude pleafour, as to the moft fauorabill and gracious juge I can have recourfe to in this earth, whair I fall pray God, long to preferue your maieftie in all wifhed honour, profperitie, and contentment. MOST SACRED SOUERANE, HAUEING preſentlie reſſaued this aduerteiſment, of the treaſonabill inſurrection of Odochartie, and burneing of Derry in Ireland, we haue thoght that the firſt pairt of oure dewtie wes to mak your maieſtie aduerteiſed with the greateſt ſpeid that could be. Oure information pairtlie dependis vpon the tenour of this letter of Rees Caytmor, whilk we haue ſend heirwith to your maieſtie, and pairtlie vpon the report of ane Scottiſman, Fred. Nellar in Derry, who being ane ey witnes of that deſolation, hes relaited to ws the particulars conteaned in the note ſent heirwith to your maieſtie. This tyme of vacance and bypaſt quyetnes, breiding in all mens hairts aſſured hope of ſecuritie, in all the pairtis of your maiefties dominions, hes moved the lords of your maiefties Counfall to retire thame felfs to thair awin houfes in the cuntrey, bot we ar prefentlie to difpatche meffingers for thame, and luking for the prefence of ane fufficient number, fall refolue, God willing, be thair advyce vpon fuche groundes as may beft tend to the weill of your maiefties feruice, and quyetnes of your gude fubiectis. We have not hard of any appeirance of Spaniartis or vther ftrengearis vefchellis at Arrane, or vpon any vther coaft of this kingdome. As we fall heir or refolue vpon any vther thing importing your maiefties eftait or feruice, we fall be cairefull to difchairge that dewtie, whilk oure places and your maiefties truft in ws dois requyre. So wifhing to your maieftie all happines and contentment, we humblie kifs your royall hands.

XXX.—THE LORDS OF PRIVY COUNCIL TO KING JAMES VI.

MOST SACRED SOUERANE,

THIS conuentioun of your maiefteis efteatis, (albeit not fa frequent in nomber as we expectit) held the 20 of this inftant, vnto whome the neceffitie of this expeditioun for the Yllis, and the preparatioun maid be your facred maieftie of fchipping and otherwayes for that feruice, being propouned and vrgeit, with all inftance and circumftanceis, whilkis myght further the eirand, the fame abaid a lang and fafheous difpute, ſome obiecting the pouirtie and preſent burdynnis of the cuntrey, and ſome, other impedimentis tending to the delay of the ſeruice. In end, thay reſolued that thay wald ſerue your maieſtie conforme to the proclamationis and lawis of the countrey, and altogether diſaſſentit fra ony contributioun or taxatioun for that ſeruice. Wherupoun, preſent directioun wes gevin to renew the proclamatioun, with deſignatioun of the ſame dayis and placeis of meiting contenit thairin. We haif lykewayes gevin directioun for arreiſting of the haill ſchippis on the coiſt ſyde of Fyffe, and otheris pairtis be north, to attend the tranſporte of your maieſteis forceis to the North Yllis, and for arreiſting of the ſchippis in the weſt to attend the tranſporte of the forceis to the South Yllis, and in euery vther thing whilk may further and advance this ſeruice, we ſall haif eſpeciall cair and regaird, and fra tyme to tyme ſall mak your maieſtie acquented with the progres of oure procedingis. Thair wes lykewayes ane motioun maid and vrgeit, anent the reſtrent of the ledder and hydis, wherin thair wes very greate objectioun maid, becaus that is in effect the onlie ſtaple wairis of this kingdome, priuilegeit be all your maieſteis predeceſſouris to be tranſported, and wherof your maieſteis cuſtomes hes great increſce, and after reſouning and conference vpon this mater, the eſteatis fand, that the derth of boottis and ſchone proceidis not vpoun ony difference and oidis that is betuix the preſent pryce of the hydis, and the pryceis whilkis thay gaif ſome tuentie or threttie yeiris ſyne, nor yitt vpoun occaſioun of exportatioun of the ſame, bot onlie from the policie of the tannaris and workearis thairof, and thair avaritious and godles doings, in hurte and preiudice of the cuntrey: for remeid wherof, it is inacted in this preſent conuentioun, that commiſſionis ſalbe exped to the magiſtratis of ilk burgh, and to ſome ſpeciall gentilmen to landwarte adioinit to thame, to tak tryale, twyſe euerie yeare, of the pryce of the rough hydis, and of the difference of pryceis betuix the rough and barkit hydis, and accordinglie to ſett doun pryceis vpoun the bootis and ſhone, with penalteis vpoun the contrauenaris; and wheras hald is tane be that eſtate, of ſome preiudice ſuſtenit be thame, by the tranſporting to this cuntrey of thair ledder, and maid bootis and ſchoone, the eſteatis findis, that the cuntrey hes no neceſſitie of ſuche wairis, nather is thair ony ſuche quantitie thairof broght heir as may rais or hight the pryceis. And yf it ſalbe your maieſteis pleaſour to caus examine your cuſtome bookis, we ar informed that it will prove, that thair hes not bene tua hundreth hydis broght heir frome that cuntrey in one yeir. And the eſteatis ar content, yf ſo your maieſtie think goode, that a reſtrent be maid of the ſame thair, the lyke being maid heir, for oure nolt and ſheepe.

Your maieſteis lettre of the xiij, anent the confynning of the marques of Huntley, the erllis of Angus and Errole, come to oure handis the 20 of this inſtant, aboute tua of the cloke in the aftir none, when we wer moſt buſy with the eſteatis, ſua that we had not the commoditie to gif ony directioun thairin that nyght. Alwayes we convenit this morning at ſevin of the cloke, and maid a preſent diſpatche of that mater, and the marques of Huntley, and erll of Angus, wer boith chargeit afoir nyne of the cloke, and ane officiar ſend to the erll of Errole. Thay haif neuir reſſauit onie libertie, nor relaxatioun frome thair warde, bot when ſome of the biſchoppis wer preſent, and gaif thair adviſe and conſent thairto, and that onlie for ſome few davis, vpoun neceſſair conſiderationis of thair adois; nather ſall thay haif ony ouerſight of ws heirefter, for the requeiſt of biſchop nor no vtheris, quhile your ſacred maieſtie ſignifie your awne will and pleaſour thair anent. This is the ſume of oure procedings at this meiting; and ſua with our humble and hairty prayeris, recommending your ſacred maieſtie, and your royall progenie to God, we reſt

XXXI.—THE LORDS OF PRIVY COUNCIL TO KING JAMES VI.

Most Sacred Souerane,

In refpect of the difficulteis quhilkis we fand at the laft conuentioun of your maiefteis efteatis, anent the profequutioun of your maiefteis feruice in the Yllis, by fuche meanis as we thoght to haue bene leaft grevous to the cuntrey, and moft expedient for the effectuating of the feruice, we, and fome otheris of your maiefteis Counfell, vpoun whome the burdyne of your heynes affairis doeth ly, hes fenfyne had fome privat meitingis amangis our felffs, for the furtherance and advancement of that eirand, and after diuers conferenceis and reafoning thairanent, and vpoun the poffibilliteis of the effectuating of that feruice to your maiefteis contentment and fatiffactioun, we according to the prefent neceffitie, find it expedient that the burdyne of that haill feruice, falbe layed vpoun fuche one perfone, as it fall pleis your facred maieftie to mak chofe of, who making his firft randevous at Yla, thair to attend your maiefteis fchipping and forceis, may frome that, coift the haill yllis, boith fouth and north: and becaus the conveining of the forceis of this kingdome, according to the proclamatioun, is very vncertane, and not liklie to affure your maiefteis feruice in that meafure, whilk apperteyneth, and we being laith that your maiefteis lieutennent, vpoun fa fclender a warrand, fould hafaird his awne credite, or the fortoun of your maiefteis feruice, we haue thairfoir ordanit a prefent levey to be maid, of fyve hundreth men vnder wageis for his gaird, vnto whome we haif appointit ten thoufand merkis for thair monethis pay and tranfporte, the payment whairof, for the firft moneth, is very freelie and willinglie vndertane be your maiefteis comptrollair and thefaurair depute, and for the fecund moneth, we fall mak fick prouifioun as goodlie may be. We hoip that the fynnes of the abfentis frome this feruice fall do that turne and moir, and we fall proceid aganis thame accordinglie. We haif ordanit the firft meiting to be at Ila, vpoun the firft of July nixt, and the meiting of the northland forceis to be at Trouternes vpoun the xxiiij of that moneth. It will pleis your ſacred maieſtie to caus directioun be gevin to the capitanes of your maieſteis ſchippis and ſouldiouris who ar to attend this ſeruice, that thay rander thame ſelfis obedyent to your maieſteis lieutennent, in euery thing quhilk to the dignitie of his charge apperteyneth, and with the nixt pacquett to latt ws know of your maieſteis choſe for this lieutennandrie. PLEASE YOUR MOST SACRED MAIESTIE,

BEING conuenit at command of your maieſteis lettre to conſidder of Margaret Hairtſydis conuictioun, and to returne oure opinioun to your maieſtie, how far we think her cryme puniſſable be law and iuſtice, we could not haif that affiſtance of oure lawers in this queſtioun which we wald haif wiſſed, becaus Oliphant, Ruſſell, King and Hope, who ar the moſt learned and beſt experienced of that profeſſioun, wer all of counſell to the defendar; and thairfoir, being the moir foliſt, boith to conſidder apairt, and to conſult togidder, vpoun the qualitie of the fact and eſtate of the proces, we haif cleirlie ſene, that the dittay being conſaued coniunctlie to infer thift aganis the pannell, for the fact libellit, which wes found relevant be the judge and aſſeſſouris, the defendar is found guyltie be the aſſyſe of the hail fact libellit, and onlie clengeit of the worde thift, wherin we think the aſſyſe hes verie far miſtakin thair dewitie, being bund in reſpect of the Juſtice interloquutor, finding the dittay relevant, ather to haif fund hir guyltie of the haill cryme, or innocent of the fact libellit; the laſt wherof thay could not do, in reſpect of hir confeſſioun ſubſcryvit with hir hand, and produceit iuditiallie befoir thame. And thairfoir we reſolue that thair conuictioun of hir, comprehendis ane extraordinair cryme, in ſubſtance, litill or no thing different frome thift, bot becaus thay haue clengeit hir of that qualitie, we can not think that be law ony ſik ſentence can be gevin aganis hir, as may bereaue hir of hir lyffe, or ony member, or of hir haill goodis and geir. Most Gratious Souerane,

We reſſaued your maieſteis letter concerning Robert Menteith and the reſt of your maieſteis diſtreſſit ſubiectis in Orknay, wherin your ſacred maieſtie ſeames to blayme ws for refuſeing vnto thame the ordinair courſe of iuſtice, eſpeciallie ane commiſſioun aganis the Erll of Orknay, wherby thay haif bene forceit to repair to your heynes to complene. Far be it frome ws to prove ſo vnworthy of the place and charge whiche your ſacred maieſtie hes concredite vnto ws, as to refuſe iuſtice to ony of your maieſteis diſtreſſit ſubiectis, of whoſe afflictionis and calamiteis, as we are bundin in conſcience befoir God, and in dewytie and allegeance to your ſacred maieſtie, to haif a ſpeciall cair and regaird, and to execute that pouer and auc[tori]tie wherwith your maieſtie hes armed ws, without ony privat reſpect or conſideratioun. So thir complenaris can not with reſoun burdyne ws with the omiſſioun of ony point of oure dewytie towardis thame, ſeing in the haill courſe and progres of thair actionis, alſwele befoir your maieſties Counſell as Seſſioun, thay reſſaue very fauourable and ſummar juſtice. It is of treuth that thay ar verie havelie diſtreſſit, and when thay haif gottin decreitis and ſentenceis, it faillis in the executioun. Your maieſtie knowis that we haif no forceis to ſend to Orknay, to mak the ſaid erll conformable, bot your maieſteis awne gairdis, who, in reſpect of your heynes awne ſeruice, may not be weill ſpairit. The pairtyis indeid hes ſoght commiſſionis to thame ſelffis, in very ample forme, aganis the ſaid erll, bot becaus ſuche commiſſionis, in the forme and nature as thay crave, ar not vſuall to be grantit, bot in criminall cauſes, and vpoun criminal hoirningis, we haif bene very ſpairing to grant the ſame, and we haif ſome preſumptionis moveis ws to feir the event of the executioun of the ſame, in the forme and natur as it is conſavit. Most Gratious Souerane,

Your maiesteis two lettres, the ane concerning the complaint of the baronis of Lotheane aganis the burgh of Edinburgh, twiching some new novatioun allegeit begvn be that burgh to the preiudice of thair nyghtbouris, vnder cullour of thair lait infeftment grantit be your maiestie to thame, and the other concerning the diffobedyence of the burgh of Hadingtoun, to that your maiesteis princelie directioun, anent the electioun of thair proueſt, wer preſented to ws, being convenit in counſell vpoun the aucht of this inſtant: And wheras your ſacred maieſtie ſeamis to blame ws for not taking notice, and informeing your maieſtie of that complaynt aganis Edinburgh, in the haill pointis and circumſtanceis of the ſame, conforme to your heynes formair directioun ſend to ws thairanent, it will pleas your ſacred maieſtie to knowe that thair nevir wes a complaynt, be worde nor wryte, exhibited vnto ws in that mater, ſen the 1604 yeare of God, at whiche tyme, the mater then in queſtioun reſſauit deciſioun to the full contentment of the ſaidis baronis, and ſenſyne we haif not hard of ony queſtioun or miſcontentment betwix thame for that caus. And yf ony ſuche complaint ſalbe proponed vnto ws, we ſall not onlie examine the ſame moſt exactlie, and certifie your heynes particularlie thairof, bot we ſall ſa fer proceid thairin, as in law, equitie and iuſtice becometh ws; and in the meantyme we haif gevin directioun to the Clerk of Regiſter to extract thair infeftment, whiche we ſall ſend to your maieſtie with the nixt pacquett, and we haif heirwith ſend to Sir Alexander Hay, your heynes Secretarye, oure decreit and ſentence gevin in the ſame mater, in the ſaid 1604 yeare of God, to be conſiderit be your maieſtie.

Your maieſteis other directioun concerning Hadingtoun is diſpatcheit, and we ſall ſee obedyence gevin accordinglie. The Marques of Huntley and Erll of Errole haif boith enterit in thair wardis within the tyme pre-

MOST GRATIOUS AND SACRED SOUERANE,

WE reſſaued your maieſteis lettre of the xxi of Nouember, and hes hard at grite lenth, the relation maid by the reuerend fader in God, and your maieſteis truſtye counſellour, the Archebiſchop of Glaſgow, anent the confeſſioun, and hole circumſtanceis, of that long obſcured and moſt haynous and inexcuſable offence committit be the Lord of Balmerinoch aganis your credite, honour and reputatioun, quhairin as ſenſible and feeling memberis of ſo glorious and gratious a head, finding oure awne inter-

eſſe, greif and ſorrow, that your maieſteis moſt famous and vnſpot[te]d name, honnour and credite (whiche your heynes to this houre hes ſo religiouſlie conſervit in all puritie), fould haue bene ſo vnworthelie, and in ſo heich a point broght in queſtioun by ony of our nomber, who hes that honnour to be ſelected be your maieſtie to the cheif credite of your ſeruice heir. So, with moſt joyfull, humble and thankfull hairtis to God, we acknowledge that grite bliſſing and benefeit, whiche it hes pleaſit his divine maieſtie to ſhowe vnto your heynes, by the detecting and diſcouerie of that purpois, and vindicating the ſinceritie and innocencie of your royall hairt, frome all ſuſpitioun of the wrangous and vniuſt imputationis, whilkis your heynes vndirlay thairin, manifeſting thairby, his divyne cair and prouidence, whiche he hes evir had over your ſacred perſone, honnour and eſtate, and in what deteſtatioun he holdeth all practizeis and purpoiſs preiuditiall thairvnto. And wheras in the cenſuring of this fact befoir your maieſteis honourable preuy Counſaill of that kingdome, thay (be your maieſteis directioun we doubt not) haue remittit the full tryall thairof to the lawis and formis of this cuntrey, with mony demonſtrationis and oppin ſpeecheis, twiching the goode opinioun thay haif of the equitie of our lawis, and ſinceritie of oure affectionis, in all your maieſteis ſeruiceis, we haif not onlie infinite occaſioun, with all humilitie, firſt to thank your ſacred maieſtie, and nixt thame, for ſo reſpectiue a reſeruatioun to ws of that whiche your maieſtie knowis to be dew to the priuilege and freedome of this your antient and nobill crowne, bot we hoip, God willing, to gif vnto your maieſtie a prooffe, that with all fidelitie, cair and ſinceritie, we ſall proſequute and follow oute whateuir it ſall pleas your ſacred maieſtie in your princelie wiſdome to command, alſweele in this as in ony vther thing els, twicheing your heynes in honnour and eſtate. Most Gratious and Sacred Souerane,

We reſſaued your maieſteis proclamatioun anent the reſtrent of tranſporting of tymmer, and having red and at grite lenth conſiderit the ſame, we can not bot rander vnto your heynes oure moſt humble thankis for that gratious and confortable rememberance and cair whiche your maieſtie doeth ſtill hald over this eſtate, that althoght your heynes be abſent in perſone, yitt by your lyvelie and holeſome directionis in euerie thing whiche may importe the goode of this commounweele, your maieſtie is ever prefent. And wheras the experience of the vndoubtit reafoun, of all your maiefteis directionis myght haue moved ws, without ony forder fcruple, to haif exped and publift this proclamatioun in the tenor as it is confavit, yit we haif prefomed to continew the fame fome fchorte fpace, and in all reuerence, to prefent vnto your heynes oure fimple and waik opinioun thairanent, whiche we alwayes fubmitt to your maiefteis moir rair and excellent iudgement. It is notour, and we doubt not, bot your maieftie vnderftandis fufficientlie, that in no tyme bigane within the memorie of man, thair hes bene ony tymmer tranfported furth of this kingdome, the haill cuntrey being almoft naiked, and mony years ago fpoylled of all the tymmer within the fame, fo that now thair is no fuche quantitie thairin, as may ferve the hundreth pairt of the neceffair vfois of the fame, wherby your maiefteis fubiectis hes bene conftrayned, vnder the fauour and toleratioun of other princes, to mak thair prouifion and furniffing of tymmer, and frome foreyne pairtis, to fupplee this defect and want of thair awne cuntrey. And now, yff vnneceffarlie and without ground, caus, or neceffitie, fuche a generall reftrent falbe maid in this kingdome, it is verye probable and liklie that other princes, vpoun notice thairof, fall mak the lyke reftrent in thair boundis, and fua altogidder fpoyle your maiefteis fubiectis of that fo neceffair a benefeit whiche goodlie thay can not want. And thairfoir (with your maiefteis correctioun), we think meete that this generall reftrent fall onlie be aftrictit to fuche particulair wodis as your maieftie intendis to mak vfe of, for your awne fchipping, and vtheris your neceffair adois, and that the proclamatioun mak fpetiall mentioun thairof, wherby we are of opinioun, that it fall euerie wher reffaue a fauourable conftructioun, and that no holde falbe tane thairvpoun, be ony foreyne prince, to mak a generall reftrent within thair boundis, to the preiudice of this cuntrey. And as to the other parte of that proclamatioun, tuiching the prohibitioun of making of irne mylnis in ony woddis or forreftis, or deftroying the tymmer thairof, vpoun the workeing of irne, it is thoght that the preparative thairof may carye fome preiudice to your maiefteis fubiectis, who, by the lawis and cuftome of this kingdome, ar free to mak vfe of thair awne commoditeis within the cuntrey, to thair beft advantage ; and as we vndirftand, thair is not ane irne mylne within this cuntrey, and the litle quantitie of irne that is maid heir, is only wroght with ſcroggis, boughis, and brancheis, and auld ſtokis and cuttingis of tymmer, which can ſerve for no other vſe, and thairfoir yff it may ſtand with your heynes pleaſour, we will entreate your maieſtie to ſuffer that article to reſt till this approcheing conuentioun of the eſteatis, that then (ſeing it is a commoun actioun, wherin euery man pretendeth entres), it may be reaſouned, diſputed, and reſſaue auctoritie accordinglie. Bot in this, and euerie other thing els, ſubmitting our ſelffis to your maieſteis princelie cenſure, and humelie craving pardoun of your heynes, for oure preſumptioun to continew that whiche in your excellent wiſdome, you haif directit to be done, we end with oure hairtie prayeris to God, for the preſeruatioun of your maieſtie, and all your royall progenye, in helth and felicitie. XLII.—THE LORDS OF PRIVY COUNCIL TO KING JAMES VI.

Most Gratious and Sacred Souerane,

This conuentioun of your maieſteis eſteatis, whiche your heynes, oute of your moſt gratious and religious diſpoſitioun, towards the advancement of the trew antient apoſtolik faith, preſentlie profeſſit in this kingdome, and for ſuppreſſing the aduerſaries thairof, did appoint to be haldin at this tyme, wes moſt ſolemnelie keipit, be the nobilmen and vtheris, ſelectit be your maieſtie for that purpois, few or none of the haill being abſent, vnto whome thoſe grave, wyſe and godlie overtouris and propoſitionis ſend doune be your maieſtie, alſweele for kirk as policie, being at grite lenth proponed and oppynnit vp, we cannot conceale frome your heynes the exceiding grite joy and glaidnes whiche that haill meiting apprehendit vpoun the conſideratioun of ſo lyvelie taikynis and argumentis of the tender cair and faderlie affectioun, wherwith your maieſtie doeth ſtill affect thame, whairin thay and we do acknowledge oure ſelffis infinitlie bundin to the goodnes of oure God, who, in his grite mercye, hes grantit vnto ws ſo gratious, religious and confortable a king, vnder whoſe bliſſit and happy gouernment we haif ſo grite peace in our kirk, and ſo grite tranquillitie in oure privat eſteatis, that althoght your maieſtie be abſent in perſone, yitt the confortable effectis of your royall preſence, by your royall and holeſome directionis, doeth ever accompany ws; for the whiche, with all dew reuerence, in name of the haill eſteatis (who, with mony proteſtationis, offerit thame ſelffis reddy with thair haill power and freindſchip to hald hand to the furtherance and executioun of all your maieſteis princelie directionis) we rander vnto your heynes our moſt humble thankis. All thoſe directionis and propoſitionis, bothe for kirk and policie, wer moſt vnanimelie imbraceit, and accordinglie inacted. Onlie that anent the reviſſing, whiche your maieſtie hes ſo gravelie and wyſelie ſett doun in ſeuerall brancheis and headis, hes reſſauit a delay till this approcheing parliament, becaus the panes and pvniſhement, anſuerable to the qualitie of thoſe ſeuerall brancheis and headis, could not, in reſpect of the ſchortnes of tyme, reſſaue a preſent determinatioun. Alwayes commiſſioun is gevin to certane for euery eſtate, to meete and reaſoun vpoun that mater, and to repoirt thair opinioun to the parliament, wherin we ar of opinioun that the ordour ſo wyſelie preſeryved be your maieſtie, ſalbe the ſquair and reule of thair doingis. Off all that wes paſt and enacted at this meiting we haif ſend the copyis to Sir Alexander Hay, your maieſteis Secre-

tarie, to be ſhawne to your heynes: And ſua ending with our humble and hairty prayeris to God for the preſeruatioun of your ſacred maieſtie, and your royall progenye in all happines and felicitie, we reſt for ever

XLIII.—SIR THOMAS HAMILTON TO KING JAMES VI.

Please your most Sacred Maiestie,

Haveing reſſaued from the Erle of Dumbar, the Lord Balmerinoes confeſſion of his moſt heynous offenſis, committed aganis your maieſtie, togidder with your maieſties two letters conteaning ſum materiall poyntis of his cairiage, in the practeiſing of that miſcheivous pourpoſe, not conteaned in his confeſſion, I have according to the iuſte and wyſe direction of your princelie letters, formed his dittay heirwith, to be preſented to your maieſtie, to the effect that theſe treaſonabill crymes, which offered ſo dangerous woundis to your immaculat fame and royall honour, being conſidered be your moſt excellent jugement, that which is imperfyte in my frame of this dittay, may be amended by your maieſties moſt iudicious cenſure. I haue alſo reſſaued from my Lord Dumbar, the reſolutions of the graue and learned ciuilians, preſented to your maieſtie concerning this ſame fact, whairin thay haue expreſſed thair ſufficiencie in thair profeſſion and faithfull affection to your maieſties ſeruice, bot being vnacquented with the grounds and courſe of oure criminall iuſtice heir, have leaned to ſum warrandis, whairvpon I dar not weill relye, becaus I foreſie, that I am to perſew ane man more ſkilfull to pleade his lyfe, nor any that wes broght to the bar in this your maieſties kingdome thir hundreth yeiris bygane, and who may expect ſuche aſſiſtance of the beſt of oure lawers, as many vthers offendours moſt guiltie of hieſt crymes hes fund heirtofore; and albeit, I think that the ſentence gevin aganis him, be his owne conſcience, and the vndeniabill treuth of the cryme confirmed be his owne confeſſion, ſould tak from him all deſyre of contradiction, and hope of any gude by his defence, yet knowing it to be my dewtie, to be reddie for the worſt, which he or his aſſiſtants can be abill to intend, I ſall be cairefull ſo to prepaire all thinges neceſſar for that perſute, as your maieſtie, with Goddis grace, ſall haue full ſatiſfaction by the performance of your royall commandement, in the verie forme and ſubſtance whilk your maieſtie hes preſcryved, gif the Judges do that dewtie, whilk in reaſon and iuſtice thay owe, and I dowt not will faithfullie performe to your maieſtie, ſpeciallie ſeing my Lord of Dumbar is to be ane ey witnes of thair proceidingis, whois caire hes bene ſuche, in directing the firſt pairt of the proces, which lyes to my chairge, and exacting accompt of my diligence thairin, that vſeing the lyke with the reſt of the members of that iugement, as I am aſſured he will, thay will neither get leiſour nor leive to neglect or ouerſie thair dewtie. In my chairge his inſtance ſall be bot ſpurris to ane faſt running hors, yet I can not deny that his jugement hes availled to remark and reforme dyuers thinges to the better. So wiſhing to your maieſtie in this and all vther, your royall diſſeins, moſt honorabill and happie ſucces, and to my ſelf your maieſties gracious acceptance of the weak indeuours of ane moſt faithfull hairt, and affection in your maieſties ſeruice, I commit your moſt excellent maieſtie to Godds bliſſed protection. Edinburgh, this 9 Febr. 1609.

Your moſt ſacred Maieſties moſt faithfull and moſt bunden ſeruant,

Sr. Th. Hamilton.

To the Kingis moſt excellent Maieſtie.

XLIV.—SIR THOMAS HAMILTON TO KING JAMES VI.

Please your most Sacred Maiestie,

Acknouledgeing my ſelf bund in dewtie to rander accompt to your maieſtie of the ſeruices properlie belonging and committed to my chairge, I haue tane the bouldnes to wryte of oure progres in the forfaultours intented aganis the Lord Maxwell, and the memorie of Reſtalrig before the Lordis of Articles. Oure firſt proceiding wes aganis the Lord Maxwell, whairin albeit thair wes no compeirance for the defendar, yet ſum of the Lordis of Articles kything more ſcrupulous and preciſe in ſindrie poyntis of that proces, nor we did foreſie or ſuſpect, and heiring thairefter, that ſindrie of that number had preconſaued hard opinions of Reſtalrigs proces, the knouledge thairof, whilk wroght feir and miſtruſt in the myndes of dyuers your maieſties weill affected ſeruandis, did breid in the Erle of Dumbar ſuche caire and feruencie, to remoue theſe impedimentis, that bending his wittis in more paſſionat maner, nor he vſis to expres in common and indifferent maters, he did trauell ſo earniſtlie with the nobilmen and haill remanent Lordis of Articles, and ſolicited ſum of the moſt learned and beſt experimented of your maieſties Counſall to furneis reaſons and light, to the cleiring of the probation of that moſt hay-nous treafoun, and gaue to my felf fo earnift chairge and furneiffed fo pregnant, judicious, and cleir groundis, to confirme the fummondis, and manifefte the viue circumftances thairof to the worlde, that he left no trauell to me, bot the repetition of the fubftance of his information; to the whilk haveing fo neirlie conformed my difcourfe as poffiblie I could, it pleafed God, that the Lordis of Articles being happelie prepared be the depofitions of dyuers honeft men of the miniftrie, and vther famous witneffis, who recognofcing vmquhill Reftalrigs handwrit in his treafonabill miffiues produced be me, with verie fenfibill and forcibill reafons and caufes, of thair conftant and confident affirmation, that thefe miffiues wer writtin be him. Whan the probation of the fummondis wes referred to the Lordis votes, thay fand uniformallie, all in ane voce, the faid fummondis to be fo cleirlie provin, that thay feimed to contend who fould be abill moft zealouflie to expres the fatiffaction of his hairt, not onlie be moft pithie wourdis, bot be tearis of joy, dyuers of the beft rank confeffing that that whairof thay dowted at thair entrie in the howfe, wes now fo manifeft that thay behoued to efteme thame traitours, who fould any longer refufe to declaire thair affured refolution of the treuth of that treafoun. Sua hoping your maieftie will graciouflie pardoun my boldnes in offering to your maieftie, this rude relation of thir pourpofes, concerning my chairge in your maiefties feruice, I befeik God, who hes fo merciffullie preferued your maieftie from the horribill devyffes of your develifh ennemies, and fo miracouluflie detected thair hellifh practifes, long to protect and preferue your maieftie from all hairmes and dangers, and to grant to your maieftie all happines and contentment. Edinburgh, this 21 Junij 1609.

Your moft facred Maiefties moft bundin
and faithfull feruant,

Sr. Th. Hamilton.

To the Kingis moft excellent Maieftie.

XLV.—THE LORDS OF PRIVY COUNCIL TO KING JAMES VI.

Most Gratious Souerane,

The Lord of Scone, your maiesteis lait Comptrollair, compeiring this day befoir ws, complenit of ane havye sclander and imputatioun whiche he vndirlyis, by a repoirt maid to your sacred maiestie, that he, in the tyme of his comptrollarie, vpoun some privat conditioun and pactioun, betwix him and the customary, had defraudit your maiestie yeirlie of the soume of v. m. merkis, wherof he humelie craved that he myght be tryed. We having hard him in this mater, convenit befoir ws, some speciallis of the customaris, and straitlie examinat thame, vpoun the treuth of that conditioun past betuix the Lord of Scone and thame, who vpoun thair grite oathis declairit, that quhen thay maid sute for the last tak of the customes, thay delt and trauellit with the Lord of Scone to be thair freind, and offerit vnto him ane thowsand crownes yeirlie to purchase vnto thame ane new tak for payment of the auld dewtie, and that he by thair knowlege or consent, eiked this thowsand crownes whiche thay had destinat vnto him selff, vnto the dewytie of your maiesties tak, and that thair wes no other promeis, bargane nor conditioun betwix thame, the tyme of thair purchessing of the said tak, and that some sax oulkis thairefter, thay, for encourageing of him to be thair freind, and to stand be thame, in cais thair tak wer quarrellit, offerit vnto him to mak him a partyner with him in thair advantage, and that thay aggreit amangis thame selffis to gif him three portionis, and that his pairt of the advantage, with allowance of three portionis, extendit yeirly to v. m. merkis or thairaboute, whiche soume thay affermed that thay had payed, pourpoiflie to caus thair new vndirtakairs pay the same vnto your maiestie. This is all that we haif tryed in this mater, whiche we remitt vnto your maiesties princelie cen-

Trusty and welbeloued Counſellour wee greete yow well. This action depending before our College of Juſtice betwix the Lord Herice and our ſeruantes, Sir Robert Douglas and James Maxwell, (whereof yow are not ignorant), wee haue thought good to recomende to your ſpeciall furtherance, for, ſeeing the one of our ſaid ſeruantes is preſently employed in our ſeruice beyonde the ſeas, and the other (though hardly to be ſpared from his perſonall attendaunce vpon our ſeruice heir) hath for a ſmall time begged our licence to proſequute that buſynes there, we do require yow (as your office of it ſelfe doth binde yow), to employ the beſt of your meanes to cauſe that matter to be brought to the deſired point in the behalfe of our ſaid ſeruantes, for wee ſee no reaſon why the Lord Herice ſhoulde haue the benefite of that, which his parentes and predeceſſors haue diuers times in a maner diſclamed, in not acknowledging the ſame to be theirs, refuſing to be anſwerable for the ſame. MOST GRATIOUS AND SACRED SOUERANE,

HAVEING reſſaued commandment frome your ſacred maieſtie, to tak tryall and cognitioun of the neceſſitie of the vpholding of the harborie of your maieſteis burgh of Air, the harme that may enſew by decay thairof, the benefeit that this eſtate may reſſave by the finiſheing of that worke, and of the meanes and poſſibillitie of the burgh it ſelff to accompliſhe the ſame, and to adverteis your maieſtie particularlie thairof with oure adviſe what is fitteſt thairin. As with all dew reuerence we acknowledge your maieſteis moſt admirable cair, and faderlie regaird, towardis the preſeruatioun and vpholding of everye waik and diſtreſſit member of this commounweele, whairof your facred maieftie hes gevin fo mony notable prooffis and lyvelie experienceis to the ineftimable conforte and reiofing of all your maiefteis goode fubiectis, and to the reviueing of fome particulair memberis of this body, whilkis being at the point of vtter ruyne and decay, and vnable of thame felffis outher to reftoir thair awne eftate, or to concur with the reft of the body in the publict affairis of the commounweele, bot as dead and rottin memberis being almoft fallin frome the body, haif yitt bene, by your maiefties princelie fauour, bontie, and liberalitie, reftoirit to thair formair ftrenth and bewtye, and ar now (to your maiefteis immortaill praife and commendatioun) in vigour and ftrenth to difcharge thair awne dewteis accordinglie. So for difcharge of that commiffioun concredited be your facred maieftie vnto ws, we convenit and mett vpoun that mater, and after the moft exact tryale and informatioun whiche we could haif thairin, we do find that this intendit worke of the reparatioun of the faid harborie is moft neceffair and expedyent for the honnour, credite, and benefeit of the whole cuntrey; the place it felff being the onlie fey poirt vpoun that haill coaft whair the refett and difpatche of goodis is moft ordinair and frequent, and quhair the trade of navigatioun is alwayes in practife; and for nomber of goode fchippis, and fkilfull and able marinaris, it is the beft in this your maiefteis kingdome, Leyth and Dundee onlie except. And befydis the commodioufnes of the place, the nomber of fchipping and marynaris, and the frequent importatioun and exportatioun of commodityis at that poirt, it lyis oppin to Irland, within twelff houris failling to the north pairtis thairoff, whair the feid of all the rebellioun of that kingdome tooke roote, vnto the whilkis pairtis your maieftie, at euerey occafioun, may haif the commoditie of tranfportatioun whatever your maieftie fall think goode. And yf this intendit worke be not finifhed, thair wilbe no commodious nor faulff refett for fchipping thair; and, in fchorte tyme, the haill fchipping of that towne, whiche wald ferve for a bulwarke to that haill coaft in cais of foreyne troublis, will decay, and confequentlie the towne whiche is fo ancient, and, for civilitie, bewtye, buildingis, and goode gouernament, may be rekynned amangis the beft and worthieft of this kingdome, will come to noght, whairby the haill trade of the weft cuntrey, whiche wes intertenyed be the ſchipping of Air, will ceis, to the impoveriſheing of that nvke of your maieſties kingdome; wheras yf this worke be haldin hand to, and perfytit, that towne will daylie flooriſhe in ſchipping, trafficque, policye, and ſtrenth; and your maieſtie may reſt aſſured, at euerie intervening occaſioun of your maieſties ſeruice, to be furniſt with a nomber of goode ſchippis and able fellowis frome that poirt. And tuicheing the poſſibillitie of the towne to finiſhe the worke, we find no kind of lykliehoode nor appeirance that be thame the worke can be finiſheit, the ſamin haveing alreddy coiſt thame, be oulklie collectioun and contributioun of the inhabitantis, aboue tuelff thowſand merkis, whiche is ſo grevous vnto thame, that, in reſpect of the grite loſs thay ſuſtenit the tyme of Godis viſitatioun of that burgh with the peſt, thay ar not able longer to vndirgo that burdyne, thair commoun goode not exceiding 1m. lib. Scottis be yeare, whiche is not ſufficient to vpholde thair churche, bridge, hoſpitall, and vtheris the commoun workis of thair towne. LIII.—THE LORDS OF PRIVY COUNCIL TO KING JAMES VI.

Pleas your most Excellent and Sacred Maiestie,

As we hope that your highnes hathe long ſince vnderſtood of ſum challenge of combat, betwix the ſecund ſone of the Lord Cranſtoun, and Sir Gedeon Murray his ſone, begun betwix the yowthes vpon licht cawſs of verie ſmall moment, and of the ordour takin by ws for preventing thair meiting, and calling of thame to there anſwer, and of the cowrs takin for there reconciliatioun, whiche wes done in preſence of the hole counſell, wheirby all probabilitie of forder challengeing betwix the pairteis then in appeirance wes removed. So, when vpon privie informatioun maid to ws ſum fear wes apprehendit of a new breache betwix the pairteis, by interchangeing of cartellis privilye betwix thame ſelfis, whowever we wald haue bene ſorye that the folyes of the childrene, or the hard event whiche follow ſuche accidentis, ſuld haue empaired or diminiſched the love and affectioun, which heirtofoir haith bene and doeth ſtill continew betwix there parentis, (bothe of quhome haith worthelie deſerved and haue behaved thame ſelfis moſt dewtifullie and faythfullie, as thay haue bene imployed in your maieſties ſeruice), yit heirin we war ſo muche more juſtlie moued to adverte to ſuche a noveltye, that efter a reconciliatioun ones maid befoir your maieſties counſell, ather the keiping of your highnes peace ſuld be ſo lytle regairdit, or the ordour takin by ws for the obſerveing theirof ſo far contemned, as that any durſt preſume or attempt any new quarrelling, wheirvpon bothe the fathers wer chairged to compeir and to bring with thame and exhibite there ſonnes: whiche being accordinglie and dewtifullye obeyit by bothe of thame, efter a verye hard and exact tryall takin, in regaird of the vnwillingnes of ather of the yowthes, vpon thair firſt queſtioneing, to confeſs what new maiter haid paſſed betwix thame; at laſt, it being found that the Lord Cranſtouns ſone wes the challenger, by a cartell wrettin efter the reconciliatioun maid, we theirvpon committed him cloiſe priſoner in the caſtle of Blaknes. The other whowevir being provoked, yet in regaird he did obſcuire and conceale it (being ſome preſumtioun that he intendit to keip the meiting and ſo to mak a breache of your maieſties peace), wes adiudgit to be committed in Edinburgh Caſtell in frie wairde, haveing haid friedome granted vnto him furth theirof within xlviii houres, and confyned within this burghe and a myle abowt the ſame; whereas the ſaid Lord Cranſtouns ſone, thir fourtene dayes paſt, haueing lyin cloiſe priſoner in Blaknes, and in the mean whyle making ſuite often by bill to be releived, confeſſing in moſt humble maner his offence, and offering all ſatiſfactioun that ſuld be injoyned be ws, wes by directioun brocht frome the place of his impriſonment, by the lievtennent of your maieſties gaird, and preſented befoir ws, where in the preſence of Sir Gedeon Murray and his ſone, he did humblye, vpon his knies, craive pardon of your maieſtie for the offence done, and did intreat ws to be ſuitters for the ſame to your ſacred highnes on his behalf, haveing heirwith confeſſed alſo the great wrong he haid done vnto your maieſties counſell, in preſwming to renew any challenge efter reconciliatioun ones maid, and therewith vttering moſt apparent ſignes of inward ſorrow, for offending of his ſo loveing father, vnto whome he knew this his bypaſt behauiour wes ſo diſtaiſtefull as without our interceſſioun he could expeict at his handis no favour. He then to the pairtie challenged, in preſence of both fathers, did there confeſs the wrong he haid done him, offering him what ſatiſfactioun he wald demand, and did there proteſt, that howevir in his yowthfull follye he haid aſcryved the laſt reconciliatioun, as a maiter extorted by conſtraint or command of the counſell, that yit nottheles this his preſent agriement wes of meire affectioun, whiche he intendit, al bypaſt eyliſtis aboliſhed, to continew heirefter.

There wes ſum jealowſye in this maiter takin by Sir Gedeon, as that the Lord Cranſtoun, whowevir not a direct vrger of his ſone to this challenge, haid nottheles intendit to tak ſome advantage to the preiudice of the credite and honor of him and his ſone; and by the ſpeiches delyvered by Sir Gedeon in our preſence, we did conceave no leſs, bot yit that this impreſſioun not being clearit might tak no deiper roote. We then did queſtioun the Lord Cranſtoun theirof, who, in preſence of Sir Gedeon by his great oathe vnrequyred, did proteſt, that he wes ſo far from counte-naunceing or allowing of his fones actioun and cariage in this bufynes, as on the contrarye thefe fevin yeiris paft, no incident whatfoever that haid interveyned, haid fo muche greivit him, and that he did affuire him felf, that Sir Gedeon wes no les in confcience perfwadit, fince he haid foirwairned him immediatlie vpon his knowledge of the firft challenge, and vpon his fones depairture the laft time frome him, fufpecting the humor of the yowthe, and yit vpon his confcience not knowing of any thing intendit, did of new certifie Sir Gedeon of his fearis, whiche declaratioun being delyvered withe fo great atteftationes, by one not muche accuftvmed to fwairing, did not onlye remove all feruple and jealoufye frome Sir Gedeon as he then affirmed, bot left none of the beholders vnfatiffied, and fullie perfwadit of that noblemanis innocencye. The counfell haveing takin ane verye ftrict and exact tryall of all circumftances, whiche might infere any the leaft fufpitioun of the Lord Cranftoun's allowance, airte, pairte, or connivance at his fonnes actioun, in the examineing wherof, the furder that we did dyue, we ftill fand the father the more cleare of all imputatioun, and in our iudgement Sir Gedeon is fullye perfwadit thairof, lyk as in our prefence he did profefs no lefs. And howevir that heirvpon all pairteis, both eldar and younger, wer reconceiled, yit becawfe of the offence done to your maieftie by James Craunfton, in preffing to renew any quarrell efter aggriement ones maid in prefence of counfell, we have theirvpon adiudgeit the faid James Cranftoun, that betwix and the firft of October nixt, he fall depairt your maiefties dominiones, and remaine furthe of the fame, and noway returne bak, vntill that your maiefties fpeciall licence and warrant be purcheft, and haue takin fowertye and cawtioun vnder a great fowme for that effect. And becaws there wilbe a neceffitye of provifioun to be maid by the father, for the fones furneifing in his going beyond fea, theirfore we have committed him prifoner in his fathers owin keiping, vntill the tyme of his depairture, who is to reftraine, enduring that fpace, of his fon all fuche libertye wheirbye anye furder harme might be feared. And albeit the reconciliatioun and agriement wes fullye maid, fo as in our iudgementis there did not remayne the leaft ferupule of any furder grudge amonges the pairties, yit the noueltye of the caice, and the hairme whiche the impunitye theirof, might produce, if vpon this example, others who haif bene formerlye reconceiled, wald now prefs to renew and reviue there olde querrellis, we culd not in our dewtye to your maieftie fuffer this to go vnpunifhed, whiche moued ws (howevir earneftlie and humblye entreated by Sir Gedeon Murray to recall our fentence and determinatioun againes the faid James Craunftoun), nottheles for ane exemplarye punifhment and effraying of others to commit the lyk infolence, to continew our refolutioun takin in that maiter for his banifheing as faid is: as lykwayes ather of the two fathers ar bund and obleift, not onlye for thefe there fones, betwix whome this challenge hes paft, bot for all others there fones come to mannis aige, everie ane of thame vnder the payne of ten thoufand merkis, that they ftill keip your maiefties peace, that no cartellis falbe fent by the one to the other, and that the pairtye vnto whome any falbe fent, fall immediatlie withe all poffible diligence, acquent the counfell, with the challenge fent to him, otherwayes the payne foirfaid to be incurrit. And hoiping that nothing heirin is left vndone, whiche in fic a caice wes requifite, and fullye expecting your maiefties good allowance and favourable conftructioun of our proceidingis, wifheing thay may proue good metall when thay come to the tryall of the trew tuitcheftone, vnto whome we do moft humblye pray for the continuance of all happines, we doe reft

Please your Sacred Majestie,

The aſſurance given to us of your majeſties good pleaſure and will, to have the workes of umquhile Maiſter Thomas Craig (yet unpubliſhed) to be peruſed and ſeene, hes given us the hardiment now after exact conſideratioun had be us of the ſame, to commend them to your maieſties moſt gracious patronage, whilk we the more boldly have undertaken to do, in regaird we find the ſame to conteine moſt excellent mater, eloquently penned be the author, who moſt learnedly hes not only expreſſed himſelf in his bookes De Feudis, but alſo hes left honourable monuments in his poemes written in honour of your maieſties ſelf, your royall progenitours, your maieſties moſt excellent queene, and the prince his grace, your highnes ſonne, all of themſelves worthy to be imparted to the aig preſent and poſteritie, and not ſo to be ſhaddowed up in periſhing ſcrolles. The publiſhing whereof cannot but beget honourable credite to this your maieſties kingdome, and profitable good to the ſubjects of the ſame. We think it not expedient to impeſh your ſacred eares, in declairing with what fervent zeale and devotion to your highnes ſervice and publick good, the author was conſumed whill he lived, as moſt notour to your maieſties ſelf and whole countrey, the report whereof we remitt to the right honourable and allwayes learned, your maieſties chancellor of this kingdome, of whome your maieſtie may truely try the worthy ſtuff of theſe workes, togidder with our fervent deſire and requeiſt to your maieſtie to mak ſuch rare monuments goe abroade to the world, whilks juſtly craves to receive their dew luſtre and life from your maieſties ſelf, whoſe princely vertewes and royall diſpoſition towards all learning, may only anſwerablie raiſe up theſe workes, and reſtore them to their deſerved and deſired light. We ar out of all doubt to find pardon of your maieſtie, for the offering of theſe our like commendable indevours, to your highnes protection, knowing your maieſtie to be a peereles patrone of all learned erudition, in whome God hes placed ſuch rare princely qualities of force to mak the world wonder and admire them, and to us your maieſties ſubjects ſo powerfull that in moſt ardent zeale to the Almighty, we pray for the happie progres and perpetuitie of the ſame in your maieſties long and happy lenght, and glorious reigne, and your highnes royall progenie, in the whilk prayer we moſt humblie tak our leave.

TRUSTY and weilbeloued counſellour, wee greet yow weill. We haue receaved your letter of the twentie ſevinth of Februare, and for ſatiffactioun of two poyntis thereof requiring oure anſueir, haue thoght fitt herby to certifie yow of oure will thereanent; and firſt, concerning that priviledge by the Fleaming petitioned to make brinſton, vitreale, and allome, for the ſpaice of thirtene yeires, within that our kingdome, foraſmuch as his traivells may (in our opinioun) prove beneficiall both to vs and oure ſubiectis there, we ar therfore weill pleaſed that oure counſell exped him a gift of the ſame, for ſuch a yearlie rent to be therefore payed vnto vs, as they ſhall think him hable to afford, in regaird of the aforeſaid grant, or as ſhalbe otherwayes anſwerable to that, whiche, others having purcheſſed the like licence within this oure kingdome, doe yeirlie yeild vs for the ſame. Wherein, as wee doubte not of their careſulnes, ſoe doe wee aſſuredlie expect that yow will, in regaird of your office, the more inſtantlie inſiſt for our benefite.

And as for that other poynte of your letter, concerning the furder following of that perſute intentit againſt young Drumlangrick, foreaſmuch as wee vnderſtand, that he, being laitlie reconcealed to Kirkmichel younger, is to compeir before oure Juſtice, at the day and plaice ſpecified in your laſt ſummondes raiſed againſt him, and there, for clearing him ſelf of that crime whereof he is accuſed, to alleadge that he did nather violentlie apprehend nor detyne the ſaid Kirkmichel. It is therefore oure ſpeciall pleaſure that at the foreſaid dyett yow continew in your perſute againſt him, and that vpoun his alleadging the aforeſaid exceptioun yow doe demand of him, yf he will not wholie relye therevpoun, renuncing all other exceptiouns formerlie propounded in his defence, and vpoun his declaratioun that he will doe ſoe, yow ſhall then inſiſt for remitting the triell and furder confideratioun thereof to the lordis of oure counfell, infifting, in the meantyme earneftlie, that thefe other exceptions heretofore vfed in his defence being fo dangerous, and by no prefident warranted, may not be hereafter recorded in the regifters of the adiournall, as lawful or tolerable defences to be propounded in the like cafes in any tyme comeing. Trusty and weilbeloued counfellour wee greete yow well. Whereas wee vnderftand that in a perfuite mooued by Andrew Henryfon againft the lord of Scone for payment of a penfion oute of the rentes of Scone, difpofed by vs, there is an exception of improbation, propounded of a writte vſed by the ſaid Andrew Henryſon, by which he wold haue vrged the ſaid lord of Scone, after the time of the erection, to haue acknowledged the ſaid penſion. Alwiſe, vpon certeyne iuſt cauſes moouing vs, our pleaſour is that yee, as our aduocate, at the nexte diett of that proces ſhall propounde the nullity of that penſion, as being of our annexed property; ſo as all further proces in that matter may ceaſe, and withall, yee are to take a bande of the ſaid Lord of Scone, obliſhing him and his heyres to pay to the ſaid Andrew Henryſon yearelie, during his life, the ſumme of fiue hundreth markes monie of that our kingdome, allowable vnto him as a parte of the blench dewty, which, by his infeftment of erection, he is bounde to pay. And ſo reſerving this matter to your care wee bid you farewell. At our pallace of Whitehalle, the ſixt of Maie 1612.

LIX.—THE LORDS OF PRIVY COUNCIL TO KING JAMES VI.

Most Gratious and Sacred Souerane,

We haif reſſauit your maieſteis two lettres, the one concerning ane diſcharge and exoneratioun, whiche your maieſtie willeth ws to gif to Alexander Home of Rentoun, vpoun compt and payment to be maid be him to George Nicolſoun in Berwick, of his haill intromiſſioun with the late erll of Dunbar his rentis and goodis; and the vther tuitcheing ſome dealing to be tane be ws with the ſaid erle of his creditouris, that thay wald accept of thair principall ſoumes without ony annuell ſen his deceis. In whilkis two particularis, we ar moſt humblie to intreat your maieſties pardoun for returneing of this our anſuer and excuſe thairunto. And firſt, tuitching that of the diſcharge, thair can be no thing done be ws thairintill, whiche wilbe availlable to the ſaid Alexander, or whiche, by law or cuſtome of this cuntrey, will ſecure him in that poynte, becaus the haill rentis, goodis, and what els belonged to the ſaid late erll, doeth now perteyne to his executouris, and no diſcharge can be gevin of ony parte thairof, bot be thame after thay ar confermit in the office of executrie; and the two doghteris being the onlie perſonis who now ſupplee that charge, and thay having ſubmittit all materis queſtionable betuix thame to your maieſtie, your maieſtie may decerne thame to conferme thame ſelfis executouris, that thairefter ſuch diſcharges as ar fitt to be gevin in thir materis, may be formalie and ordourlie gevin be thame; and forder, the goodeman of Rentoun pretendeth ane vther difficultie in payment, vpoun occaſioun of diuers arreiſtmentis, and actionis foundit thairupoun, maid vpoun the ſaid erll his rentis and goodis, for grit ſoumes of money debtfull be him, whilkis arreiſtmentis being yitt ſtanding in force, will mak him to be anſuerable to the partyis at whoſe inſtance thay ar maid. And anent the vther lettre, tuitcheing oure dealing with the creditouris, for accepting of thair principall ſoumes, we think thay wilbe hardlie induceit thairinto, ſeeing when this mater wes firſt in handis, we then, by your maieſties ſpeciall directioun, delt with the creditouris for ſuperſeiding of thair debtis for ſome certane ſpace, vpoun promeis maid to thame, for payment of thair annuellis, whairunto, with grite difficultie, thay then yeildit, and now, if thay find appeirance that ony ſuche purpois is intendit, as to fruſtrat thame of thair annuellis, thay wilbe the more inſtant in ſeiking bothe of thair principall and annuells. And ſo humblie beſeiking your maieſtie to tak this, oure excuſe, in goode parte, and praying God to bliſſe your maieſtie, with all happynes and felicitie, we reſt

We do all lyke verie weele of the gentilman, and thinkis him one of goode worthe and merite, bot in the hoipis of this his overture and fute (althoght the fame wer grantit), we affure your maieftie that he will come fo far fhorte, as it fall breid far moir uexatioun, trouble, and preiudice to your maiefteis fubiectis, nor gayne, proffeit, or contentment to him felff. Thair hes bene no fuche futis and grantis vfuall in this kingdome, and the preparatiue thairof may produce dangerous confequenceis, and grite confufioun and mifordour in the officeis of refett. And wheras thir vnlawis and penaltyis hes bene heirtofoir conceallit, we haif gevin directioun to Sir Johne Arnott to examine your maiefteis regiftre, and to charge for thir penaltyis, and yf ony thing fall aryfe thairby, we fall gif notice thairof to your maieftie, to the effect your maieftie may then in haill or in parte gratifie the gentilman thairwith. We ar lykewayes bauld in all humilitie to requeift your maieftie, that when fo in tyme comeing, ony fuche futeis and ouerturis of the natur and qualitie foirfaid falbe maid vnto your maieftie, that it wald be your maiefteis pleafour to gif fignificatioun thairof vnto ws, by your maiefties Secretarye, or fuche vtheris as your maieftie fall think meete, and not be the pairtye; who, oftymes preferring thair awne apprehenfionis and opinionis to modeftie and reafoun, doeth blame ws as croffe, and hinderaris of thame in thair hoipis of your maiefteis beneuolence and fauor. And fo frome oure hairtis recommending your facred maieftie to Godis divyne protectioun, we reft for ever

LXI.—THE LORDS OF PRIVY COUNCIL TO KING JAMES VI.

Pleis your most Excellent Maiestie,

According to your maiesteis directioun reſſauit for taking tryall of the debt acclamed by James Shaw, executour confermed to vmquhill Williame Shaw, maiſter of your maieſties workis within this kingdome, arryſeing vpoun the arreraiges of the ſaid maiſter of worke, his feall dew to him by his gift, whairof for diuers yeiris by ſome of the officers of refett, allowance wes takin, and by vtheris omittit and left furthe of thair accomptis; after the whole bipaſt accomptis, ſen the date of his gift to his deceis, had bene narrowlie ſearched and examined, we find that he hathe continewed betwix his entrie to the office and his deceis, the ſpace of auchtene yeiris, haueing by his gift fiue hundreth merkis of yeirlie feall appointed to him, whairof allowance is tane by Sir Robert Meluill in his accomptis of the theſaurarye for the yeiris of God 1584, 1585, 1586, 1587, and by the Lord Elphingſtoun for the whole 99 and Witſonday in the yeir 1600. And the whole remanent yeiris, enduring his being in office, haif not bene takin allowance, nor yitt probablie euer payit to him, in regaird the defunct, at the making of his teſtament, immediatlie befoir his deathe, hathe gevin vp with his awne mouthe the ſame to be reſtand awand to him, as his confermed teſtament doethe beare, whairin we may boldly alſua afferme, that in his lyftyme, and during the tyme of his ſeruice, he wes a moſt painefull, truſtye, and welle affectit feruand to your maieſtie. Leaving what forder your ſacred maieſtie wilbe pleaſit to direct, concerning ony payment of theſe debtis, to the executours of the defunct, vnto your awne moſt gratious pleaſour and will; and praying God to bliſſe your maieſtie with all happynes and felicitie, we reſt

LXII.—SIR THOMAS HAMILTON TO KING JAMES VI.

MOST SACRED SOUERANE,

IT is humblie deſyred be your maieſties counſall, that your royall pleaſour may be ſignified concerning the allowance to be gevin to the capten of Dumbarten, for the Erle of Orknayes chairges during his detention thair.

The Biſchop of Orknay having agried with the counſall, anent the aſſignation of lands and teyndis to him and his ſucceſſours, as ane conſtant patrimonie of the Biſchopis of Orknay, is to repaire to your maieſtie, and to mak ſute for the patronages and ſuperiorities; which being poyntes rather of authoritie and preeminence nor of proffeit, ar thoght more fit for the prince, nor ane ſubiect, in theſe remote iles; whairof your maieſtie may be pleaſed to conſider, and to declaire your royall pleaſour to your counſall.

Thair is appeirance, that the Erle of Craufurd may be fred of wairde, furth of the caſtell of Edinburgh, be ſatiffaction of his creditours; but becaus he is too much ſubiect to the counſall of young and evill diſpoſed perſons, it is thoght expedient, that your maieſtie command the counſall, be your letter, to tak caution of him to keip the peace vnder great paynes, which requires expedition, before his libertie.

The counſall reſſaued your maieſties letter concerning Robin Abroches remiſſion and protection, which, vpon hope of your maieſties gratious permiſſion, thay have delayed to performe, till, be thair direction to me, your maieſtie may be informed be my letter, that Robin Abroch is reported to have bene the moſt bludie and violent murthourar and oppreſſour of all that damned race, and moſt terrible to all the honeſt men of the cuntrie, who now reſſaving fauour above all vthers of his kin, being diſpenſed from compeirance before the counſall to menſweare his name, and from finding caution for his compeirance before the counſall, whanever he ſall be chairged vnder competent paynes, which hes bene the ordour preſcryved to all the reſt of that clan without exception, the fauour granted to him gevis him loſen renzies, diſcourages theſe who ſtands in feir of his barbarous oppreſſion, and may move vther brokin men to ſtand out, till thay get the lyke condicions, and perhaps tempt ſum, who ſtand alreddie bund to the peace, to lope furth, whill thay obteane the lyke fredome and immunitie from all ordour and obedience. And thairfore the counſall moſt humblie craives, that your maieſtie may allow thame to vrge Robin Abroch, to obſerue the comon ordour preſcryved to all vthers of his clan, and obeyed inviolablie be ſuch as obteaned remiſſions; bot if your maieſtie be reſolved to the contrare, vpon ſignification of your determined pleaſour, thay will moſt reddelie obey your royall commandementis; and do intend, for his preſent ſaiftie, to grant him ane protection whill the xvth day of May, provyding he forbeare to repaire to the ſchirefdomes of Dumberten, Stirling, Perth, and Innernes. Thairfore I moſt humblie beſeik your maieſtie, to returne the ſignification of your gude pleaſour ſo ſone as convenientlie may be in thir pourpoſes; in expectation whairof, I beſeik God to prolong your lyfe, preſerve your health, increas your maiefties profperities, and accompleis your wifhed contentments. Edinburgh, this xiv^th Januar [1613?]

Your moft facred Maiefties moft humble,
faithfull, and bund feruand,

Sr. Th. Hamilton.

To the Kingis moft facred Maieftie.

LXIII.—SIR THOMAS HAMILTON TO KING JAMES VI.

Most Sacred Souerane,

Thir dayes bygane, your maiefties counfall haue delt with fum of the Makgregours landiflordis, who, being fummond, compeired before thame (the reft being abfent) to giue thair advyce anent the ordour to be tane with the rebells childrine, whairin the caire of thefe landiflordis appeired to be rather to difburding thamefelfis and the hielands of thefe childrine, and to haue thame tranfported and keiped be fowth Forth and Clyde, nor to propone any ouerture for the generall gude of the kingdome, which the counfall hes not allowed, becaus thefe landiflords being the men moft intereffed in the extirpation of the Clan Gregour, inrefpect of the releif of thair dangers and daylie troubles, and making thair lands, formerlie poffeffed be thefe rebels, peaceable and proffitable to thamefelfis; thay had nather beftowed trauels nor chairges in thair perfute, but left all the burding vpon your maieftie; and being now preaffed to pay thair contribution, which fum of thame had long ago promeifed, thefe wald have reuoked thair promeifis, and the reft being abfent, and not having gevin thair expres confent, thoght that no laufull decreit could be gevin be the counfall to compell thame to pay. And albeit thay alledge that if the bairnis ryfe to men thay may be of number and power to renew the trouble of the cuntrie; yet it is fund, be particular examination, that thair is not ten of thefe childrine aboue the aige of fyue yeiris, and the landiflords thamefelfis confes, that if ordour were tane with ten or twell, who ar the fones of Chiftanes, the whole remnant of that number ar fo baffe and beggerlie that thay will neuer be able to mak trouble. The counfall finding the landiflords fo vnwilling to pay thair contribution, thinkis it fitteft to leive the chairge of the bairnis vpon thame, whill thay confent to fum fuch ouerture as may fecure the cuntrie from thair future rebellion. And becaus the fmall number of meane landiflords, who at firft confented to pay the contribution, compleanis of thair double burding of contribution and interteaning the childrine, the counfall hes thoght gude to fuperfeid the exaction of that contribution, whill fum more folide ordour may be tane with the bairnis. Sufpicion is confaued that Glenvrquhie, Lawers, or fum vther landiflordis, may, be thair letters or vtherwayes, informe your maieftie that it is neceffar that the bairnis be tranfplanted to the lawland, which courfe the counfall is not liklie to allow. Thairfore, for efchewing your maiefties trouble be thair importunitie, it appeiris fit that the mater be remitted to the counfall. Bot if your maieftie conclude any thing to the contrarie, I fall euer yield that obedience, and imploy fuch diligence in accompleiffing your maiefties directions, which my faithfull dewtie and your maiefties moft gracious fauours dois ftrictlie requyre. So prayeing God to grant your maieftie long lyfe, conftant health, profperitie, and contentment, I reft

LXIV.—SIR THOMAS HAMILTON TO KING JAMES VI.

Most Sacred Souerane,

Your maiefties counfall having this day receaued from my brother, your maiefties letter, concerning the allowance to be gevin to the lait erle of Orknay for his interteanement, haue ordaned the reffauers to mak payment to him of foure pundis daylie. And albeit thay did forefie, that his freindis may perhaps regrait to your maieftie the meanneffe of the fowme, yet do thay expect that your maieftie will graciouflie approue the caufe of thair determination, proceiding of the erles obftinacie to leane to his pretended right to that erledome, which hes bene fo deirlie purchaffed be your maieftie; for if he war induced to acknouledge the trueth of his owne eftate, and hauing recourfe to your royall bontie, wald refunce all intereft which he could pretend to that leving, thay wald inclyne humblie to recommend to your maieftie the appoynting of ane lairger mentenance to him, having refpect to the honour of his birth and former qualitie. Bot fo long as he prefumes any thing of his right, and dois not interpone his confent and ratification to your maiefties laufull purches, thay fie no reafon to feid his imaginations at your maiefties too great chairges.

The counfall inclyned to have remitted your maiefties letter and Maifter Patrick Gordons petition for remburceing his chairges, to the counfall of Edinburgh: Bot, efter that I had proponed to thame, the chairgeing of fum of the principall bourrowes to compeir before thame, and fie order tane in that buffines, thay wer pleafed to approue that motion, and direct chairges accordinglie.

The Vicount Fenton will informe your maieftie of ane ordonance maid be the counfall vpon ane fupplication gevin in be Glenvrquhy, Lufs, Lawers, and vthers, for difairming the Clan Gregour of all vaponis, except ane pointles knyf, and of all vther affaires concluded in counfall ſince oure former aduerteiſment. And if any thing ſeme fit to your maieſtie to be altered, your royall directions will be hairtelie and reddelie performed be your maieſties moſt faithfull ſeruand, whom I ſall carefullie remember of your gracious pleaſour, beſeiking God long to preſerue your maieſties lyfe and health, to the effect we may inioy the happines of your protection and moſt prudent directions, and that my reddie obedience may verifie that I am and ſall euer remaine

LXV.—SIR THOMAS HAMILTON TO KING JAMES VI.

Most Sacred Souerane,

Ane queſtion being broght before your maieſties Exchekker anent the cuſtumes of the waters of Spey, Findone, and Loſſie, acclaimed be the erle of Murray vpon the one pairt, and the takiſmen of your maieſties cuſtumes vpon the vther, the erle of Murray produced his heritable infeftmentis of his erledome and of theſe cuſtumes, togidder with the bourrow mailes of Elgin and Forres, granted to him be your maieſtie, efter diſſolution maid in parlement to that effect, and ratification of the eſtaites of parlement interponed thairto. The Excheker thoght the mater controuerted, and the pairties ſecurities produced to be of ſuch qualitie and conſequence, as thay wald not tak vpon thame the deciſion thairof, bot remitted the mater to the Seſſion, whairin I fand the dewtie of your maieſties aduocat and theſaurar depute verie faithfull. Bot oure cheif conſideration reſpectis the conſequence of the pourpoſe more nor the availe and proffeit of the erle of Murrayes title, who having ſet thir cuſtumes in tak, for ane thouſand merkis Scottis be yeir, it is foreſene that his takiſmen, or vpliſtaris of his cuſtumes, may for verie ſmall benefite and aduantage to thame ſelfis, infinitelie preiuge your maieſties commoditie, and pairtlie be geuing cokquets to merchands of thair cuſtumes payed to thame, (which thay for les nor the half the deu cuſtume will grant, to the vtter vndoing of your maieſties cuſtumes), and vtherwayes, be this exemple, ſum vther ſubiectis who haue right to cuſtumes in ſum particular boundis of the kingdome may ſo defraude your maieſtie, of that rent be your cuſtumes, which is the greateſt and cleireſt patrimonie of this crowne, as may with tyme produce intolerable inconuenientis and hairme to your royall eſtate.

The beſt remeid whairof appeires to be, that your maieſtie may be pleaſed be your letter to be ſent downe with all gudelie diligence, to command my lord Chancelar, to ſtay proces in this action till your maieſtie be very perfytlie informed of the veritie of the preſent eſtate, and probable conſequence thereof; and thairwith command my lord Chancelar, taking with him two or thrie of your maieſties counſall or officers, to deale with the erle of Murray to giue him ſatiſfaction for theſe cuſtumes, according to the qualitie of his title, and wourth of his benefite.

I did yiſterday ſignifie to the counſall of Edinburgh your maieſties pleaſour, concerning the gift which Bernard Lindſay hes of your maieſtie, of the impoſt to be exacted of the tauernars inhabiting his houſes in Leith, and the imployeing the reſt of that impoſt, dew be the remanent tauerners of that towne, to the moſt neceſſar publict workis of the burgh. Thair deſyre wes, that thay might be permitted to deliuer thair anſueir to your maieſtie be one of thair bailzies, James Niſbet, whom thay ar to diſpatche touards court tomorrow. So, expecting your maieſties gude pleaſour euer to be moſt hairtelie and humblie obeyed, I beſeik God long to preſerue and bliſſe your maieſtie. Edinburgh, 4 February [1613?]

Your moſt ſacred Maieſteis moſt bund
and humble ſeruand,

LXVI.—SIR THOMAS HAMILTON TO KING JAMES VI.

Most Sacred Souerane,

This counſaill day oure meiting wes not frequent, my lord chancelar being ſumwhat altered, and for preuenting of ſeiknes, ſtayeing at Dumfermeling to tak phiſik; for ſupplie whairof I wrait in haiſt to the archibiſchop of Glaſgow, who having appoynted his ſinodall aſſemblie to be keiped at Glaſgow yiſterday, attended vpon it whill he had ſetled the moſt important affaires of his clergie, and thairefter raid the moſt pairt of the night to cum heir to the counſall, whair he gaue verie faithfull aſſiſtance to the performance of your maieſties directions and ſeruices.

Keluode inſiſted in his perſute of the Erle of Caſſils, whois excuſe writtin to the counſall for his not compeerance, and his deſyre of continouation of the mater to ane longer day being refuſed, Keluode deduced probation, whairvpon ſentence is geuin, finding that he vnlaufullie tuke and deteaned the gentilman priſoner, for which he is ordaned to be charged vnder the payne of horning, to enter and remayne in wairde, in the caſtell of Edinburgh, till your maieſties pleaſour be knowne.

Sum of your maieſties counſall ar ordaned to confer with the Erle of Abercorne, Lord Vchiltrie, and Sir William Setoun, anent the portes to be aſſigned for paſſage betwix Scotland and Ireland, and proclamationis ar to be maid be thair aduyce, concerning the ordour that may impeid the paſſage of vnlaufull perſones or gudds.

The gentilmen nominat be your maieſtie to exerciſe the office of ſchiref in ſum ſchyres cum in your maieſties handis ar ordaned to be ſent for the nixt counſall day to accept thair charge. But becaus your maieſties letter commandis all deputes and vther members of court to be diſchairged, and it is affirmed vpon knouledge that ſum clerkis haue lyf-rent giftis purchafed deirlie and confirmed be your maieftie, with claufes de nouo damni, it is expedient that your maiefties pleafour be knowne thairanent.

I have caufed fet downe ane act of counfall of the declaration of your maiefties will, anent the effect of your maiefties grantes to the towne of Edinburgh and to Bernard Lindfay, of the impoft to be lifted of the wyne to be uented in Leith.

The 18 of May being affigned be the counfall to the Lord Torthorall for his reconciliation with the Lord Vchiltrie, and he fenfyne preaffed to compeir foner, in refpect of the Lord Vchiltries earniftnes to go to Ireland according to your maiefties command, becaus his abfence at that day may ftay the fetling of that feid, it is humblie defyred that your maieftie may be pleafed to difpenfe with the Lord Vchiltries ftay for fo gude caufe.

Neill Makcloyde died at his execution verie chriftianlie, and Makcloyde Hereis hes tane voyage to court, onlie defyrous of your maiefties gracious countenance.

The Bifchop of Brechin making all poffible haift to obey your maiefties command, in his fpeide repaire to court, and being difturbed pairtlie by tempeftuous weather, and be the intervening deceas of his wyfe, is now vpon his journay. Referring all vther pourpofes to the note of counfall maters fent to be fchawne to your maieftie, I pray God to prorogat your maiefties yeires and multiplie your felicities.

LXVII.—SIR THOMAS HAMILTON TO JOHN MURRAY.

SIR,

BE my letter ſent yiſterday to James Niſbet, I recommended his affaires to yow, and ſent thairwith the contract betuix yow and Broughton, togidder with ſum writs concerning Johne and James Maxuels to be ſubſcryved be yow, and letters from Broughton and Drummorrell concerning thair awne buſines, whairof I expect your anſueir. This night I have receaued your letter from Maiſter Johne Skene, which I ſall obey, reſerving my dewtie to his brother, to whom yow know I am beholden for his gudewill in the office of Clerk of Regiſter, which dois obleis me in all dewtifull thankfulnes; and if Maiſter Johne had followed my freindlie counſall, he wald not haue bene intangled in this vnproffitable buſines, bot his owne wilfulnes and too much following the wilfull aduyſe and opinion of ſome contentious perſones, hes bred trouble and vexation to him ſelf and his brother, who will do him reaſon and fauour, ſo far as may be without his owne extreme preiudice. Alwayes as I haue bene, ſo I will continew to be, ane inſtrument of peace amongs thame, and whatſoever I do, ſall be knowne to be for your reſpect, which is the onlie cauſe that moues me to mell in Maiſter Johnes maters ſince I fand him ſo obſtinat.

I ſall informe my Lord of Regiſter of your freindlie counſall, who might be perſuaded to vſe courteſie according to his owne tractable nature, if Maiſter Johnes peremptour vſage of him had not alienated his mynd from him.

I thank yow for releving my promeis to Lamington, whairof I had moſt perfyte aſſurance, whenſoever the band ſould cum to your handis, which yow haue now returned ordourlie perfyte.

Maiſter Thomas Foulis, my gudebrither, acknouledgis that ſame kindnes from yow, which all my vther freinds hes fund in thair affaires at court, whairof he hes willed me to returne yow moſt affectionat thankis, and to requyre your fauorable continouance. He hes long foght his fortune at court without fucces, not for want of honeft mens gudewill, bot for lak of occafions; and fince thair is no default in him felf, whom I know to be honeft, well inclyned and thankfull, I will moft erniftlie requeift yow to grant him your fauour and help, for his fetling in any honeft feruice, that may be ane meane to him to leive, and ane beginning of his fortune, to be amended be the merite of his behauiour and help of his wourthie freinds, of which number bothe he and I ar, affured that yow will be one of the firft and beft, as I fall faithfullie certifie yow that your infinit kyndneffis to me and my freinds fall mak me euer to remayne

Your moft obleffed and obedient freind,

Sr. Th. Hamilton.

To the right wourfchipfull my uerie wourthie freind John Murray of Lochmaben, one of his maiefties Bedchamber, at Court.

LXVIII.—SIR THOMAS HAMILTON TO JOHN MURRAY.

Sir,

I can wryte no farder of Edmiftons eftate nor my former letters does conteane, for fo far as I can learne nather his wairde nor mairiage will fall. Your vther affaires ar proceiding as yow directed thame, and the proceiding of counfall maters wil be fignified be ane note thereof fent to his maieftie, and fum letters writtin be the counfall to his maieftie concerning the Erle of Caffils and late Lord Maxwell, fo as the onlie caufe of my wryting thir lynes is to convoy to your hands ane letter from my Lord of Glafgow, who having reffaued no anfwers of findrie letters ſend to yow ſince his returning to this cuntrie, ſeimes to diſtruſt the ſaif cumming of his former letters to your hands, whairof I pray yow reſolue him be your anſueir. Vpon the 24 of this moneth I ſend to yow ane letter from my Lord of Scone, and expreſſed my vnchainged reſolution in the pourpoſe concerning my ſelf which I thoght vntymous, becaus I wes perſuaded that it wald appeir ſo to theſe, without whome it could not conuenientlie proceid. So ſince I neuer did affect it, I wald be ſorie that it ſould be vnſeaſonablie moued when no ſucces could be expected bot my diſgrace, as if I ſould be knowne to ſute vainelie the thing my freinds had no credit to obteane. As yow ſall pleaſe to command me any farder in your affaires I ſall be reddie to obey, as I am exceidinglie obleiſed, in reſpect whairof I ſall ever remayne

Your moſt faithfull freind to be commanded,

Sr. Th. Hamilton.

Edinburghe, 28 April [1613?]

Sir, If any thing cum to your knouledge concerning my ſeruice which aither be omiſſion may offend or be diligence giue ſatiſfaction to his maieſtie, I pray yow if your laiſer ſerue not to wryte of it. Direct Maiſter Th. Foulis or James Douglas to do it.

Archbald Cambels letters will informe yow of the eſtate of the ſeruice aganis the Clangregour bothe young and olde, and of his brothers intention how to proſecute that which reſtis to be done thairintill. The ſignatour which his maieſtie ſigned to Lawers, is ſtayed be ane laitter warrand ſent from his maieſtie. No man will be ſo fooliſh as to preſume to advyſe his maieſtie how to recompens Lawers, which his maieſtie can better conſider nor we can propone. But it may be trewlie affirmed that he hes faithfullie ſerved and profittablie, with great paynes and loſſe, whairof no dowt his maieſtie will graciouſlie conſider.

It hes pleaſed his maieſtie to mak election of the laird of Cloſburne to be ſhireff of Dumfreis for this yeir, which he bothe can and will diſchairge faithfullie, if the burding of his eſtate, and ſtraitnes of his creditours, impeid him not; whairof we can not perfytlie judge whill his owne anſueir cum. But incaice hornings for debt may impeid him, it wer not amiſſe to think and remember his maieſtie of the nixt beſt choice.

To my honorable and wourthie freind John Murray of Lochmaben, one of his Maieſties Bedchamber, at Court.

LXIX.—THE LORDS OF PRIVY COUNCIL TO KING JAMES VI.

Most Gratious Souerane,

According to youre maieſteis directioun, we wryte for the laird of Johnnſtoun, his moder, and goodedame, to vndirſtand of thame, gif thay wald perſiſt in the perſute of that petitioun, exhibite vnto youre maieſtie in thair names, whairby thay craued iuſtice to be execute vpoun the forfeyted Lord Maxwell, for the ſlauchtir of the laite laird of Johnnſtoun. Thay come all to this burgh, and the laird of Johnnſtoun, with his moder and tutor, preſentit thame ſelfis before ws, and declairit that thay wald inſiſt in the perſute and proſequutioun of that mater, according to the tennour of thair petitioun. The auld lady Johnnſtoun, through ſeiknes and inhabilitie of hir perſone, being vnable to compeir before ws, haueing with grite difficultie come to this burgh for this ſame eirand, we directit and ſend the Biſhop of Caithnes, the Lord Kildrymmie, and Lord Preuey Seale to hir, to vndirſtand hir will and pleaſoure in this mater: vnto whome ſcho declairit, that ſcho come heir purpoiſelie for that mater, and that ſcho wald inſiſt according to the tennour of the petitioun;

ſua that now thair reſtis no farder bot youre maieſteis will and pleaſoure to be declairit, quhat forder youre maieſtie will haif to be done. Wherein, althoght the concluſioun of youre maieſteis lettre beiris, that we ſould proceid to the adminiſtratioun of iuſtice, yitt, in reſpect of a worde caſſin in in the preface of the lettre, beiring that youre maieſtie had not as yitt gevin a direct anſwer to thair petitioun, we haif preſomed firſt to acquent youre maieſtie afoir we proceid any forder; and whateuir it ſall pleis youre maieſtie to direct in this mater ſalbe immediatlie, and without delay, execute. Thair wes a petitioun gevin in this day vnto ws, be Robert Maxwell, bruther to the ſaid laite lord, with ſome offeris to the pairtie, bot becaus the mater concernit not ws we wald not mell thairin. Alwyſe we haif heirwith ſend the ſame to youre maieſtie, to be conſidderit of as your maieſtie ſall think goode. So, praying God to bliſſe youre maieſtie with all happynes and felicitie, we reſt

LXX.—OFFERS MADE BY LORD MAXWELL.

THIR offeris following ar maid be me Johnne ſumtyme Lord Maxwell, for my ſelff, and in name of my kyn and freindis, to [James] now Laird Johnſtoun and his tutoris and curatouris, Dame Sara Maxwell, Ladie Johnſtoun younger for the tyme his mothir, Dame Margaret Scott, Ladie Johniſtoun elder his guddame, and to thair kyn and freindis, for the vnhappie ſlauchtir of vmquile Sir James Johnſtoun of that Ilk, knyght, committit be me.

In the firſt, I humblie confes my offens to God, the kingis maieſtie, and to the foirſaidis perſones for the ſaid vnhappie ſlauchtir, and declairis my ſelf to be maiſt penitent thairfoir, craveing firſt mercie at the Almichty God for the ſame, nixt favour and grace of the kingis maieſtie my ſouerane lord, and forgifnes of the greit offence done to the foirſaidis perſones, teſtifeing be my ſoleme aith vpone my ſaluatioun and condempnatioun, that the foirſaid vnhappie ſlauchtir wes nawayis committit be me vpone foirthocht fellonie or ſett purpois, bot vpone meir accident; lykas for cleiring thairof, I am content to purge my ſelff be my greit aith in publict quher it pleiſs the pairteis to appoint, and do quhat farder homage ſalbe thocht expedient.

Secundlie, I am content not onlie for my ſelff, bot for my hail kyn and freindis, to forgiff the ſlauchtir of vmquhile Johnne Lord Maxwell my fathir, committit be the ſaid vmquhile Laird of Johnneſtoun and his complices, and to mak all perſones, quha wes athir gyltie, culpabill, or airt and pairt of the ſaid ſlauchtir, in ſecuritie thairfoir, ſua that thai nor nane of thame ſall nevir be trublit for the ſame be me, nor be nane of my kyn and freindis, directly nor indirectlie, in tyme cuming, and for that effect ſall mak ſik forme of ſecuritie as ſall agrie with reaſoun.

Thirdlie, becaus Johnſtoun, dochtir to the ſaid vmquhile Sir James, wes by the ſuddant and vnhappie ſlauchtir of hir ſaid vmquhile

fathir, left vnprovydit of ane ſuffitient tochir, and for the bettir avoyding of all inmitie that may arryſe betuix the houſs of Maxwell and Johnſtoun, and for mair ſuir eſtablifching of freindſchip amangis thame in tyme cuming, I am content to marie and tak to my wyffe the ſaid without ony tochir.

Fourtlie, I deſyre that the Laird of Johnſtoun may be mareit to Dame

Maxwell, eldeſt dochtir to Johne Lord Hereis and fiſtir dochtir to me, quha is a perſone of lyke aige with the Laird of Johnſtoun. Lykas I ſalbe obleiſt to pay to the ſaid Laird of Johnſtoun, in name of tochir with my ſaid fiſter dochtir, tuentie thowſand merk Scottis, and quhat farder ſalbe thocht expedient be the ſicht of freindis.

Fyiftlie and laſt, I am content, for the farder ſatiſfactioun of the hous of Johnſtoun, to be baniſhit his maieſties dominions for the ſpace of ſevin yeiris and farder, at the will and pleſour of the Laird of Johnſtoun. Thir offeris to be augmentit at the ſicht and diſcretioun of newtrall freindis to be choſyn to that effect.

Vnder proteſtatioun alwayis, that thir offeris beſoir wryttin, maid vnto the pairtie, be nawayis offenſiue to the kingis maieſtie, nor to his hienes counſall.

Most Gratious Souerane,

Whereas, by the examinatioun of that complaynt perſewit be the laird of Kelwode aganis the Erll of Caſſillis (whairin the erll compeirit not to vſe his lauchfull defenſſe), it wes provin, that Kelwood wes tane and maid priſonner be the erll; for the quhilk, decrite and ſentence wes gevin aganis him, ordaning him to entir his perſone in waird within the caſtell of Edinburgh, whilk he hes accordinglie obeyit, he finding that his ſilence and not compeiring to defend, in that mater, had inferrit aganis him ane opinioun of his guiltynes of a cryme, whairof he pretendeth to be moſt innocent: for cleiring him ſelff thairof, and to bring the mater to a ſecund heiring, he reaſed ane ſummondis aganis Kelwode and his brother, and Johnne M'Ilvane of Grymmett, for that ſame inſolence and ryot committit be thame, whairvpoun Kelwode his wairding proceidit; and in this actioun, proces being grantit to him aganis M'Ilveane and Kelwodis bruther, his awne abſence being excuiſit vpoun alledgeance that he wes at Courte; and M'Ilveane being lykwyſe hard in ane proces perſewit be him, aganis the laird of Blaquhan for this ſame ryot; whairvpoun Kelwood wes wairdit be the erll, and bothe thir proceſſes being verie narrowlie examinat, in the audience of the haill counſell, being convenit in a verie frequent nomber, it appeiris verie weill by deductioun of the twa proceſſes, that the erll of Caſſillis, in the taking and committing of Kelwode, had no privat reſpect nor conſideratioun of his awne, bot ſimplie his affectioun to juſtice and preſerving of your maieſteis peace, inſofer as this inſolence is cleirlie provin aganis M'Ilveane and Kelwode, his bruther, and thair complices, and that the erll him ſelff wes verie far contempnit and miſregairdit be thame, wheras he come vnto thame the tyme of the tumult, and commandit thame, in your maieſteis name, to keip your maieſties peace. Quhilkis haill circumſtanceis being conſidderit be the counſell, thay ar all of opinioun, gif the erll had appeirit in the firſt proces, and vſit thir defenſſis, whilkis he hes now provin at this ſecund heiring, that the ſame wald haif bene ane goode exceptioun and defence aganis Kelwoodis complaint. M'Ilvane, vpoun this probatioun led aganis him, is maid priſonner in the tolbuith, and charges ar direct aganis Kelwodis bruther for his entrie in that ſame waird. MAIST NOBLE AND MAIST HONORABLE GOOD LORDS,

IN all humilitie and reuerence, I craue your honours pardoun and fauourable interpretatioun, for my abſence at this tyme, being cited to compeir befoir your lordſhips to heir and ſie me diſchairgit at our ſouerane lord his inſtance, fra all aſſuming wnto myſelf the ſtyle or tytill of ane earle, as if I had na farther right thairto, other nor be contract paſt betuix me and wmquhyll Hew laſt Earle of Eglintoun. I mynd neuer my lords to preſent my ſelf in judgment, nor to na vther place, to be in onie ſort oppoſite to onie thing I may wnderſtand, is my maiſt gracious ſouerane his pleaſure, albeit the ſame ſould proceid from ſiniſtrous informatioun, miſtaking or hard apprehenſioun: I am reſolued, as it is mair ſeamlie for me, and ſutable to theſe I haue the honour to be diſcendit of,

rather to ſpend my bloode, my lyfe, and all I may claime to, in the mantenance and advancement of his ſacred will, and all his royall commandementis. I haue neuertheles thoght neceſſar to preſent herewith wnto your honours eies, ſic right and tytill as I haue, to the ſtyle and honour of Earldome of Eglintoun, (albeit vnworthie of the ſame,) na les nor to the lands, lordſhips, baronies, patronages, and haill pertinents of that hous, and leuing, to wit, ane tailzied chairtour authorized be his maieſties great ſeall, and ane retour out of his maiſt gracious maieſties Chancellarie paſt be ordinar forme of tryell, be ane aſſyſs of a ſufficient number of maiſt ancient, noble and worthie men, and peirs of this kingdome, the onlie beſt, maiſt ſure, and laufull grounds, wherby I could euer wnderſtand, lands, dignities, or onie ſic thing as men deſyres and aſpires to, might maiſt ſurelie be acquyred and injoyed in this eſtait. Theſe I entreat your honours fauour tak the paines to vieu and conſider, and in your great wiſdome advyſe, if there be not ſufficient warrands to me for all I acclame or pretend to, ſa lang as the ſame ſtands nather reſchindit not challenged be ordinar cours of lau, befoir the ordinar judges of this kingdome, in all ciuill cauſſis and tytles: Quairin, if anie juſt caus of quarrell or challenge war, be anie defect ather in ſubſtance or formalitie, as the ſamyn wald requyre wther witts nor myne, experienced in laus and formalities to defend and mantene the ſame, ſo knau I weel your honours is not in cuſtome in this judicatorie of priuie counſall, nor wald neuer giue audience to anie ſic diſputatioun foundit vpon ſic autentick writts and tytills; bot wald remit the ſamyn to the ordinar cours of lau, to the audience of our ſouerane lords Colledge of Juſtice, and Lords of Seſſioun, ordinar judges to all ſic cauſis in this eſtait. LXXIV.—THE LORDS OF PRIVY COUNCIL TO KING JAMES VI.

MOST SACRED SOUERANE,

WE haif hard (to our great greiff and ſorrow) by the relatioun of your maieſteis Secretarye, and be the inſtructionis committit be your ſacred maieſtie, to his credite, how far your heynes is diſcontented with the preſent gouernament of this eſtate, as yf the haill miſordouris and accidentis whilkis fallis oute heir, procedit frome oure cairles negligence and not diſcharge of oure dewteis, in that credite and truiſt whilk your heynes hes repoiſed in ws, wherin we ar not a litle grevit to be ſa hardlie cenſurit, wheras thair is no thing moir deir vnto ws, then to approve all oure actionis and trauellis to your maieſteis goode lykeing and contentment; for thair is no courſe that euir hes bene kepit, for pvniſhement or repreſſing of malefactours, whilk hes not bene profequuted be ws, with als great cair as euir hes bene done at ony tyme preceding; and feing we haif no other pouer bot ſick as hes charge of your maieſteis gairdis, we directit and employed thame at all occaſionis, and in oure diligence of perſewing thame, we haif euir prevented the pairtyis, and hes denunceit thame at your maieſteis inſtance, befoir thay wer chargeit be the pairtyis, and hes done als great exemplair pvniſhement, thir foure or fyve yeiris, as euir wer done within this cuntrey. And as to the particulair profequutioun of the Lord Maxwellis refettaris, thair is a nomber of thame called, fynned and wardit. The reſt ar ſummond to particulair dyettis, and ſalbe pvniſheit.

As to the ſlaughter of Cowhill, that feid is auld, weill knawn to your maieſtie, and na complaint of it maid by ony to the Counſell; and theſe brethir of Kirkhous had alwayes fauour, bot not frome the Counſell, and the committair of that ſlaughter is come in England.

And wheras your maieſtie is informit, that theſe who wer appointed to profequute the Lord Maxwell, hes keepit company with him, thay who hes the commandment of your maieſteis gairdis humelie craveis tryall of that calumnye: as lykewayes that that cove whilk is the allegeit place of his refett, may be deſigned, for we can not find ony cuntrey man that knawis ony place in Nithiſdale or Galloway that caryis that name.

Commandment is gevin to the kingis aduocat to perſew Lochinvar for the ſlaughter of his feruand, albeit the ordinair forme be, that the aduocat ſould haif ane informair; and it is not ill iuſtice when the pairty gettis it vpoun fute.

As for Maiſter Gilbert Brown, his cautioun is vnlawit, and the ſowme payit to the theſaurair; yff he be ſtill within the cuntrey, becaus he latitatis obſcuirlie and we can haif no tryall of him, we haif writtin to the preſbetereyis within whoſe boundis he is moſt ſuſpected to be refett, to gif vp the names of his refettaris, and thay ſalbe accordinglie pvniſheit, lykeas meanis ſalbe maid for his apprehenſioun, yff he remane within the cuntrey.

The Erll of Errole wes ſummond befoir this directioun, to compeir and exhibite the laird of Geycht befoir the Counſell.

As for Maiſter Johnne Hammiltoun, thair wes nevir ony dilatioun maid to the Counſell of his being within the cuntrey, or of his reſettaris, and that ſould haif bene the conſtant moderatoris diligence to haif ſhawne the Counſell, yff ony ſuche thing wes, bot when all dilationis, whidder trew or fals, comeis firſt to your maieſtie, and we reproued as remiſs and negligent, in thingis that can not probablie come to oure knowledge, we ar not able to yeild your maieſtie ſatiſfactioun. Alwayes we haif ſend for Maiſter Johnne Hall, conſtant moderator heir, and willed him to certifie his brethrene, that we deſyre to be certifyed of his reſettaris, that we may proceid aganis thame, as we ſall proceid aganis all vtheris of his conditioun.

As for the gwnis and piſtollettis, we haif pvniſheit the weiring of thame with als greate rigour as evir thay wer, as the theſauraris comptis and fynes takin vp for that offens will teſtifie; and no man is able to affirme that evir ony complaynt of that natur wes broght befoir the Counſell, that wes not pvniſheit. We haif lykewayes cravit privat informationis oute of all pairtis of the cuntrey, of the beiraris and weiraris of piſtollettis, and ſall tak ſuche ordour with thame as appertenis.

As for the eſtate of the north, we haif conferrit with the Marques of Huntley, and ſindrie other cuntrey men, and findis no ſuche diſordour. Na cuntrey is free of thair particulair diſcontentmentis, as betuix the laird of Drum and the name of Forbes, and yitt all the pairtyis ar vnder cautioun for your maieſteis obedyence.

The tryall of that ryott of Drumfreis wes vnder tryale befoir your maieſteis directionis come, and ſalbe proſequuted with all rigour.

The buryall of the Lord Maxwell wes a calumney, wherwith as with mony mo your maieſtie is importuned, for he lyis ſtill vnbureyit quair he wes: as lykewayes the ſlaughter of Johnneſtoun of Howgyll wes alyke fals.

The Collector hes promeiſt to extract all patronageis paſt by him, ſen your maieſtie going to England, wherin we hoip he ſall gif your maieſtie ſatiſfactioun. And ſua humelie craving pardoun of your ſacred maieſtie for this oure preſumptioun, we wilbe bauld in all reuerence to intreate your heynes fauourablie to conſtrue oure doingis, and to accept in goode pairt the ſimple panes and travellis whiche, with all deutifull regaird towardis your maieſtie, we beſtow in your heynes ſeruice, wherin our cheifeſt cair is, to approve oure ſelffis euery way in that meaſour to your maieſtie, whiche to oure charge and credite apperteyneth, ſua that your maieſteis gratious acceptance of oure trauellis, may not onlie rander ws conforte and contentment, bot encourage ws, cheirfullie and glaidlie, to go fordwart in that courſe, whilke your maieſtie expecteth of ws, and whilk to oure charge, dewytie, and placeis apperteyneth. Thus ending with oure humble and hairty prayeris to God, for the continwance of your ſacred maieſtie and your royall progenie in all happines and felicitie, we reſt

YOUR letter of the 14 of this moneth was delyuered to me yiſterday. Promeis is maid that the lord of Tortherals money will be payed, if ſo be it ſall be imployed as ye have directed, and tymous aduerteiſment ſall be ſend to yow how all proceids.

I am ſure yow have reſſaued long or now Maiſter Johne Aikmans owne anſweir concerning his intromiſſion with your rentis and his accomptis thairof.

I haue not reſſaued theſe copies of your bands gevin for ſowmes, for which the Laird of Lochinvar was caution for yow, albeit your letter mak mention of theſe copies; bot I haue reſſaued ane litell vnſubſcryved compt of the ſowmes deburſed in ſum of your affaires, which I tak to be your buſines of Pinzerie.

Your cuſingis turnes which ye ſo eirniſtlie recommend ſall haue be me all the furtherance to ane juſte and reaſonable appoyntment that can ſtand with my dewtie; for I am ſufficientlie informed of your caire of the buſines, both be your owne ſpeache and many letters.

My Lord of Scone is cum to this towne, with whom I have met this morning, bot have not fund his laiſer to confer in your particular, for he had ſchort tyme to ſtay with me, and, as I heir, is faſched with affaires which ar ſo neir and weightie to him, that it had bene indiſcretion to haue troubled him vntymouſlie with the vther pourpoſe, which I ſall not neglect at the firſt gude occaſion. I know ye will be ſorie to heir of the cauſe of his anger, for albeit it may be that he be als ſpairing to wryte plainelie to yow as he wes to ſpeak to me of it, yet I am perſuaded that thair is much of that mater knowne to theſe who of dewtie can not omit to wryte of it to yow, and than ye will in your wiſdome judge of it as it merits, and do in it as beſt agries with the intereſt of theſe whom it touches; which I remit to your freindlie diſcretion, and recommend yow to Goddis protection. Edinburgh, this 21 May [1613?]

Your moſt aſſured and obleiſſed to be commanded,

Most Gratious Souerane,

This xvij of Junij inſtant being the appointit dyet for proueing of the complaint maid be the erll of Caſſillis aganis the Laird of Kelwode; and he haveing foundit his complaint vpoun theſe ſame verie pointis of miſbehaviour and inſolence committit be Kelwode, whairupoun Kelwode his warding proceidis; whairby it appeiris that the erllis cheif ſcope and purpois wes to juſtifie and cleir him ſelf of that imputatioun of vnlauchfull and partiall proceding, whilk he vndirlyis in the taking and committing of Kelwode: And thay being bothe at grite lenth hard in this mater, and a nomber of witneſſes being produceit, admittit, and narrowlie and exactlie examinat thairintill, it is cleirlie verifeit and provin, that in a tumult whiche happynnit and fell oute, within the towne of Mayboill, betuix the Laird of Blaquhan and Johnne Mcilvane, youngair of Grymmett, that the ſaid Laird of Kelwode not onlie joyned him ſelff to Grymmett, and remanit in companie with him during the tyme of the tumult, bot quhen the Erll of Caſſillis, vpoun occaſioun of the tumult, come to the gait, and as one of your maieſteis counſaill, the cheif magiſtrat of the cuntrey, and a juſtice of peace, commandit bothe pairtyis to keepe the peace, that he gat no obedyence on the pairt of Grymmett and his companie; as alſua, that Kelwode directlie opponnit him ſelf aganis the ſaid erll his baillie, who, immediatlie after the tumult, being directit be the erll to charge Grymmett and Dauid Corrie, bruther to Kelwode, cheif authouris of that tumult, to enter in warde; and coming to the houſe quhair thay wer in companie with Kelwode, the ſaid Kelwode planelie withſtoode and reſiſtit the baillie, ſaying, Grymmett ſould not go to warde, and yf the erll him ſelf wald fetche him, that he ſould tak him ouer his bellie or he gatt him to warde. To the King his moſt excellent Maieſtie.

LXXIX.—SIR THOMAS HAMILTON TO JOHN MURRAY.

Sir,

I reſſaued your letters of the 17 yiſternight, immediatlie efter your miſtres arrivall at this towne in gude health, praiſed be God. Schó hopes to tak well with hir naturall aire, and neuertheles intendis to make all gudelie haiſt to yow, and to cum als neir the terme appoynted be hir maieſtie as ſcho may.

As yet, I haue not had much occaſion of conference with hir, becaus ſcho muſt giue this tyme to hir freindis, who ar deſirous to ſalute and welcum hir to the cuntrie. Bot before ſcho go furth of this towne, we ſall tak more tyme to theſe maters, alſwel concerning your rentis as your turne with my Lord of Scone, and your vther affaires, whairof ſcho hes made ane generall motion. As to hir owne ſecuritie, nothing is deſyred to be mended in it bot that it hurt hir not of that, which your ſelf intendis to hir; for I muſt beare hir true witnes, that ſcho acknouledgis all hir prouiſion to proceid of your meere fauour, and that ſcho acclames no thing vpon merite, bot dependis whollie vpon your approvin gudewill.

At hir firſt cumming to this, newes met hir heir, of the deceas of your brother Sir Dauid at Dumfreis vpon the 16 of this moneth. The Laird of Cokpule wrait of it, and deſyres that reſpect may be had to him, for the place of one of the Comiſſionars, which vaikes be Sir Dauids death, as alſo the keiping of the Caſtell of Dumfreis, whairof I thoght fit to aduerteis yow in dew tyme, that yow might tak ſik ordour thairin, as to your wiſdome ſall ſeme expedient.

Theſe to whom the controuerſie anent the leiving of Sanquhar is remitted, ar to conveine before thay go from this towne. Thay ar all well affected to the equitable ſetling of the pairties, and as things proceid, yow ſall be aduerteiſed.

Be gude luk, my Lord of Scone is this day cum to this towne, and hes aſſured me that he hes cauſed forme and ſubſcryve ane procuratorie of reſignation of the policie, park, ſtewartrie, and fies thairof, which he and Baluaird hes ſubſcryued. Bot he hes promeiſed to ſend that and his evidents heir, to the effect it may be conſidered if any thing neids to be reformed be your men of lawes ſight. As to his howſe, he ſayes, he will wryte to your ſelf the reaſons why he diſponis it not with the reſt, which I remit to his owne letter. We haue met in Williame Creichtoun and my Lord Sanquhars ſones tryſte, which is continoued to the nixt counſall day.

My Lord of Glafgow hes trauelled cairefullie to agrie Sir James Skene and his father and brother, and hes promeifed to aduerteis yow be his letter of the conclufion thairof.

My Lord of Scone hes conferred with your lady, and promeifis to fie things perfyted at hir cumming to Falkland, as his letters to your felf will more particularlie bear.

I caufed giue in ane bill to the counfall for ane warrand to the Laird of Cokpule, to reffaue the keyes of the Caftell of Dumfreis; which granted, my Lord Chancelars packet forces myne to accumpanie it with fuch haift, as I can not wryte farder in your particulars, whill I find your ladyes laifer to confer of thame. Till then and euer I commit yow to God. Edinburgh, 26 Auguft [1613?]

Your obleifed and faithfull freind at power,

Sr. Th. Hamilton.

LXXX.—LORD BINNING TO KING JAMES VI.

Most Sacred Souerane,

Your maiefties counfall having met this day, wer onlie bufied in decifion of complaints of fmall moment betuix pairties, no mater having occurred to trouble your maieftie, bot ane fupplication of John Gordon of Lentufh, fum tyme fchiref depute of Aberdene, who, for obedience of your maiefties decreit arbitrall, betuix the Marquis of Huntlie and Erle of Erroll, having entered prifoner in the caftell of Edinburgh the firft of this moneth, hes defyred to be fred be the counfall, offering to act him felf, vnder the payne of ten thowfand merkis, to keip waird in the towne whill he be fred be your maiefties warrand. The counfall, conſidering that he wes wairded vpoun your maieſties owne decreit, wald not preſume to grant him any farder fauour, bot that thay directed me to ſignifie the effect of his ſupplication to your maieſtie, humblie deſyring to know your maieſties gude pleaſour, which in that and all vther your royall commandements, thay will with all ſubmiſſe fidelitie obey. So, wiſhing to your maieſtie moſt perfect and permanent felicitie, I reſt

Your moſt ſacred Maieſties moſt humble

MOST GRATIOUS SOUERANE,

WE haif bene this day in handis with the commiſſionaris of the burrowis, anent that mater of the aſſiſe hering of the North Yllis, craued be the Duke of Lennox, conforme to your maieſteis patent ſigned in his fauouris, and the Laird of Bogye, and Maiſter Johnne Browne, commiſſionaris and agentis for the duke, hes bene at lenth hard thairupoun; in whiche poynte, inſofar as the ſame concernit the fiſhearis and tradaris on this ſyde of Buchane Neſs, the dukis commiſſionaris did nowayes contrauert with the burrowis, bot did acquieſce and allow of that decreit and ſentence gevin in thair fauouris, ſome two yeiris ago, when as this ſame buſynes wes ſollicited be one Capteyne Maſoun, Engliſhman: By the whilk decreit and ſentence it wes fundin be your maieſteis counſell, that no ſuche aſſiſe dewitie could be craued of the burrowis, becaus thair ontred for the Northe fiſheing wes of the nature of ane maircheant voyage, ſubiect to the lyke haſaerd, trouble, chargeis, and inconſtancie, as ony foreyne ontred, and thair wes neuer ony aſſiſe dewytie craued of thame at ony tyme heirtofoir. And whereas thair wes a verie grite decay of all tradis and handling in this kingdome, and this trade of the fiſheing, whilk is only followit oute by a nomber of ſea fairing men, being lykewayes liklie to be caſſin vp, to the vtter vndoing and beggering of diuers of your maieſteis poore people, yf the ſaid dewytie had bene exactit of thame, it wes thoght meete to encourage thame to profequute and follow oute that trade, bothe for the weele of the cuntrey, advancement of your maieſteis cuſtoumes, furthering the homebringing of bulyeoun, and halding of thir poore people (who otherwayes wald miſerablie periſhe) at worke. Thair reſted onlie twa pointis, whilkis wer earniſtlie follicited be the dukis agentis: the firſt, that thay might haif warrand for vplifting of this dewitie frome ſtrangearis; and nixt, that thay might haif it frome the inhabitantis of Orknay and Yetland, and other cuntrey people thairaboute, who, as wes alledgeit, had no reaſoun to clame ony ſuche fredome or immvnitie from this aſſiſe dewytie, becaus thay followit thair fiſheing with als grite facilitie and eaſe, and with als litill haſaird, perrell, chargeis, or expenſſes, as theſe at Dunbar and the Weſt ſeas. To the whilk pointe it wes anſuerit be the burrowis, that thir people wer onlie thair feruandis and fiſhearis, haveing no ontred nor ſtoike of thair awne, bot ſerved thame for wageis; and farder, that thair hering wer all maid, ſaltit, and barrellit vpoun the ſea, and verie few or nane of thame broght freſhe and greene to land; and that no aſſiſe aucht to be craved of ony hering, bot of ſuche as ar broght freſhe and greene to land. This point being at lenth reaſouned and debaitit amongs ws, it wes fundin, by vniforme voices and conſent, without ony kynd of contradictioun, that the aſſiſe dewytie aucht onlie to be payit for the hering broght freſhe and greene to land, and that the hering whilkis ar maid, ſaltit, and barrellit vpoun the ſea, and maid reddye for the tranſporte, hes nevir bene in vſe to pay ony dewytie. And anent the laſt poynte, tuitcheing the dewitie craued to be payit be ſtrangearis, we wer loathe to mell thairin, becaus thair is ſome ſtrangearis, eſpeciallie theſe of Holland, who doeth acclame libertie and preuilege by your maieſteis patent grantit in thair fauouris, to fiſhe in your maieſteis watteris, whilk preuilege we wilbe loathe to bring in queſtion without your maieſteis allowance. Bot ſeeing the conditioun and tennour of that patent is obſcure and vnknowne vnto ws, and no recorde thairof being in your maieſteis Regiſter, oure ſimple opinioun to your maieſtie is, that your maieſtie wald caus your ambaſſadour, reſident with the eſteatis, craue ane autentic copye of that patent, and that the ſame may be ſend heir, to the effect that, after inſpectioun and conſideratioun thairof, it may be known how far your maieſtie may go with thame in that mater. This being the effect of oure procedingis in this buſynes, we do humelie preſent the ſame to your maieſteis princelie conſideratioun, nowayes doubting bot your maieſtie, oute of your accuſtomat fauourable regaird towardis the weele of youre goode people, and furthering of thair trade and trafficque, will gratiouſlie accept of this oure concluſioun: and ſo, with oure earniſt prayers vnto God, for the lang continewance of your maieſteis bliſſed and happie reigne ouer ws, we reſt

LXXXII.—THE LORDS OF PRIVY COUNCIL TO KING JAMES VI.

Most Gratious Souerane,

Thair wes a petitioun gevin in this day to your maieſteis counſaill in the name of Sir James M'Coneill, proporting that thir tuelff yeiris bigane he had ſuſtenit grite trouble, diſtreſſe, and miſerie, by his ſtrait impriſonment in the caſtellis of Blacknes and Edinburgh, whair he hes beene this lang tyme keept in irnis; and his deſire wes, that he might be fred and relevit of his warde, and ſufferrit to remane with his freindis in ony pairt of your maieſteis dominionis, quhill it ſould pleas God to preſent ſome occaſioun quhairby your maieſtie might imploy him in your maieſties

feruice; and he did offer cautioun for his perfonall compeirance befoir the counfell, quheneuir he fould be chargeit, and for his not repairing to Kintyre nor Yla without your maiefteis licence, vnder fuche foumes as fould be inioyned vnto him. His petitioun being hard and confidderit be ws, and we remembering that thair wes a decreit and fentence of forfaltour ftanding aganis the faid Sir James, for certane crymes of treafoun committit be him, quhairof he wes convict in iudgement, and knoweing of no fauour, grace, nor pardoun as yitt fhowne be your maieftie to him, we wer thairfoir fpairing to grant the defyre of his petitioun, quhill firft we vndirftoode your maiefteis gratious will and pleafour thairanent; and wheneuir your maieftie falbe pleafit to gif fignificatioun vnto ws, what your maieftie will haif to be done in that mater, we fall in all reuerence conforme our felffis thairunto; and fo, praying God to bliffe your maieftie with a long and happie reigne, we reft

MOST GRATIOUS SOUERANE,

HAVEING reffauit commandment frome your facred maieftie to call befoir ws, Williame Creichtoun of Ryhill, and the bas fone of the laite Lord Sanquhair, and to will thame to mak choife of fome freindis, at whofe fentence thay wald abyde, tuitcheing the fatiffactioun to be maid to the faid bas fone, for all right, title, and intereffe, that he may acclame to the lordfchip and leving of Sanquhair; we accordinglie fend for thame, and thay gaif thair compeirance befoir ws, this fevint of Junij inftant:

the ſaid Williame accompanyed with ſome baronis and gentilmen of his kin and frendſhip, and the other accompanyit onlie with young Drumlangrig and Andro Ker, vncle to the Erll of Lotheane. And we haveing at lenthe ſignifeit vnto thame, how that your maieſtie, in the excellencie of your iudgement, had moſt iuditiouſlie, prudentlie, and wyſelie gevin your decreit and ſentence in that queſtioun, contrauertit betwix thame, concerning the right of the lordſhip of Sanquhair, and that your maieſtie, by the ſame ſentence, was gratiouſlie pleiſit to ordane ane honnorable ſatiſfactioun to be maid to the ſaid baſe ſone at the ſight of freindis, for his right to the ſaid lordſhip; we thairfoir delt and trauellit with thame that thay wald nominat ſome perſonis, to whoſe iudgement thay wald ſtand in this mater. The ſaid Williame, with all reuerence, acknowlegeing your maieſteis directioun in that point, declairit that he wes willing for his parte, to ſubmitt and preſentlie to nominat his freindis, bot the other pretending ane excuſe of his minoritie, and the abſence of twa of his principall curatours, towit, the Lordes of Roxburgh and Bugcleugh, without whoſe preſence and adviſe, he could do no thing in this mater, importing him ſo heichlie in his eſtate and fortoun: he thairfoir refuiſit to mak onie nominatioun of freindis, bot wald reſerue that mater till a more convenient tyme, that he might be aſſiſted with the preſence, counſell, and opinioun of his curatouris and freindis; and we finding him reſolued and ſetled vpoun this poynte, ſo that we could go no forder in that mater, we demittit thame till we vndirſtand forder of your maieſteis will and pleaſour heiranent. LXXXIV.—THE LORDS OF PRIVY COUNCIL TO KING JAMES VI.

Most Gratious Souerane,

We being this day at ane meiting and conference with the Archebiſchop of St Androis and the Commiſſaris of Edinburgh, anent that actioun and caus recommendit be your maieſtie to ws, concerning Johne Monypenny and Thomas Creichtoun. After that we had putt that mater to ane poynte, the archebiſchop declairit vnto ws, that thair is ſome actionis concerning the priuilegeis of the archebiſchoprik of St Androis, depending betuix your maieſteis Advocat and him befoir the Seſſioun, whairin, althoght he preſometh to haif law and reaſoun on his ſyde, yitt in regaird of the exceiding grite fauouris, whilkis fra tyme he hes reſſauit of your maieſtie, in preferring and advanceing him to that eſtate, honnour, and dignitie, whiche he now inioyeth, he is ſo far tyed and bundin to your maieſtie, in moſt humble dewyteis of devotioun and affection, that he can not preſome to be hard in iudgement, nor to enter in termes of conteſtatioun with your maieſtie: And whereas ſome few yeiris ago he had freelie, in face of parliament, ſubmittit vnto your maieſteis ſelf thir materis contrauertit, with this prouiſo, that afoir ony thing wer decernit thairin, your maieſtie ſould firſt heir him ſelff, he is content (yf ſo be your maieſteis pleaſour) to ſtand to that ſubmiſſioun. But becaus the ſame is limitat and conditionall, importing a neceſſitie that bothe he and your maieſteis Aduocat be hard to pleade that mater in your maieſteis preſence, whilk hardlie can be done, in reſpect of mony your maieſteis moſt important and princelie affairis and adois, whilkis will not admitt tyme nor laſer to attend this buſynes, he is willing to ſubmitt him ſelf to ony whome it ſall pleis your maieſtie to delegat and nominat, (the Theſaurair and Aduocat, who, in reſpect of your maieſteis intereſſe as his pairtyis, onlie except.) We haueing at lenth hard him heirupoun, and finding by his diſcourſeis, that he is moſt vnwilling and loathe to be a contradictor in iudgement vnto your maieſtie in this poynte, we haif thoght meete, that the actionis hinc inde concerning this mater ſall reſt and ſleip, till we vndirſtand your maieſties will and pleaſour heiranent, and whateuir it ſall pleis your maieſtie to direct and command we ſall accordinglie follow oute and obey. For yf your maieſtie ſall not be pleaſit to allow of this delegatioun, the archebiſhop wilbe conſtraned againis his will to abyde the courſe of your maieſteis lawis in theſe materis. And ſo, with our hairty prayeris vnto God, recommending your maieſtie and your royall progenie to his divyne protectioun, we reſt

by thame he may juſtlie challenge any intereſt in theſe new cuſtomes alſwele as of the olde, and to certifie your maieſtie of oure opinioun in that mater. We thairvpoun ſent for the ſaid Erll of Murray, being in the north pairtis of this kingdome for the tyme, and haueing conferrit with him heiranent, and finding no more aſſuired way to acquaynte your maieſtie fullie of the ſaid erllis rightis, and how far thay wer to ſubſiſte in law for ſuſteyning his challange of the whole cuſtomes of theſe wateris, then by a deciſioun in law to haif bene broght in before the competent judge, whiche courſe appeirandlie is noway diſlyiked by the erll, as halding him ſelf ſufficientlie ſecured both by infeftmentis and ſpeciall actis of parliament maid in his fauours; wheras, in oure judgementis, becaus the mater it ſelff may be contrauerted, and the event of the proces is vncertane, and gif the ſaid erll ſould haif the mater decydit in his favours, without queſtioun he wald be the more hard to be dealt with in the poynte of his ſatiſfactioun for theſe cuſtomes: In all humilitie we thairfore offer to your maieſtie oure privat adviſes, that rather the particulair conditioun of twenty foure thowſand merkis (whervpoun the ſaid erll wes contented to renunce his right to the ſaidis cuſtomes) ſould be yitt performed vnto him, then to committ the mater it ſelff to the hazarde of ane vncertane deciſioun, whiche going in the erllis fauours, may mak a double price of the bargane at leaſt: And entreating your maieſteis pardoun for ony thing that is amiſs heirin, and being maiſt willing to do whateuir ſalbe directed, we kiſs your ſacred hand, and we do reſt

LXXXVI.—LORD BINNING TO JOHN MURRAY.

Sir,

I ressaued your letter from James Hamilton and Sir Gedeon, and I have travelled with William Dick, who hes confented to furneis ellevin thoufand merkis vpon oure band, that yow fall caufe pay it to John Jouffie, within twell dayes efter oure reffet of the money; for I have onlie diffyred that we may have fex dayes to caufe the packet rin, and fex dayes thairefter to caufe yow pay the money thair. Sir, I think that feruice fall be fure, and thairfore I pray yow caufe provyde the money thair to be reddelie payed vpon oure aduerteifment. William hes tane the end of the nixt oulk to provyde the money; bot if he can get it the morine, or any vther day before the end of the oulk, I fall with haift wryte a packet to yow. I feir the money of your rentis fall not be fo fone reddie, becaufe it is cum flowlie in, be the pouertie of the tenentis, and be mifluk. John Carfane hes brokin his leg be ane fall of his horfe, yet he hes writtin that he fall fend his fone heir, with all the money he hes, with diligence. James Hamilton will wryte to yow of John Murrayes anfueir, who is vnwilling to quyte your furetie and reffaue my Lord Sanquhars; bot when my lord cumes heir, we fall follow furth that expedient which I proponed to James Hamilton. For Lochinvars money we can fay no thing of it till his owne cumming, and then yow fall know how that pourpofe goes. Yow will find it ane calumnie which has bene reported to yow of Sir Gedeons fpeach concerning Robert Ellot, for he hes affured me vpon his confcience, that it is ane fals inuention, and I can affure yow that it is vnliklie, that ane honeft and wyfe man, as he is knowne to be, wald have uttered fo impertinent fpeaches; for if all had bene trew that wes reported of Robert, his greateft vnfreindis could not have drawne him in any greater inconvenient, nor the payment of ane meane fynne, which Sir Gedeon wald never have intended agains him, for the refpect

he bure to him for your caufe: Befyde, that the buffines which might haue broght him in fufpicion of vnkyndnes aganis Robert, is fetled be Sir Gedeon, with Roberts owne confent; lyke as James Hamilton, who fpak with Robert in his returne, hard no thing of him concerning Sir Gedeon, bot kyndnes and contentment.

Your bailyie of Linclouden hes fpokin with Sir Gedeon concerning fum golde fund in ane hurde, vpon land belonging to ane fewer within your regalitie, and wald acclame it as dew to yow. It is expedient for difcharge of Sir Gedeons dewtie in his office, that it be exactlie tryed, and that no pairt of it be concealed be the findars. He refolues, if it can be tryed to apperteane to yow, to mak it als proffitable be difcouerie as may be; and if it be not yours, bot his maiefties, and it be wourth the feiking, to aduerteis yow that yow may fute it of his maieftie and have it; and if it prove vnworthie to be foght, that it may cum to his office, according to his dewtie. As for the pryce of your office, efter my Lord of Glafgos returne, we fall confer with him, and advyfe vpon the beft meanes to giue yow contentment. So, wifhing yow all happines, I reft

SIR,

I RESSAUED from yow one letter, be the archbiſhop of Glaſgow, anent your turnes concerning the Chapell Royall and the biſchop of Galloway; and ane vther from Archibald Campbell, anent the particulars which he vndertuke. For theſe I can anſuer no farder, bot that he and theſe whom the buſines concernes, ſall be tymelie remembred of thair promeis, and preaſſed to performe thair dewtie, if thair turnes ſucceid; whairof I ſtand in great dowt.

I wrait to yow that the biſchop of Galloway had promeiſed, verie freindlie, to ſettle your teynds. Kirkonell, who did ſolicite that buſines, having ended your affaires with Barnbarroch and Drummorell, is now gone to the cuntrie for your affaires and his owne.

Your affaires with Lochinvar delayes, till his cuming bak to the towne, and bringing of his evidents to your man of law, of the lands whairof yow ſould have right from him. The gentilman whoes conſent is neceſſar in that ſecuritie will not be heir, whill anſueir cum from court in the mater concerning him, which wes expected before this tyme; and the longer delay of it may be imputed to me, albeit the help lyes not in my hand till it cum from aboue. Thairfore, if that mater be not alreddie diſpatched, I pray yow further the anſueir, ſuch as his maieſtie ſall be pleaſed to grant.

The reſt of your affaires will be maid knowne to yow be letters from James Hamilton and vther freinds, to which I refer me; and, comitting yow to Gods mercifull protection, I reſt

And becaus he hes obteaned Broughtons infeftments of the owteinds decerned to mak no faith for non production, which we knew not before, he is willing to renew your furetie thairof. It is fit, that, be your letter of thankis, you tak notice of his kyndnes, for we find him verie hairtlie and reddie.

XC.—EARL OF CAITHNESS TO LORD BINNING.

Right Honorabill my verie Goode Lord,

Pleis your lordſchip, we arryved at Caſtell Sincleir vpoun the 22 of this inſtant, whair I ſtayit that night, and aduerteiſed the Caithnes men to be reddie to follow me to Orknay when I ſuld command theme. I embarked with me about threttie of theme, and cam to Selwik within tuo myles to Kirkwall, vpoun the 23 about ſex eftir nvne.

The 24, I ſent the herald with notouris meſſingeris and witneſſes, to mak proclamatione at Kirkwall, who wes preſentlie taikin as he entered the towne, moſt iniurioufliе and diſpytfullie abuſed, bothe in word and deid, the lettres taikin frome him be Robert, and himſelf, with ane miniſter, and all otheris that accumpanyed him, keipit in diuerſe houſes all that day till the evening: To whiche they the ſame day did ad this alſo, that to the number of thrie hundreth men with diſplayed enſigne, did ſort out of the towne, and maid prouatione to me whair I lay vpoun the ſhipbord for that day. The proclamationis thus impedit, I wes forced, vpoun the 25, to wreitt diuerſe lettres, and ſend throuche the cuntrey, to aduerteis and command the gentlemen and vtheris to reſort to me; in whome, for the moſt pairt, I did not find that reddie willingnes whiche I expected, ſo that I wes forcit to ſend to Caithnes for ſupplie of my owne men; who cuming to me vpoun the 26, and having then aſſembled about two hundreth of the cuntrey men, we tuik land, and at the ſame time about ten houris we landit the battering piece with hir careage, whiche by great force of men, and ſome difficulties throuche the deipnes of the ſoyll, wes preſentlie, and with all poſſibill diligence, drawin neir tuo myles towardis the towne. And the ſame day, about thrie afternvne, planted at Weyland, within ane half quarter of myle to the caſtell. We merched in goode ordour, with colouris diſplayed; and as we approched, the rebellis ſorted out, boaſting that they wold fight with ws, thought we had bein tuentie to one; and having their ordinance in reddines to haue played vpoun ws, from the caſtell ſtepill and tour of the Yeards, and diſchairgeing one or tuo of the ſame againſt ws, ſo ſoone as we cam vnder their ſight, I commandit the cannoneris to ſhute at the caſtell, who did their pairt ſo weill, that be ſecund ſhott, one of the turrettis vpoun the heade of the houſe wes pearſed and almoſt beatein doun, to the great terrour of the traitouris; and other thrie being ſhott one aftir another, did all hit, bot not hurt ſo muche.

In the meantyme, the rebellis being provoking, and braking ws vpoun the ball ley, to the number of ſex ſcoir men: our captanes and ſoldiouris went directlie and with goode courage towards theme, and without ony reſiſtence or hurt, did compell theme to retreat ſhamefullie; in whiche flight, about fyve of preſſed poore men of the cuntrey did abandon theme.

The captanes, ſouldiouris, and gentlemen of the cuntrey, with thair men, did preſently follow theme at their heillis, entered the towne the ſame night about ſex houris, incloſed theme in their holdis, and now poſſeſſes the towne. That night I ludged about the ordinance, and gairdit it and our ſelffis with the reſt of our men.

This day we ar buſie about the landing of the great peice of ordinance, that we may batter bothe the caſtell and the other houſes whiche annoyes ws and our men in the towne, and mak our ſeruice the ſchorter.

The rebellis ar moſt obſtinate, and malicioufflie reſolued to holde out to the death, thought I haue ſent miniſters and other owne freindis to inſtruct, admonis, and threatin theme.

Thair is heir no bread nor drink, nor vther victuallis to be had for pryce, prayer, or command, ſo that I muſt ather ſeik preſent releif of ſome victuall from Caithnes, or ſuffer the ſouldiouris to ſtarve for want.

And yf they ſall endure and continow in their obſtinacie, as they haue wowed to do, their will not be pouder, leid billettis, nor matche, to ſerue for this ſeruice; in the whiche I ſie great dangeris, and manie more difficulties then I culd foreſie. In reſpect whairof, I will intreat your goode lordſchip, to acquent my lord theſaurer and remanent counſellouris, and with all cair and diligence prouyd betyme, that money, pouder, pillettis, and cheiflie fome reafonabill quantitie of victuall, whiche can not be had heir, may be fent to be difpenfed and fold to the fouldiouris and vtheris that haue neid, vpon reafonabill pryces; whairby our great neceffities may be fupplied, with litle or no hurt to his maiefties money.

As things fallis out, fo fall your lordfchip be aduerteifed from tyme to tyme: And now, after the trew narratione of our proceidings, and prefent eftait, I refer the confidderatione and care of all to your lordfchipes wifdome, and fall euer reft

Your lordfchipes awin, euer to be commanded,

CAITHNES.

To the right honorabill my verie goode Lord, my Lord of Binning, his Maiefties Secretare of Scotland.

XCI.—THE BISHOP OF ORKNEY TO LORD BINNING.

RIGHT HONORABILL MY VERRIE SPECIALL GOOD LORD,

PLEAS your lordfchipe, we haue tryed heir greatar contempte and obftinacie in the rebelleis, les truft and willing obedience in the people, then we could forefie or did expect. The difficulties quhiche we encounter withe ar many, and gif God doe not fubdue the pryde of the villanous knaves, there is great appeirance of muche blood fchadding before the houfs and halds can be takin.

My Lord Erle of Caithnes is notwithſtanding full of curage and conſtant reſolutioune never to geive ouer vntill it ſall pleas God to giue ſuche victorie as may giue his maieſtie, and your lordſchipes of his maieſties priuie counſell, contentment.

His lordſchipe ſpaires nothing quhich may ſerue to that effect, and is this day, for helpe of our preſente wante of victuall, ſending to Caithnes for ſupplie. He himſelfe, and all of ws, leiues lyk ſouldiours, withe verrie temperat dyet; out in the daye and nicht, lying aboute dykes, or within houſſis no better then croſſes; and now inbring oure ſelues to all militarie hardnes for futur ſeruice.

Ratter, May, and his lordſchipes freinds and ſeruands, ar in no better cace then his lordſchipes ſelfe, and exceedinglie weill affectit to do and ſuffer all things for the happie end of this ſeruice; for quhiche caus, I will beſeiche your good lordſchippe eſpeciallie, and by the ſame letter my Lord Theſaurar alſo, quhois cair and diligence did cheiflie appeare in our directioune hither, to incourage and furder this noble man, quho hes willed rather to be buried in his grandſires graue, wharewithe he is daylie threatned heir, then to foreſaik this ſeruice, or omitt ony pairte of that loyall dewtie, quhiche he ow to his maieſtie.

As for my ſelf and my buſines and ſetling, I will bot put your lordſchip in mynd thareof, and rely conſtantlie vpoune that goodwill, quhiche your lordſchip hathe euir profeſſed to me, and I do with muche confidence perſwad my ſelfe of, thoght I haue not, nor can nocht, deſerue ane drame weght thareof.

We haue not ſo muche ink almoſt, nor cannot haue it yitt frome the toune, as to wryte thir too or thrie letters; bot knawing that your lordſchip will imparte to him, and to thoſe, quhome your lordſchipe pleaſes, all quhich my lord hes writtin particularlie, I muſt craue pardone for this omiſſioune; and wiſching frome [God] all grace, peace, and proſperitie to your lordſchip, and good ſucces to thir Orkney warres, evir reſts

Your Lordſchipes aſſured in all dewtie to ſerue yow.

Weyland, the 27 of Auguſt 1614.

As I was ending this wreet, my lord himſelf hes begunne this dayes play againe, and hes hitt the caſtell with ane ſchotte.

To the right honourable his verrie
good Lord my Lord of Binning, his Maieſties Secretarie of Scoteland.

Not ſigned, but indorſed "Biſhop of Orknay to the Secretary."

XCII.—THE EARL OF CAITHNESS TO LORD BINNING.

Ryght Honourabill my verrie Good Lord,

Vpoune the 28 of Auguſt, we marched with the battering peace frome Weyland to Newbigging, quhiche is within ane muſcatt ſchott to the Yairds: Vpoune the 29, we planted our batterie againſt the new wark of the ſaid place, and ane toure thairof, callit the Chappell tour, from quhence they ſend ws many ſchottes; and all that day, till twelue of the clok, played againſt thame, with the ſaid batterie, and muſcaters plantit aboute the dyks of the gairdine, and in ſum neireſt houſſis, within the toune, without ony blood, except that Robert his mother, ſtanding with himſelf in ane chamber, was ſchotte throughe the hand, and ane boy of thaires thruch the thighes.

The ſame day, efternone, perceaving that we could noy thame much, with the ſchottes of the batterie, we went with all diligence and landit the canoune, and, by number and force of men, brocht hir almoſt four myles, for the moſt pairt, vnder the ſight of the caſtell, and, the ſame night, planted hir againſt the new wark of the Yairds, of purpoſe to beat doune the great windous of the ſame, and then to enter by ledders, quhich wer prepaired.

Vpoune the 30, Robert, knawing and perceauing that he was not able to defend and keip that place, was mouit, be interceſſioune of ſum gentlemen vpone ſuite, to come and talk with ws, who, when he offered to giue ouer the houſſis, if he could be aſſured of pardone, and preſeruatioune of his awin lyffe, and his ſouldiers, the conditioune was refuiſit, and it was expreſlie declared to him, that he behouit ather ſimplie to render himſelf to his maieſties clemencie, or ſuffer the worſt. So he was dimittit to advyſe and reſolue, till the nixt day.

Vpoune the threttie ane, efter much talking too and froe, by the interceſſoures, the hous was ſo ſpoiled be him and his ſouldieres, that thare was not aboue thrie or four lockes left vpoun dorres, in all the place; and then, thay depairting to the caſtell, we entered withoute danger or truble, about thrie efternone, "et nunc vacua regnamus in aula."

The ſame day, the kirk and ſtiple, thar ſtrongeſt hauld, was delyuered eſpeciallie be ane Johne Guld, the gildeſt knaue of all other, vpoune conditioune maid to him of pardone, and preſeruatioune of his lyffe, for that cryme; for we could haue no angle, in all the place of the Yairds, frie from danger of the ſchottes frome the ſtiple; and we thocht it muche better to get it vpoune that conditioune, than to beat it and the kirk doune, with muche travell, coiſt, and danger.

The 1, 2, 3, and 4 of September, wer ſpent in dealing with Robert and Patrik Halcro, capitane of the caſtell; the reſt of the ſouldiours, incloſed now in the caſtell, wer contentit to render thameſelues, to be tryed, and be judged heir, or beſoir your lordſhips of the counſell; bot thay ar keipit in, and cannot eſcape. The ſaid Patrik Halcro hes offered, be his brother and freinds, to put himſelfe in my hands, to be diſpoſed vpoune at my pleaſour, if pardone wer grantit to Robert. Bot Robert himſelf is ſo affrayed, that he will rather ſuffer all that may befall him, thene render himſelf, withoute promeis and band for his lyffe; ſo the cannones being plantit, and gabiounes ſett at the eiſtend of the kirkyaird, eight aganiſt the broad ſyd of the caſtell, and within ane pair and halfe pair thareof; the truce was diſcharged yiſternicht, and ſevin houres the caſtell beliggered, in all pairtes, with muſcatieres within houſſis, the ſtiple furniſſed with ſextein men, to play vpoune the plateforme of the caſtell, quhar thar ordinance lyes.

Thay begane the ſame nicht on both ſydes, and ſkirmiſched till morning, in quhiche one poor man in the toune, being buſied aboute the filling of ane emptie gabioune, was ſchotte frome the caſtell, thruche the left ſyd, and this day died.

Monunday, the firſt of this inſtante, in the morning, evin at the wryting heirof, we cauſit bothe the peicis be diſcharged vpoune the battlement of the caſtell, quhich haue perced the ſame; and, by Gods grace, we ſall this day beat it doune, and diſmunt thair ordinance.

As we wer buſſie, the days preceding, to gett the caſtell by intreatie; ſo, leaſt nothing ſould be done vpoune thame, we ſent to Birſay, the Laird of Stenhous, with ane ſufficient number, quho took it the 2 of this inſtante, the ſame nicht he cam to it; and keips thair as yit, himſelf and the men that wer in it, priſſoners.

Thare is dyvers perſones, of theſe that wer in the ſtiple and Yairds, quho haue rendred thameſelfs to be tryed and judged be me heir, or as your lordſhips of the counſell ſall appointe; in quhiche mater I crave your lordſhips advyſe and determinatioune, quhat ſalbe done with thame.

The caſtell is verrie ſtrong in the wales and vaultes, and the cannone cannot harme it, except in beating doune the head and turnepike thareof; for quhich caus, giue thay continew in thair obſtinacie, as thay haue ſworne to doe, thar muſt be great prouiſioune of victuall, powder, and bullett; for thar is no victuall to be had heir for money; and if we be not releuid heir with all poſſible haſte, the ſouldiers, and other gentlemen, muſt ather ſterue for wante, or els be enforced to tak be violence from the poore cuntrie men, quherby great truble and dainger may aryſe.

Your lordſhip, alſo, wald provyd that the ſouldiers may haue thar nixt moneths pay, quhich begins to morne, the 6 of this inſtante; for as thair is litle to be had heir for payment, ſo thar is nothing without reddie money.

In caice the caſtell, efter it be beatin in all pairtes aſſaultable, hold out, your lordſhip wald be pleaſit to advyſe and reſolue ws, quhither we ſall inſiſte aganſte thame, with all the violence we may, or by making conditioune of pardone to Robert, and the captane, reſſaue it be delyverie. Thair be many reaſones for the laſt. The tempeſtowous ſeaſoune, the harveſt, the penury of all neceſſaries, and wearines of all ſorte of men, the charges to be deburſed by his maieſtie, the doubtfull event, and vncerten end; and in Robert himſelf, mony things contraire, quhich micht moue his maieſtie to compaſſioune, eſpeciallie the reveling of the whole plote of this rebellioune, the preſenteing of ane band ſubſcryuit be many as we ar informed, with ane contract and diſpoſitioune of ſum lands to Patrik Halcro for vndertaking which; all will periſch, if thay periſche. Bot reſerving and ſubmitting thoſe things to your lordſhips wiſdome, and wiſching all proſperitie, and good healthe to yow, I reſt

Your Lordſhips awin, evir to be commandit,

CAITHNES.

[Datit,] Yairds, 5 September 1614.

Now thare is echt ſchottes diſcharged, and all hes pearced right aboue the vpper vaulte, and nevir one frome the caſtell; quhat thay mynd, God knawis.

To the right honourable his verrie
good lord, my lord of Binning, his Maieſties Secretar of Scotland.

XCIII.—THE BISHOP OF ORKNEY TO LORD BINNING.

Right Honnorable my verie Goode Lord,

The difficulteis of this feruice, and grite want of all thingis neceffarie, hes moved ws to fend the poft, in poft to your lordfhip for fupplee and fpeedie fupport. Thair is no thing omittit, quhilk poffiblie may be attemptit or atchiued, fince the fyft of this inftant, whilk wes the date of our laft letters fend be land: tua peeceis lyand vpoun the tope of the caftell ar difmounted, ane grite breatche maid vpoun that pairt of the houfe, quhair the ftairis fervis for afcending and difcending, the blok houfe beatin, fo that thair poulder and bullett had not bene wanting. Our vther dayis playing had difcouerit the yrine yett, and made ane way for ane affault. The haill poulder, except half ane barrell, is fpent, and all the bullettis for the cannoun, except nyne, as we haif tryed the Robert Elphinftoun and the cannonaris, for thair is beftowit vpoun this batterie fiftie fax fhoit of the cannoun, and 57 of the vther, and in all fourefcoir ftanes of poulder. The wallis of the bodie of the houfe ar fo thick and folide, that we can not think it poffible for thir tua peeceis in lang tyme, and without mutche coift and danger, to prevaill aganis thame. The fouldouris wants thair pay for this moneth, and we can not haif fo mutche as the half or ony pairt thairof, advancit be takkifmen or chalmerlanis, thoght we haif with the fhiref depute imployit all our requeiftis and commandis. Thair is alfo fuche penurie of victuall, that none can be had for meate or drink, for prayer or pryce. The rebellis ar reffoluit obftinatlie to indure and hald oute ; and this day, becaus the cannoun played not vpoun thame, (haueing intelligence, for all that we can do, of our wantis) thay jefted frome the caftell in the moirning, afking quhy our cannouns did fleip fo lang. Ane mercheant fhip of Glafgo arryveing heir frome Dantifh or Cairftoun, we fend for the maifter, and, knoweing that he had fome poulder belonging to the merchantis, who ar not vpoun hir, to help the prefent neceffitie, and forder his maiefties feruice, the erll caufit tak foure centrellis of poulder frome hir at lxxx lib. the centrell, and hes gevin his lordſhips band to him, that he ſalbe payit thairfoir be your lordſhip, quhen he comes to Edinburgh. The neceſſityis and wantis muſt ather be helpit with all thingis requiſite, or certanelie the ſeruice can not be broght to that end whiche is wiſhed and expectit. Yf your lordſhip pleis to aſſuir Robert and Patrik Halcrois of thair lyves, thair is no grite doubt, bot thay wald gif ouer, and the reſt rander thame ſelffis; bot yf that be not grantit, thair is no thing bot force to conſtrain thame. Thay haif ſhoit the Inglife ſmithe through the arme, beſyde the cannoun, and yiſterday haif ſhoit James Ritchieſoun, ane of the ſouldiouris, through the body. The gentilmen of the cuntrey wald be glaid to ſee ane end of thir troublis, quhairby, thay and all the people reſſaues grite hinderance and damageis. The erll, his bruther, and freindis, ar mantenit heir with maill and malt, frome Caithnes, and thoght thay be reſoluit euir to perſequute the ſeruice, yitt it is verie troubleſome and expenſiue to thame, and thair lyveis in daylie dangeir. Off the grite nomber of perſonis who hes bene fauouraris, aſſiſtaris, and partakaris of this rebellioun, we haif thoght beſt to ſond ſome with thair depoſitionis and confeſſionis to your lordſhip, that thay may ather be puniſhit thair according to thair deſervingis, or the cuntrey purgeit and maid red of thame in all tyme comeing. So, aſſureing our ſelffis that your lordſhip, according to your ſo ſure diligence, will, with all haiſt, poſt bak the poſt, furniſt with money for the ſouldiouris, poulder, bullett, and victuall, as, breade, maill, malt, and beir, to be ſauld at ſome reaſounable raite; and wiſheing grace and peace frome God to your lordſhip, I reſt

Your Lordſhip in all dewtie to ſerue yow,

XCIV.—LORD BINNING TO PATRICK HAMILTON.

Brother,

This morning John Stewart is arryued from Orknay, and hes broght in his ſchip, be direction of the Erle of Caithnes, foure of his priſoners, with thair depoſitions; whom I have re-examined this forenone, and have ſend to yow, the copies of thair depoſitions ſent from Orknay, and of my examination of thame this day; together with the copie of the letter which the Biſchop of Orknay ſent with thame. Thay ar now in the Towbuith, in the irnehouſe, becaus the chancelar and counſall will be in this towne this night. I will advyſe with thame, whether it be more fit to execute thame tomorrow, or to delay thair execution for ſum dayes, leaſt thair ſuddane death, might mak the deteanars of the Caſtell of Kirkwall, more deſperat and obſtinat.

The Erle of Caithnes, with great dexteritie, hes maid himſelf maiſter of the ſteple and howſe of the Yairds. He hes no loſſe, prayſed be God, bot of two of his men ſlayne and ane hurt. We ar perſuaded that all the prouiſions which thay requyre be thair letter, wer in Orknay before thair letter came to my handis. I have this day ſent to Leith, two hundreth bullets for the cannon and batard, and am provyding all vther neceſſars, which ſall be reddie this night and imbarked tomorrow, God willing, to the effect the ſchip may mak ſaile the morine, if God grant thame proſperous wind. This I have thoght fit to wryte to yow, to be ſignified to his maieſtie and my lord chamberlane; thinking that the copie of the biſchops letter and the priſoners depoſitions ar the beſt information I can give yow.

I pray yow recommend to his maieſtie and my lord chamberlane, the fauorable and ſpeidie expedition of the Erle of Caithnes and Biſchop of Orknayes buſines, and vſe all poſſible haiſt in the returne of his maieſties commandements. So, in haiſt, I commit yow to God. Edinburgh, this 13 September [1614?]

Your loving brother,

BINNING.

I haue ſend for the juſtice deput and juſtice clerk, and aduerteiſed my lord chancelar, who came yeſternight to Pinkie, and will be heir this efternone.

To my beloued brother, Maiſter
Patrik Hamilton, at Court.

XCV.—THE LORDS OF PRIVY COUNCIL TO THE EARL OF CAITHNESS.

OUR VERRIE HONOURABLE GOOD LORD,

WE haue reſſaued your lordſhips ſeuerall letters of the fyfte and nynte of this monethe. The anſueir of ſo much as may concerne the prouiſioune of munitioune and victuales, is contenit in the letters ſent withe your lordſhips ſute poiſte, be ws the deputie theſaurar and ſecretar; and thairfoir, we haue thocht good be thir lynes, only to ſignifie to your lordſhip, our coniunct opinioune in the pointes of greataſt moment, quharein your lordſhip deſyres to be reſolued. Firſt, anent the ordour to be tane withe the priſſoners, being in your lordſhips powar, quhidder your lordſhipp ſall try thame in Orknay, or ſend thame heir, it appeires more fitt that your lordſhip tak ordour with thame in that cuntrie, for thare tranſporte hither, wilbe faſchious, expenſiue, longſume, and dangerous: And it is expedient, that exemplar puneiſment be vſed, quhar the rebellioune was attempted, when your lordſhip ſall think the time conuenient to inflict deſerued puneiſment vpoune the great malefactouris, vnles it wer to ſend ſum few to this toune, quhom your lordſhip knawis to be hable to diſcouer things greatlie importeing his maieſtie; and ſuche of the reſt, as your lordſhip thinks mor meit to be baneiſed or pardoned, vpoune ſuch cautioune or vther proviſioun, not to returne in the cuntrie, or compeirance of ſuche, as ar permitted to remaine within the cuntrie, befoir the ordinar judges, quhen thay ſall be laufullie cited, we muſt abſolutelie referre to your lordſhips awin honourable diſcretioune.

As to your lordſhips deutte, how to proceid in the offer maid be Robert Stewarte, and Patrik Halcroe, to render vpoune conditioune of thair lyves, becaus of the difficulties quhich your lordſhip foreſies in the ſeruice, if it be to be performed be violence and be aſſaulte, and that the granteing thame conditiounes, may diſcouer the band maid amongs the rebelles, and the infeftement grantit to Patrik Halcro; we think that it will appeir verrie ſtrange to his maieſtie, if they ſall now be reſſaued vpoune conditioune of ſaifetie of thair lyffes, efter ſo muche expenſis beſtowit be his maieſtie, and ſo much travell, dainger, and coiſt, ſufteanit be your lordſhip, in the proſecutioune of his maieſties commiſſioune, be powar and force, quhen as, long befoir the vndertaking of that charge, the Laird of Murchill offered to induce thame, vpoune eaſie conditiounes, to render, if thay micht haue aſſurance of thaire lyffes: lykas, ſenſyne, the Erle of Caſſelles offered to caus thame render all obedience, without ony truble or expenſis to his maieſtie, if he micht haue warrand to aſſure thaire lyues. Beſyds, that his maieſtie hes cauſed adverteis, that he wald wiſch your lordſhip to vſe the powar of your commiſſioune, to geiue remiſſions ſpairinglie, and vpoune good conſideratioune; and thairfore, we wald rather wiſche your lordſchip, to aſſay all vther good meanis to accompleis the ſeruice, nor be granting remiſſioune to theſe two. Bot if thay will render to your lordſhip, vpoune conditioune of ſaiftie, quhill his maieſties pleaſour be knawin, we think thair is many reaſounes quhy thay ſould not diſpair to find grace with his maieſtie, quhois great mercie and clemencie is notour to the world, in infinit pruiffes. We think it alſo fitt, that your lordſhip eſſay ather be grante of pardone, or ſuche other conditioune as your lordſhip thinks meit, to withdraw from Roberte, and Patrik Halcroe, all thair affiſtantes, or ſo many of them as may be; and, if it be poſſibill, to moue thame to render the houſe, and delyuer the ſaids Robert Stewarte, and Patrik Halcroe, to your lordſhips hands; and failyeing thairof, that thay may leiue thame, and come thame ſelfis to your lordſhip, vpoune ſuche conditioune, as, with his maieſties honour, and good of his ſeruice, may be made to thame. Bot we always deſyre, that any favour to be ſchawin to any of thair compleices, be vpoune cleir prouiſioune, that thay ſall conceall nothing that ſall be inquyred of thame, concerning the deuyſe and proſecutioune of this rebellioune, ſo far as thay knaw: and if your lordſhip cane learne the aſſured treuthe tharof, be any quho cumes in your lordſhips hands, that your lordſhip may ſend the pairties and depoſitiounes heir, and thay ſall be vſed according to your lordſhips recommendatioune; and the conditiounes maid be your lordſhip to thame ſall be faithfullie obſerved. We wiſch that als many of the cheife rebelles may fall in your lordſhip's frie powar, but conditione, as may be; bot if your lordſhip can haue the caſtell rendered to your lordſhip, and Robert, and Patrik Halcro, in your hands, to be vſed at his maieſties pleaſour, we ar perſwadit, his maieſtie will weill allow of it, any vther conditioune your lordſhip ſall mak to vthers. And quhill that be, it will be fitte that your lordſhip uſe all poſſible means to ſtraite and force thame, and all thare affiſtantes, with ſuch diligence, as the ſeaſone of the yeir, his maieſties great charges, your lordſhips trauell, truble, dainger, and expenſis, and the hazard of your lordſhips freinds and ſeruands, dois requyre. So, wiſching your lordſhip ſpeide, honourable and happie ſucces, in the performeing of your charge, and all vther your lordſhips good interpryſes, we reſt

XCVI.—LORD BINNING TO PATRICK HAMILTON.

Brother,

The counſals note ſent heirwith will expres that the lordis have bene more empeſched at this meiting with particular actions nor publict affaires. I communicat to my lord chancelar the letter which I reſſaued from the Erle of Caithnes, and be his aduyce, the Archibiſchop of Glaſgo, and the deputie theſaurars, I wrait ane anſuer. The copies of both I have ſent to yow, and will pray yow to ſeik opportunitie to ſchaw thame to his maieſtie and my lord chamberlane, to the effect we may vnderſtand be your diligent aduerteiſment, if his maieſtie allow of oure anſueir, which we haue framed, to the bringing that ſeruice to ane gude and ſpeidie end: becaus we perſaue be the erles letter, which is all writtin be the Biſchop of Orknayes hand, that thay renconter great difficulties, which continouance of tyme will augment. Bot if his maieſtie miſlyke any pairt of oure opinion, and be pleaſed to command any thing to the contrarie, we may mak his royall pleaſour knowne to the Erle of Caithnes with all poſſible ſpeid. The Biſchop of the Iles hes protracted long tyme verie vnproffitablie, whairof he now perſaues the errour, and regrates it be ane letter which we reſſaued from him yiſternight, whairby he promeiſes now to go fordward to Ila; bot verie vnſeaſonablie, becaus the cuntrie people, be whoes aſſiſtance he might have expected to have ſtraited the rebels, ar now ſo buſied with thair harveſt, that thay will rather aduenture to diſobey the proclamation, nor loſſe the cornes, whairvpon thay and thair families muſt leive whill this tyme twelmonth. Alwayes, we haue granted him all the warrandis he requyres, and ſall omit no thing, that is in oure power to aduance his ſeruice, and encourage him thairin; albeit I mixed my laſt anſweir to him with ſum bitternes, becaus his inexcuſable delayes had greatlie preiudged his maieſties ſeruice.

I pray yow learne and wryte his maieſties pleaſour anent the foure priſoners ſent from Orknay, whoes depoſitions wer in the laſt packet; for the Earle of Caithnes hes ſent thame as notable rebels, and thairfore it wald be knowne, whidder his maieſtie will have thame executed or delayed. So, prayeing yow to vſe diligence in ſignifeing his maieſties pleaſour in thir affaires, I commit you to God. Edinburgh, 15 September [1614?]

XCVII.—THE LORD CHANCELLOR TO LORD BINNING.

Most Honourable Good Lord,

The ſam morning cam to me the bailzeis of Bruntiland, and hes ſchawin me, thair is a Spaniſch ſchippe cum into thair harberie, ſwa lekt, that incontinent, efter thair incomeing, ſchea ſat doune, and is not able to go out againe. Thair was in hir 32 men. Thay ſay thay ar fiſchars of whailes, and thair erand aboute our Iles was for that. The bailzeis of the toune ſchaws to me alſo thair is ſum prouiſioune in thair ſchipt and geir, that bears appeirance thame to be of that vocatioune; but other ways thaj appeir alſo to be ſlicht men, hable and tydie, hes nather cokket nor chartour pairtie; and ſeing of the brootes was heir, of the grit preparatioun of a Spaniſche nauie, and vther foraners, I think of our dewtie we cannot omitt to try quhat may be in this, for ſic people hes not beane in vſe to haunte heir away. I haue commandit the bailzeis to put in thair towbuith the capitane, wha is a Spanizard, the pilott, quho is ane Inglifch man, and hes Spaniſche languadge, thair chirurgian, quha is a Frenche man, and ane Scotts man, quhome thay tooke in north at Aberdour [Aberdeen?], in our coaſte, to be pilate to thame in this firthe. I haue commandit thame alſo to caus watche vpoune all the reſt, that thay go not from the houſe wher thay ludge. The bailzeis ſchew me alſo, that this morning the ſkippar, being a ſchipboord with ſum of his companie, is gone to Leithe. All this I thocht good to ſignifie to your lordſhip, as the bearar will alſo declare to your lordſhip, at mair lenth. I think meiteſt, that your lordſhip ſall incontinent ſend doune to Lethe, and caus bring vp to yow the ſkippar, with any vthers ar thair with him, to be examinet be your lordſhip, haiſing with yow my lord theſaurar, advocat, or ony others ar of the counſell in toune; and that your lordſhip alſo ſend ouer to Bruntiland, a warrand to the bailzeis thairof, to bring ouer to your lordſhip the foreſaid captane, chirurgiane, Inglifchmane, and Scottes man, to be alſo examined thair be yow, vpoun all particulars, as ye fall find occafioune in your wifdome.

XCVIII.—LORD BINNING TO THE LORD CHANCELLOR.

My most Honourable Gude Lord,

Maister James Raith hes delyverit to me your lordfhips letter writtin this day, aduertifing me of the directioune gevin be your lordfhip to the bailzeis of Bruntiland, to put in thair towbuthe the captane, the pilot, and chirurgiane of the Spanifche fchipe arryued in thair harborie, and the Scottis mariner that is with thame; willing me to fend for thefe priffoners, and to caus the bailzeis of this toune to tak the Spanifch fkippar, and fum of his companie, and bring thame to this toune to be examined be me, and any of the counfell I can haue reddieft with me; which I fould prefentlie haue obeyd, if I fund probabilitie of thair fudden depairtour. Bot fince thair fchippe cannot be of ony farder vfe to thame, I cannot think that thay can be hable to remoue fone frome this. Nather dois it feame fitt, in my waik judgement, to deale fufpitiouflie or too rigourouflie with thame; for fince thair is publict peace betwene his maieftie and thair king, and that thair is not ony of his maiefties fubiects that compleanis on tham, nor ony goods within thair fchippe which may breid fufpitioune of onie piracie committed be thame, gif ony rigour be vfed aganis thame, thair reporte of it to thair king, may moue him to deale maliciouſlie with oure merchantes, of quhome ane thowſand go to his dominiouns, whair one of his ſubiects come to this cuntrie; and giue the hard vſeage of this people gaue beginning to ſuch inconvenient, the blame wald be imputed to the authouris of the firſt ſeueritie. This I am bold to propone to your lordſhips conſideratioune: Bot, if your lordſhip perſiſt in your opinione, I ſall heir attend your lordſhips comeing, and aſſiſte and follow your lordſhip in any thing your lordſhip thinks fitt to be done for his maieſties ſeruice, and good of the cuntrie. The reporte of the comeing of the Spaniſche nauie in the narrow ſeas is fals, praiſed be God; to quhois protectioun I humblie committ your lordſhip, and reſtis. Edinburgh, 22 September, at nicht.

XCIX.—LORD BINNING TO PATRICK HAMILTON.

Brother,

I have this day reſſaued your letters of the fyftent. I have not any mater to wryte to yow, becaus I have hard nothing from Orknay or Ila ſince my laſt, ſent to yow vpon thuriſday laſt, ſince which tyme I have ſtayed in this towne with my lord Aduocat, expecting your vncles returne this night; and if he cum, I intend tomorrow, God willing, to go to Fyfe, and to cum bak vpon Mononday.

Yow haue done wyſelie to reſolue to conforme your journay to my lords pleaſour. I prav yow pairt with his fauour, and tak ſo ſpeidie ordour with your turnes heir, as you may be at court, at the tyme, which his lordſhip ſall aſſigne; for thair is great reaſon why you ſould not be long abſent, at this tyme, as yow may know before yow cum from court, if rumours be trew. Bot yow muſt not tak notice of any ſuch mater, without farder certantie nor I haue as yet. I know not what tyme yow will ſie oure freind that is ſent for, nor who will accumpanie him; bot that will be ſignified to yow in dew tyme.

Sanders intendis to be with you or it be long, with confidence of gude ſpeid in his buſines.

I am beholden to the gentleman to whom you ſchew the note concerning the coales, and wiſh him gude ſpeid in all his affaires. If I can do more for him, I ſall be hairtelie redde. Yow know my lord appeired to deſtinat that for ane vther, bot if he hath thoght fit to chainge his pourpoſe, it is no dowt for gude reſpects.

Sir James Stewart, as I heir, hes ſent his ſeruand to court, for what cauſe I know not, vnles it be to expeid his warrands for the lord Blantyres place in ſeſſion and counſall; for it [is] conſtantlie ſaid and beleiued heir, that Sir James hes his dimiſſion for bothe.

I am perſuaded you haue informed his maieſtie, and my lord, of the two ſeuerall furneiſſings of victuall and munition ſent from this to the erle of Caithnes, which I hope will more nor abundantlie furneis him evrie way, during his ſtay thair. Yow haue done exceiding weill to remember ſo effectuallie the biſchop of Orknayes buſines; for before God, your vncle and I wer ſo far ingadged to him, when we perſuaded him to aſſiſt this ſeruice, that if he had bene diſappoynted we had reſſaued inexcuſable diſcredit; I pray yow alſo remember the warrand for the erle of Caithnes admiſſion vpon the counſall.

If this letter be accumpanied with ane ſignatour of myne, of the Tempillands, which I haue boght from the lord of Torphechin and Maiſter Robert Williamſon, I pray yow ſute the expedition thairof, of his maieſtie and my lord. If any difficultie be maid, aſſure thame that thair is no thing conteaned in it, bot that which wes in the lord Torphechins infeftment, granted to his great vncle be the Queine, in anno 1563, and euer ſince poſſeſſed be his vncle and him, while of late that he diſponed theſe Tempillands to Maiſter Robert Williamſon, in anno 1609. Thay ar vnworthie, poure parcels of land, of ane aiker or two, or thrie a piece, diſperſed in many ſeuerall pairts of the cuntrie, and diſmembred of before for the moſt pairt; Angus being diſponed to the lord of Balmerinoes father, and now to himſelf; Perth to my lord of Scone; Roxburgh to young Ferniherſt; and eight or nyne vther ſchyres to ſeuerall perſones, ſo that the worſt and deireſt is fallin in my hand. If any exception be takin aganis the regalitie, or any vther thing conteaned in my ſignatour, deſyre that it may be exped vnder his maieſtie and my lords hands, if thay pleaſe, and ſent to be conſidered be your vncle and the Aduocat; with direction to ſtay it, if it exceid the privileges conteaned in the lord of Torphechin and Maiſter Robert Williamſons infeftments, for I cannot imagine that my miſluk will be ſuch, as not to be allowed to poſſeſs that, whairof thay had right and poſſeſſion, which thay have tranſferred in me.

John Stewarts ſchip, which cairied the laſt prouiſions to Orknay, maid ſaill from this vpon Setterday laſt, and had the wind ſo fauorable, as we coniecture, that ſcho wes in Orknay vpon Mononday, at night. I can not meruell aneuch at the erle of Caithnes ſlow aduerteiſment. I pray yow be cairefull of the warrand for his place in counſall, and for diſpatche of the biſchop of Orknayes ſecurities, for thay much import oure credit; and, if that wer well done, I ſall not raſhlie heirefter vndertak much, having ſo ſmall credit to performe.

I thoght to haue diſpatched thir letters vpon the 21, bot your vncles ſlow returne to this towne ſtayed me till now. This teſtimoniall of the laufulnes of Maiſter Richard Spens his ſones birth is recommended be my lord Aduocat.

I haue ſend to yow my vther letter concerning the Spaniſh ſchip, with the copies concerning that buſines, to be ſchawne to his maieſtie and my lord, at your firſt occaſion.

If yow find any ſuch difficultie in my ſignatour, as my planeſt buſines vſes to reſſaue, mak no farder inſtancie in it, bot ſend it bak to me; for it may laufullie pas heir as ane vſuall grant, conteaning no noueltie nor fauour. God be with yow. Edinburgh, the 23 September [1614?]

Your loving brother,

BINNING.

Patrik Hamilton, at Court.

C.—THE BISHOP OF THE ISLES TO LORD BINNING.

MY SPECIALL GOODE LORD,

RECEAVING frome my Lord Secretare, ane verie byiting lettre, laying the weytt of the taking of the houſe of Dunavaig, vpoun the negligence of my keiparis theirof, and the long keiping theirof be the rebellis, vpoun my ſleuthe, whilk ſemed to proceid, ather of ſome of my vnfreindis informatioune of his lordſchip, or els of his lordſchipis conſait of me, whilk I neuer merited; I preaſed als cairfullie as my might or credit micht extend to, (albeit I wanttit both place, purſe, and credit neidfull to haue affectuatit ſuche ane earand,) to releive my ſelf of that imputatione, and with all diligence I tuik my jurney toward the Yles, prouydit with ſuche ſervitours and ſmall cumpany of men as I micht with ſuche haiſt procure; and thinking my number too ſmall to venture in conference or plotting with rebellis, I ſend ſex of the beſt of my cumpany weill acquented with theme, to theme with the remiſſione; thinking, that, according to thair oathe and promeiſe be wrytt, and vpoun the reſett theirof, they ſuld haue deliuered the houſe; whilk they returned anſuer with ſome of my ſeruands to me, that they ſuld be reddie to do, within tua houris eftir they had advyſit and being reſoluit whidder the remiſſione wes ſufficient or no, as I wrait to your lordſchip of before. Vpoun the whilk promeiſe I ſent ouer my ſeruandis the ſecund tyme, and I reſted ſtill in Arrane, thinking they ſuld haue keipit their promeiſe, but they returnit the ſecund anſuer to me, that they culd not delyuer that houſe, bot to my ſelf being perſonall preſentt, and to reſſaue ane ſufficient aſſurance be wreat, of my freindſchipe in all tyme cuming; and therefore, leiſt they ſuld haue excuſed their rebellione in reſpect of my crayuing to come that far vnto theme, and leiſt that your lordſchip ſuld haue layed ane new burdein vpoun my ſleuthe, inreſpect of the neglect of that ſeruice, and that, feiring the treacherie of theſe rebellis, I prouydit ſuche cumpany, as ather my credit amangſt my freindſhip, or of any money whilk I might procure, to convoy me thair. The harueſt wes ſo great ane impediment, that the nightbouris in the Iles, and the Yles men themſelfis [wer] ſo cairles in this ſeruice, that for the moſt pairt, all men refuiſed me, and in ſpeciall M'Len and M'Leude of Hereis, ſua that I culd obtene no nomber to go thairwith, except threſcoir and ten perſonis, of the whiche, their wes fyiftie weageit ſoldiouris and tuentie followeris of the Laird of Ardincaple, my nevoy the Laird of Ranfurlie, and my ſelf. With theſe I landit in Ila, the 19 of this inſtant, being aſſuredlie informit, that Donald Gorme of Slait and the Laird of Hardancaple, whome I had ſend befoir my ſelf, yit agane to the houſe to mitigat the rebellis humouris, pacife and move theme without delay to obey the charge. I wes alſo deſyred be word and wreat, that the tenentis of the cuntrey wald concur with me, and that the beſt half of the Clan Donald of that Ile, would aſſiſt me, to the whilk effect, ſome of theme mett me be the way, and convoyit me to Ilay, and remanit with me night and day, while the 21 day, at aucht houris in the morning, who depairting then frome me, and Hardencaple and Donald Gorme comeing to me, and gave vp commoning and vtter refuſell to delyuer the houſe any maner of way; and immediatlie aftir theme, the greitteſt nomber of the name of Clan Donald of that Yle, both of the taikeris of that houſe and ſuche as medlit not with it befoir, come togidder to the nomber of ane hundreth men in armes and mae, and ley betwixt ws and our boittis, whilks they immediatlie brake, all to the nomber of four boittis, and ſpoyled the haill gudis thare out of by our knawledge, affirming, that they come onlie to confer with me and pak vp maters, be the aduyſe and interceſſione of Donald Gorme and the Laird of Hardencaple,—while the 22 day, about aucht of the clok, when they reſortit to theme, ane vther hundrethe and mae, pairtlie of the cuntrey men, pairtlie of their owin accuſtomit followaris, and ſo having ws cut of frome our boittis, they directed a threating to ws, that they wald put ws all to the edge of the ſword without exceptione, or els it behovit ws to deliuer ſuche of our nomber to theme as they wald chuſe: Vnto the whilk for eſchewing of bluid and greittare inconvenientis, it behovit me to yeild, and ſo to chuſe out of our cumpany, my nevoy the Laird of Ranfurlie, and my ſone Mr Thomas, whome they haue taikin with theme to the caſtell of Dunavaig, whairby your lordſhip may perceave how traitourouſlie I haue bein oft deſaiffit be that peſtiferous clan, how hard my caice is many wayes, and in what trouble my freindis ar cum in, be my cair to ſerue the kingis maieſtie, both in keiping that houſe and in preaſing to recouer, vpoun litle or none of his maieſties charges, whiche I dout not, as his hienes, ſo your lordſchip will ſie remedit, and that with all diligence, vtherwiſe I am vndone: nather can I depairt frome this yle, whill I ſie ſome comfortabill way for the releif of their captiues, as moir particularlie I haue giuin informatione to the bearer. Beſeiking your lordſchip to grant thairto, whilk ſalbe nowayis preiudiciall to his maieſties or your lordſchipis intentione in that particulare, what euir it be; his maieſtie recouered the biſchope of Darayis houſe and his wyf, whoſe houſe and caſtell wes taikin be Odochortie, and recompenſed the ſkaithe: his hienes wairit expenſes vpoun the recouerie of the houſe of Dunavaig, when it wes taikin frome my Lord of Scone, who had for the keiping theirof ane thouſand merks ſterling a yeer. I hoip your lordſchip will not ſie me and my freindis wrak, whilk referring to your conſcieabill diſcretione, and beſeiking God to blis your lordſchip, I reſt

CI.—LORD BINNING TO PATRICK HAMILTON.

Brother,

I hope that touard the end of nixt oulk, yow will ſie my Lord of Balmerino at court, to whom I aſſure myſelf yow will do the beſt ſeruices yow can.

I wrait to yow of Sir James his journay to court, bot I haue not ſenſyne hard any certantie of it. Bot it is ſaid that Mr William Leuiſton hes cairied thither the dimiſſions of the places of Counſall and Seſſion, with preſentations for his admiſſion. Whither he have any warrand for renunciation of the erldome I know not.

So ſone as I reſſaued your letter, I reſolved vpon the rolls, bot becaus the anſweir muſt be returned be your vncles advyce, who is not yet reddie, it muſt be delayed till the nixt packet.

As I wrait before, if yow find difficultie or delay in my ſignatour, forbeare to mak buſines for ſo vnworthie ane mater; and ſend it back to me with any anſweir yow get.

Your freinds ar, praiſed be God, in gude health, and your nevew James of Innerueik yiſterday mairied; I wiſh and hope it be happelie and in gude tyme.

I ſend Maiſter Thomas Murrayes letters with diligence as thay wer directed; bot I can not reſolue ſuddenlie to embrace the pourpoſe whairof you wrait to me, for reaſons which I ſall wryte or declaire to yow at meiting. For your jurnay, as I wrait before, I think yow may diſpoſe it as yow pleaſe, having my lords gude leave to it.

The attendance vpon aduerteiſment from Orknay ſtill deteanis me priſoner in this towne, ſo as I haue diſchairged no dewtie to any of my freindis in the cuntrie all this vaicance. So I commit yow to God. This 28 of Sept.

Your loving brother,

CII.—LORD BINNING TO PATRICK HAMILTON.

BROTHER,

I HAVE reſſaued your letters in the packets of the 24 and 26 of this moneth, to which I wald have anſuered ſoner, if I had not delayed expecting evrie houre aduerteiſment from the Erle of Caithnes whiche is not yet cum: nather haue we hard thir fyftene dayes from the Biſchop of the Iles. I haue reſſaued the Biſchop of Orknayes ſignatours, whairin, God knowes, I had no melling bot for the aduancement of his maieſties ſeruice. I pray yow be not unmyndfull of his maieſties warrand for admitting the Erle of Caithnes vpon the counſall, for I am perſuaded that his gude ſeruice, will merite that and much greater fauour from his maieſtie.

I haue appoynted the bailyies of Edinburgh and Leith to be cairefull, ſo ſone as the olde Lady Athole and hir pretended huſband ſall cum on land, to tak ordour for thair ſaif detention, whill thay vnderſtand the counſals pleaſour concerning thame.

So ſone as I vnderſtude be your letter how vnwilling his maieſtie wes that any hope of mercie ſould be ſchewne to Robert Stewart, I preſentlie wrait of his maieſties reſolution to the Erle of Caithnes, and for his better aſſurance copied the verie wourdis of that pairt of your letter, and incloſed thame within my letter to him, which I directed with all poſſible haiſt with ane poiſt be land, becaus my meſſages be ſea, ar ſo incertane, as miſluk may delay thame verie long be the way. I haue challenged his lordſchip and the biſchop of Orknay ſo hardlie, for thair negligence in not ſending land meſſingers to ws evrie oulk, twiſe at leaſt, that I am perſuaded thay will not heirefter commit the lyke ouerſight, ſo long as thay haue occaſion to attend that ſeruice. Rumours from the Low cuntries and from court, put oure people in feir of the arrivall of ane Spaniſh navie, touards the Sluce. If yow learne any certantie of maters of that kynd, I pray yow let me heir it be your letters. So, till farder occaſion, I commit yow to God. Edinburgh, 28 Sept. [1614?]

THE bearer heirof, Archibald Cambell, having tane earniſt trauellis to moue the Laird of Cadell, to conſent to accept the few of Ila vpon condicions far aboue any thing that any reſponſall man of qualitie did euer to my knouledge offer for it,—he hes alſo perſuaded Cadell to vndertak the recouerie of Dvneveg, be his owne forces and at his privat chairges, he being furneiſſed of canon, pouder and bullet, be his maieſtie; onlie relying vpon his maieſties gracious acknouledgement, efter the ſeruice be well accompleiſſed, as the deputie theſaurer, the Aduocat and I have writtin breiflie to my Lord Chamberlane; whairwith I have thoght fit to acquent yow, to the effect yow may giue your freindlie concurrence to this gentilman in his affaires, becaus I knew him well affected to his maieſties ſeruice. It pleaſed my Lord Chamberlane, to recommend to me the aduancement of his maieſties benefite be fewing of the iles, whairof I am ignorant, except ſo much as I may learne, be information of theſe who know the true eſtait of theſe cuntries, wherein I know not any to be more truſted, nor the bearer; and thairfore, if yow vnderſtand my Lord Chamberlane to perſiſt in that reſolution, it will be fit that his lordſhip direct this gentilman to relate the true eſtate of theſe cuntries to his lordſhip, and the beſt meanes to reduce thame to peace, ciuilitie, and proffeit; and thairefter what my lord ſall be pleaſed to command me, I ſall moſt willinglie obey it. Referring all farder to your nixt aduerteiſment, I commit yow to God. Edinburgh, 28 Sept. [1614?]

CIV.—LORD BINNING TO JOHN MURRAY.

SIR,

I WILL neuer leive of to trouble yow, ſo long as my freindis haue to do at court; ſpeciallie, when thair ſute is joyned with his maieſties ſeruice, as at this tyme the laird of Glengarnok, who hes begun to giue pruif of his affection and travell for advancement of his maieſties royall diſſein of plantation of Ireland; and, ſince his reſort to that cuntrie, hes performed gude ſeruice in ſuch affaires as hes bene inioyned to him be the eſtate and counſall of that kingdome, having of late gottin knowledge that ſum landis ar fallin in his maieſties hands, which ar to be diſponed to ſuch, as being able and willing, to give perfyte aſſurance for dew plantation, ſall mak firſt ſute for the ſame, and find beſt aſſiſtance of freindis in thair petition. I haue tane occaſion to recommend his buſſines to your fauour, bothe for the gudewill I owe to the gentilman, as me ſpeciall gude freind, and for the gude of his maieſties ſeruice, whom it greatlie concernis, that lands vaicand in that cuntrie, be gifted to ſuch as ar weill affected to the ciuilitie and quyetnes of the kingdome, and be thair reſidence may bothe ſtay troubles, and aduance policie and gude ordour.

So, hoping, that, according to your accuſtumed kyndnes, yow will interpone your paynes and credit for furtherance of this gentilmans laufull buſſines, I committ you to God, and reſt

Your moſt affectionat and obedient freind,

BINNING.

CVI.—BISHOP OF GLASGOW AND LORD BINNING TO KING JAMES VI.

MOST SACRED AND GRATIOUSE SOUERAIGNE,

THE expectations we had to haif wrocht fum agrement betwen the lord of regifter and fir John Skein, movit ws to differ the report of our trauellis in that bufines vnto this tym. According as your maieftie was plefit to direct ws, that we fuld trauel to haif Maifter Alexander Sken refavit in the office of hornings, or then caufe fum fatiffactioun be gefin him be the clerk of regifter, we vrgit that firft, and hafing reffavit his anfwer twiching the office, that he culd not difpone it for dyverfe reafons, we cam to the fecond, anent fatiffactioun. The clerk of regifter offerit to fubmit him felf to ws two, in that point; only excufit that he culd not fubmit with Alexander Skein, as ane with quhom he had no thinge to do, but with his father or brother, that had the office before, he wes willing. We bothe thocht that none of tham fuld differ vpon that point to agre, for if he gaif ſatiſfactioun, it wes al one to him quho ſuld reſaif it, if he ſuld be diſchargit be tham al. But he anſwerit, that he had ſignefeit his mynd to your maieſtie in thoſe termis, quhiche he culd not alter without your maieſties commandement. On the other ſyd, we fand tham no way inclynit to reſaif ſatiſfactioun, becauſe the burthen lay vpon Maiſter Alexander, be thair privat bargain amongeſt tham ſelfis, to mak payment to his father out of the office, yeirly, of the ſowm of ane thowſand merkis Scottis, quhiche thai knew the ſatiſfactioun that wold be modifeit ſuld never extend to. And ſo, findinge theſe difficulties, we haif left the buſines and tham to do as thai may beſt. Since this is the true account of our procedings in that mater, qhairin, as in al things, we ſal ever be careful at our poſſibilities to ſerve as your maieſtie ſal pleiſe to command ws, praying Almychtie God to bliſſe your maieſtie with al happines, and many yeirs, we humbly kiſſe your maieſties hands.

Your Maieſties moſt humble and obedient ſervants,

CVII.—THE EARL OF CAITHNESS TO LORD BINNING.

MY VERRIE SPECIALL GOOD LORD,

IN reſpect your letter daitit from Edinburgh, the fyfte of September, and come in my hands the fourteint of this inſtante, declaring your lordſhip's diligence for expeding of all neceſſars for this ſeruice, quhich I haif more nor neid for, daylie I, and all that is heir with me, hes

hote feruice with thir moſt bluidie and barbarous rebeles and traitours; thay haue killed four, and the laſt is ane Willeam Iruine, ane Orknay gentleman, one quho, ſince his deathe, I haue hard was ane moyenour, and ane greit freind to the traitouris. God is juſt in his judgementes, for amongs ws all ſtanding by him, he is ſchote dead vpoune the nyntente of this moneth at twa houres in the efternone; ane cuntrieman of myne ſchott throughe the arme, and ane ſouldiert ſchott behind, beneth the bak, and one ſlaine in the caſtell. All this is done this laſt dayis ſkirmiſche (thair is not one day that I am idle, except the ſabothe.) My lord, I will aſſure your lordſhip, thay ar moſt deſperat and cruell tratours, and is ane verrie ſtrong hould, and nothing can do to thame except the cannone. Quhair your lordſhip hes ſett doune in your letter of his maieſties advyſe, that I ſould be ſpairing to grant pardone to notorious rebelles and malefactoures; my lord, God forbid, that I ſould tak vpoune me to grante ony pardone to ony, quho hes ſo heighlie offendit his ſacred majeſtie: befoir his majeſtie wer not repairit to his honour, be all the lyffes of thir bluidie tratoures, that is within this diuiliſch caſtle, I rather be buried heir, for, my lord, I will be plane withe your lordſhip as to ane faithfull counſellour to his maieſtie, I find none bot the name of Sinclar, in all this land, bot hes bene in counſell of this rebellioune, or eles airt and pairt; for thair is ane band ſubſcryuit be ſeuin hundred of this cuntrie people, to Robert Stewarte and Patrik Halcro, to die and leiue with thame. This rebellioune was devyſit in Edinburgh caſtell, in winter laſt, and giue God grant me that gud fortune to get on lyue Robert Stewart or Patrik Halcro, his maieſtie will hear of good ſporte. I haue Andro Martine, quhome I mynd quhen I find occaſioune, be ſea, to ſend him to be examined be your lordſhips of his majeſties moſt honourable priuie counſell. I haue cauſit him ſubſcryue his awin depoſitioune, vpoune the quhilk your lordſhip will get mater eneuche to gar him ſpeak Scottis, giue he lyk to blot his maiſter to be the hounder out of his ſone, to do all that he hes done. I can not, nor may not, ſtop the inhabitantes of this toune from ſpeiking with the traitoures, geuing of thame meit and drink, making thame aduertiſſit quhat I am doing, and making daylie and nightlie advertiſmentes of all that thay can aither heir or ſie. I will in-

treat your lordſhip to mak me advertiſit, with diligence, of the counſels mynd, quhat I ſall do to thame, both men and wemen. I haue takin nyne or ten men of Birſay, quho was with Robert, and was platters with him in this rebellioune, and ſpeciall keipares of the hous of Birſay, quhom I mynd to put to ane aſſyſe, and, giue thay be conuict, to hang thame for ane exemple to vthers. My lord, this ſeruice is not lyk to haue ſo haiſtie ane end as I would. Your lordſhip knawis my commiſſioune grantit to me is no longer then two moneth, of the quhilkis thair is fyue weiks and more outgone; and giue it will pleas your lordſhips, of his maieſties priuie counſell, hould me heir till it pleas God that I put ane finall end to this miſchante rebellioune, I would haue ane new commiſſioune, with all priuilege neidfull, to the ſeruice be endit; for I proteſt to God I neuir, nor nevir ſall, cum to ane cuntrie that may be compairit in falſett to this cuntrie people. I vſe thame both with lenitie and fair formes, as the biſchope will informe your lordſhip; and, for all that I can do, thay haue thair ſecret moyen and traffecke with the traitores; and as for Maiſter Johne Finlaſoune, thair is no remaneing heir to him, giue I wer once oute of this cuntrie, for man, wyffe, and bairne, haits him to the deathe: Thay haue minted twyſe to kill him ſince his comeing heir with me, war not I. Bot now ſeing, thay ſie me to tak plaine pairte with him, thay ar begune to behauld him. Since the beginning of this letter, I haue ſtayit to wryte to your lordſhip, hoping evir vpoune better news. The bark and poiſt came heir the twentie twa, or twentie thrie, with all prouiſſioune neceſſar for the ſeruice; and, efter thair arryvall, I ſent to thame in the caſtell, if they wold cum out and put thameſelffs in his maieſties will, ſimpliciter, I wald lett thame cum out. The penult of this inſtante, it hes pleaſit God, of his mercie, to end this ſeruice in my hands: The houſe is myne, Robert in my hands, and all cumed to me except Patrik Halcro, quhome as yit I haue not ſein. All is cumd to his maieſties honour, praiſit be God. I haue ſex ſlaine to me, many hurte; the ſouldier I wraite was hurte is dead. I will aſſure your lordſhip, it is one of the ſtrongeſt houſſis in Breitane, for I will bring with me to your lordſhip, cannone billets, both brokkin lyk goulfe bales vpoune the caſtellet, and clovin in twa halffis. I could not till now enter with extremitie, with the followars of Robert, till I was maiſter of the houſe, for fear of making more adoe, ſeing the houſe was ſo ſtrong; bot now I ſall not be ſlaw to puneiſch ſeueirlie, to mak exemple to vthers to play the lyk. Preſentlie, I am going to drink his maieſties good healthe vpoune the caſtell heid. Mr Johne Finlaſoune would haue the caſtle in keiping; bot I will not, till I hear from his maieſtie and your lordſhip, ſeing it hes coſte his maieſtie ſo deare, and I and myne the dangeour of our lyffes. I will not giue it him, quho ſo beaſtlie gaiue it ouer for four ſchote of muſcate; always quhat your lordſhips of his maieſties priuie counſell will command me, vpone your advertiſment, I will follow, and geiue the houſe to quhome your lordſhips pleaſis. I am to expeid the bark and pinnage to your lordſhip, with all diligence, and this day to diſcharge the capitane, officers, and ſouldiers, the laſt of this moneth. My lord, by your lordſhips good caire of me, it hes pleaſit his maieſtie to graunte me ane remiſſioune, and to honour me of that I am vnworthie, to prefer me to be one of his maieſties moſt honourable priuie counſell. I can not ſay no more; bot this much I ſall preiſe to my deathe, to ſtryue with invye for loyaltie and obedience; and hopes in my Saviour, to do his maieſtie more better ſeruice nor this, or then to die; for, I proteſt to God, I craue no grittar honour in this earthe, then by my death in his maieſties ſeruice, my treuth and loyaltie may be knawin at my end. As to your lordſhips manifold good will and pruiffes, I haue euir had of your lordſhips fauour vnmeritit be me, your lordſhip ſall haue this aſſurance of me, I ſall euir be your lordſhips, and ye ſall neuir ſpeak or do any thing to me, bot as ane trew and faithfull ſeruand to his maieſtie, and one that ſall euir preaſe, ſo far as lyis in me, to be anſuerable to his maieſties lawis. Thus crauing your lordſhips pardone, that I am ſo longſum, I moſt humblie tak my leiue, committing your lordſhip to the tuitioune of the Almyghtie, and I ſall euir reſt and remaine

Your Lordſhips euir bund to ſerue your Lordſhip,

Quhat cair, and quhat pains, and haifard, I haue beine in, fince my comeing heir, I will remitt to vthers to declair. Bot befoir it had not proceidit as it hath done, I rather I had bene buried heir. I affure your lordfhip, the cannonar hes don his dewtie in this feruice.

Most Gratious Souerane,

Sen the aduerteifment laitlie fend vnto your maieftie, anent the affairis of Ila, with the copie of the letter fend vnto ws, frome the bifchop of the Illis, whairin he comm[ands] fome credite and trufte to Bryce Semple, berair of his lettre; we convenit and mett the day, with fuch otheris of your maiefteis counfell, as in this vacant tyme could be had; and at lenthe hard the gentilman vpoun that credite and trufte concredite vnto him, who reportis vnto ws, that the conditioun craued be the rebellis, is, that thay may haif ane nynetene yeir tak of Ila, maid be your maieftie to the bifchop in thair fauouris, for the yeirlie payment of aucht thowfand merkis; and thay offer to find cautiou[n to the] bifchop for the thankfull payment of the faid fowme. This being a mater tuitcheing your maieftie fo neirlie, in honnour, and whairof the preparative, is fo pernitious and dangerous in confequence and example, we wald nouther allow nor refufe the fame, bot hes referved the fame to your maiefties awne princelie confideratioun. We haif had fome conference with the laird of Cadell, how this rebellioun may be fuppreft, yf fo it fall pleis your maieftie to follow oute that courſe; and we did lay to his charge, yf he wald vndirtak ony burdyne thairin. At the firſt he ſeamed to propone ſome impedimentis, as, namelie, the miſcontentment, wiche perhaps ſome noblemen wald apprehend, yf he wer preferrit in that ſeruice to thame, thay being more able to proſequute the ſame, in ſuch ſubſtantious maner as is requiſite, nor he; and nixt the dangeirs whairin the biſchoppis pledgeis wald be, yf ony ſuche hoſtile courſe wer followit oute aganis the rebellis; and, in end, he is come to this, that yf it ſall pleis your ſacred maieſtie, to lay on ſuche burdyne vpoun him, he, to teſtifie his goode affectioun to [your] maieſties ſeruice, will willinglie vndirtak the ſame, he being onlie furneiſt with ſome cannonis, and with twa cannonaris, and other twa expert men, for battering of houſſes; and that he ſall mak a ſufficient pouer and force of his awne for proſequuting of the ſeruice, and who ſalbe able to command the haill Ile, except the caſtell; and that he ſall do his beſt endevoiris to recouer the caſtell. Bot yf the ſeruice ſalbe of ony lang continewance, by halding oute of the caſtell, and ſo ſall require the abyding of his forceis a lang ſpace togidder, in this poynte he pretendis ſome difficultyis, as yf the ſeruice muſt be followit oute be your maieſtie. This being the effect of oure conference with him, we do humelie preſent the ſame to your maieſties princelie conſideratioun: And ſo, praying God, lang to preſerve your maieſtie in helthe and felicitie, we reſt

CIX.—EXTRACT FROM NOTE OF PRIVY COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

[5th October 1614.]

DIRECTIOUN is geven to the Captane of the Guarde, to ſend tuelf of his company to Dunbartane, and to bring frome thence to this burghe, the

Earle of Orknay; and direction is geven to the ſhiref of Dunbartane to aſſiſt the convoy of the Earle frome Dunbartane to the Falkirk, where the ſhireff of Linlithgow is to reffaue him, and to mak his convoy frome thence to this burghe.

There wes a petition geven in to the counſell in name of Sir George Hammiltoun, proporting that the beeng takkiſman of Yla, and obliſhed to his maieſtie in a certaine yeerlie duetie for the ſame; and beeing lykwyſe burdened with the payment of his maieſties taxation for the ſaid Yle, that now the tennentes and inhabitantes of that Yle, in reſpect of the preſent rebellion there, hes refuiſed other to mak him payment of his maieſties duetyes, or yett of the taxatioun; and therefore his deſyre wes, that he might haue had a commiſſion to go there with a force of his maieſties ſubiectis in armes for vplifting of his maieſties dueties, and of the taxation. This petition beeng hard and conſidered, the counſell hes forborne to grant the ſame whill his maieſties will and pleaſſour be knowne.

CX.—BISHOP OF ORKNEY TO LORD BINNING.

Right Honourable my verrie Good Lord,

It was nather of cairelefnes, negligence, nor obliuioune, that my lord and I did not wryte ſo frequentlie; bot our inſtante cair and diligence to bring the ſeruice to ſum happie end, did hauld ws from wryting, till we did ſie the expectit fruit of labours, which we knew wald not be vnpleaſing to his maieſtie and your honouris. I hoip my letters with the laſt poiſt, James Gairdner and Robert Winrame, relatiue to the former, ſall prevent thir, and geiue ſatiſfactioune to your lordſhip, in all anent the ending of this actioune, quhairin thair is nothing promeſit nor done, quhilk is not agreeable to his maieſties pleaſour and your lordſhips deſyre. Robert, and Patrik Halcro ar tranſportit this day to be keipit in Caſtell Sinclar, and from thence to be exhibite to your lordſhip. The reſt ar keipit priſſoners in the caſtle, and my lord and I (efter that Roberte, and Patrik Halcro be diſpatchit with yung May and ane ſufficient number of hable men to gaird thame), ar preſentlie going to examine euirie one; and the nixt day, God willing, thay ſall ſuffer judgement and condigne puneiſment. The winds, hailes, ſnaws, raines, ar ſo extraordinarie, in thir places, that all had bene done and accompliſſed befoir this day, giue it had bene poſſible. Andro Martine, quho was ſent with Robert Winrahame, would be weil examined be your lordſhip. I hoipe to cum by the band it ſelf, quhairof I ſent the coppie with his depoſitiounes. Thair is one Margaret Buchane, ſpous to Simeone Stewart, and now adulteres to Patrik Halcro, quho hes revealit and confeſſit to me more then any other. If your lordſhip think, that hir depoſitiounes or preſence ſalbe neceſſar, direct me, and it ſall be obeyit, for I purpoſe to put hir oute of this cuntrie, for hir adulterie. Anent the articles ſent in my laſt letters to your lordſhip, I beſeik your lordſhip, advyſe and adverteis; and ſince your lordſhip hes gevin me aſſurance of the paſſing of my rightes, (for the quhilks I ſall euir be cairfull to expres my thankfulnes in all dewtie and ſeruice) I ſall be diſpoſed at your lordſhips pleaſour, aither to come ſouth with the erle, or ſtay heir a litle efter, for my awin buſſines, or any ſeruice ſall be committit or commandit to me. As for other things, your lordſhip will knaw thame be my letters writtin to my Lord Theſaurar. So praying God euir to favour, proſper and preſerue your lordſhip, I reſt your lordſhips awin aſſured and obliged in all dewtie.

CXI.—EARL OF CAITHNESS TO LORD BINNING.

My most speciall Good Lord,

I ressauit your letter, datit at Edinburgh the twentie, and cam in my hands the fourte of October. Befoir the reffett of your lordſhips letter, I wrait at greit lenth of the haill procedings heir and of the ending of this feruice, that God of his mercy hes maid to come vther ways nor any man expectit. My lord, war not I vfed the mater fo cannelie, and maid Patrik Halcro to faill thame, that was thair in the caſtell, it wald haue bene ane longfum faidge; for I proteſt to God, the hous hes neuir bene biggit by the confente of the diuill; for it is one of the ſtrongeſt houlds in Britane, without fellow. I ſie be his maieſties letter, direct vnto your lordſhips, of his intentione to Robert Stewart; quhilk, I thank God, I haue nather faid to him bot this; and vpoune that conditioun he cam out: Quhilk conditioune was in this forme, gif he wald come furth and put himfelf ſimpliciter in his maieſties will, to difpone vpoune him at his maieſties pleafour, I fould keip and preferue [him?] frome euirie danger of my folks, till his maieſties pleafour and will wer knawin. He defyrit, that I wald promife vpoune my honour, to preferue him till I brocht him to his maieſtie: That I plainlie refufit, for, I faid I could not promeis that my felffe might haue acces to his maieſtie, without the fpeciall licence of the lords of his maieſties moſt honourable priuie counfell. To conclud, he plainlie fubmittit himfelf to his maieſties will; but befoir he did this, Patrik Halcro had left him, and faid plainlie to him in the caſtle, he wald geive it ouer, quhich maid him come out, vpoune the foirfaids conditiones, and no vtherways, as I fall anfweir to God. Robert Stewart hes na farder of me, for I fpak with him, and fmellit that he wald neuir geiv over that hous to be torterit, and to be compellit to reveill vpoune his father to be his wrak. I finding this, I defyrit gif he wald let Patrik Halcro cum oute and fpeik with me, vpoune that fam plaidge that was in for him; he plainlie refufit: I feing it fo, I maid me to be weill contentit with his anſweir, and ſaid I wald go fordwart with the ſeidge. He paſt to the caſtell, and in his companie, I pat in ſecret woord to Patrik Halcro, to ſie giue the morne he wald cum out and ſpeik with me, in the kirk, vpoune plaidges; quho grantit, and cam furth to me; and efter four houres conferens, he and I, hand to hand, I maid him to yeild that he wald giue it ouer, and mak the hous to be in my hands, vpoun conditioune I ſould promeiſe him his lyffe, quhilk I did. Then he willit me to caus ane miniſter come in and preiche to thame, quhilk he ſould meanis that the reſt ſould be contentit to heir, and ſo he ſould mak the mater ſo, that he ſould be out of ſuſpitione, to the gritteſt pairte of thame war out of the caſtell; and as thay cam out to geiue tham fair countenance: And ſo, be thir meanis, Patrik Halcro maid the hous and all thoſe that war thair to be in my hands. The procedings and ceremonies tuik mekle of aucht dayes, quhilk was the occaſioune that your lordſhip was ſo long of getting word; quhairfoir I craue your guid lordſhip to haue me appardonit. Praiſit be God, albeit the word hes bene long of comeing, it is good quhen it comes. I luik that my word and promeis gevin to Patrik Halcro ſall not be fullfillit: befoir it wer, I rather be in my graue. As to the reſt I haue in my hands, except Robert Stewart, [they] ſalbe hanged within twa days at the caſtell yett, with ſundrie vthers of the cuntrie men that war ring leaders to Robert, to the exemple of vthers. The number that ſall hang, that was in the caſtell, is twelue. I haue ſent Robert Stewart, and Patrik Halcro to Caſtell Sinclair, to be ſuirlie keipit thair, till I haue done all that your lordſhip hes gevin me commiſſioun for. Now, ſince the ſeruice is done, I haue no pleaſour to byd heir, for the wedder is both euill and variant, and ſo is the people; for he that wold rewle heir, hes both neid of wit and mandheid, and manie ears and eis. Quhair your lordſhip willes me to conforme all my actiounes to his maieſties mynd, I hoipe in my Sauiour, neuir to do, ſay, nor think, that ſall be offenſiue to his maieſtie. Befoir willinglie I did any thing that war offenſiue to his maieſtie, I rather be buried quik. As to this peece of ſmall ſeruice, I think it bot ane beginning; bot giue his maieſtie haue ony ſeruice of grittar importance, I houpe ather to die or giue his maieſtie, ane grittar pruiffe of my affectioune and luife. Thanking your guid lordſhip for the grit cair your lordſhip hes had that I ſould wante nothing that ſould furder this ſeruice in my hands, I can render your lordſhip no farder then the aſſuirance and continewance of my ſeruice, as I ſall euir remaine

Your awin,

CXII.—ANDRO MARTIN TO LORD BINNING.

MY LORD,

SINCE your lordſhip examined me ſo ſickerlie vpoune my intelligence concerning the grund of the rebellioune begun in Orknay, be Robert Stewart and Patrik Halcro, and gart me ſwear to be plaine, your lordſhip will excuſe me that foryet this: Quhen Robert and I was in conference on a tyme, he ſaid that gif his father had bene willing, and vſit the counſell of vthers, quhen he was in Edinburgh Caſtle, he might haue cumd away, for thair was men anew offerit to haue cumd or ſente men with him to Orknay; but he would not cum away, becaus he durſte not brek waird. I ſpeirit how many he might haue gottin to haue cumed with him? He anſuerit, four or fyue thowſand, giue he had pleaſit; bot he tauld me not quhat men thay war. Of this I thocht good to mak your lordſhip advertiſment, for ſaifetie of my aithe; and hopes that your lordſhip will interceid for me, that be his maieſties clemencie, I may be remittit for being with Robert in companie all this vnhappie tyme of miſerie, I beand aged and depauperat, able to die be hungar, giue I had not gottin helpe be him in meit and drink; bot I nevir buire airmes, maid muſters, nor watched againſt his maieſties lieuetennent, efter I hard of his purpoiſe. This I referre to your lordſhips gud diſcretioune; and gif ony vther things ſall cum to my memorie quhilkis ar omittit at the preſent, I ſall aquent your lordſhip thairwith. He ſaid alſo, that quhen thay ſpak with Sir James Conneill, that Sir James wiſſit himſelffe to be at hame, and the Erle of Orknay to haue bein in Orknay, to do for thameſelues; the ane in the weſt, and the vther in the northe. So, confeiding in his maieſties clemencie and your lordſhips affectioun toward me, I reſt.

CXIII.—ARTICLES SENT BY THE EARL OF CAITHNESS TO THE LORD SECRETARY BINNING.

1. Pleas your honorabill lordſhip to reſolue and direct, quhat ſall be done with the caſtel, which is now in my cuſtodie, whvther it ſall be repairit or demolyſhed.

Thocht it be ane ornament for the towne of Kirkwall, and may be efteemed ane place of refuge and fecuritie for the holl cuntrie in tyme of forrane invafions, if any fould happin to be; yitt fince it is nather neceffar for any ordinarie feruice of his maieftie, nor ane hous fitt for the habitatioun of his maiefties officiars, and may be mor eafilie taken be forren foes, in cais they fould inveid, then recouered agane from them, I remitt it to your lordfhips wifdome to confider what falbe done with it.

2. Pleas your lordfhip to giue fome directuoun for government of their people. The prefent officer, the fherriff deput, is hated to the death, be all fortis of men, is of no fufficient qualities for fuch a place and office, and by his former evill demanor, is fo contemned of the bafeft, that he fall neuere, by all apparence, recouer credit, authoritie, and regaird hier; yea, iff he remane hier efter me, he is in danger of his lyff, and fome new broyll may arryfs.

3. Thocht ther be great fpoyl and loffe of horfe, cattell, fcheip, boatis, and now of armour, which belonged to his maieftie, your lordfhip wol be plefed to giue directioun quhat falbe done with that which remains, and may be recouered from vnjuft deteiners, that his maieftie be not defrauded and hurt.

4. For Birfay, which was the place whence thes trubles did fpring, your lordfhip may be pleafed to confider, whither it falbe demoliffched, or keiped with fome allowance, and be whome.

5. The ordinance, which is in the caftell and yeardis, in number, 8 of brafe, and fax of irone, falbe, God willing, tranfported vpone the fchippis, with all the armour which can be had.

6. Robert and Patrick Halcro falbe keiped and brocht with myfelf.

CXV.—NOTE OF THE CONFERENCE HAD BE THE SECRETARE AND ADUOCAT WITH THE ERLE OF ORKNAY,

October 22, 1614.

My lord aduocat and I repaired to the caſtell of Edinburgh, to the erle of Orknay, and declaired to him that we had commandement from his maieſtie, to examine him vpon the cauſes of the rebellion of Orknay. He declaired, that he wes innocent, and ignorant thairof; that Sir James Stewart came to the caſtell of Edinburgh to him, and ſchew that his ſone Robert wes gone to Orknay, whoes actions thair, might breid offence to his maieſtie, and danger to the erle: Who anſuered, that want of meanes had forced Robert to gang thair, to vplift ſum reſtis of the tennantis dewties auchtand to the erle, to help to ſupplie the erles wantis and his owne; that, ſince it wes evill tane, he wald wryte to Robert that he might retire furth of Orknay, deſyring, that Sir James wald cauſe convoy his letter to his ſone, and command his doars to giue ouerſight to Robert, to tranſport him ſelf to Caithnes; that he neuer wrait any vther letter to Robert ſince he went to Orknay.

It being replyed be ws, that efter Robert had tane Birſa, and diſobeyed the chairge vſed be the ſhiref depute to rander that houſe, vnder the payne of treaſon, he had writtin to the erle; who, having reſſaued his letter from Duncane Mitchell, poiſt, he had writtin bak to him with the ſaid poiſt: He denyed the wryting of any ſuch letter to his ſone; and when he ſaw his ſeruand, John Schairp, of mynd to wryte to Robert with that poiſt, he had diſchairged him to wryte; and that Schairp had deſyred him not to find fault, that he might ſend his owne privat letter, anſuering to that which he had reſſaued from Robert; bot that nather Schairp nor Mitchell, being broght to his preſence, wald ſay any thing to the contrarie of this his declaration: Which is the ſubſtance of all that he wald ſay to ws in that poynt; adding, that no thing proceiding from him had occaſioned the rebellion; bot that the extreame rigour, vſed be Maiſter John

Finlafon to the cuntrie people, and the wrong intended be Maifter John to the cuntriemen, who, with great hafard of thair lyves, had forced the pirates, and tane thame and thair fchip, had difpofed thame to rebellion; and that thay had perfuaded Robert to affift thame aganis Maifter John Finlafon, and to be head to thame in thair interpryfes.

Being demanded, what condicion he had maid to Patrik Halcro for his joyning in this rebellion? Denyed that he knew him familiarlie, or euer had to do with him; and that no thing had moved Halcro to mell in thefe turnis, bot his great affection borne to Robert, his fone. Farder, we could not induce him to grant, in any circumftance, of the proceidings of his fone in his rebellion. We declaired to him, that what he concealed of the cairiage of this interpryfe wald be detected be his fone Robert, John Schairp, and Mitchell, who wer all in hands; he anfuered, that he wes confident that thay could fay no farder nor he had declaired to ws.

CXVI.—LORD BINNING TO JOHN MURRAY.

Sir,

This gentilmans affaires preaffing him to tak journay to court, and wanting the helpis and hopes of his wounted addreffe, he hes defyred me to interpone my requeaft for your fauour to him, in his honeft adoes. He is not to mak fute for any vther mans preiudice, nor to importune his maieftie with petitions, bot to rander accompt of his feruice, and mak anſueir for him ſelf, incaice reportis haue bene maid to his diſaduantage. Your help to his acceſſe, and his maieſties gracious heiring, will be his cheif deſyre, vnles vnexpected occaſions furneis him buſſines. And becaus I am bund to him in all the dewties of freindſchip, and am aſſured that he will be honeſt and thankfull to theſe, who, be thair kyndnes, ſall obleis him, I am the more bold earniſtlie to recommend him to your fauour. If any to whom yow ar formerlie, or more neirlie bund, haue intereſt in any mater that may concerne him, your power wil be als great ouer him as thame, for removing ſuch controuerſies, be your diſcretion. So, hoping that this my requeaſt, and the bearers wourth and ſufficiencie will procure him your fauour and help, and to yow his faithfull and conſtant thankfulnes, I commit yow to God, and reſt

CXVII.—LORD BINNING TO JOHN MURRAY.

SIR,

BE my laſt letter I promeiſed to let yow know how I ſould proceid with my Lord of Scone, and the Biſchop of Galloway. I haue ſpoken with thame at lenth. My Lord of Scones proiect is, that yow may obteane ane few from his maieſtie of the Lowmonds, vpon ane eaſie dewtie, ſince thay haue not bene of his maieſties rentall, whairof he hes pro-meiſed to let me haue the ouverture in writ; efter conſideration whairof, I ſall let yow know what I can vnderſtand of the ſuretie or commoditie thairof. The Biſchop of Galloway and John Gib ar both in this towne, perfyting thair ſecurities; which being ended, the fundations and regiſter of the Chapell royall will be deliuered to my Lord of Galloway, who hes promeiſed to mak yow all the ſuretie he can, of any thing being in his power. I ſchew to him how yow wer vſed be my Lord of Garlies. He ſayd, that he knew and diſallowed ſindrie of his formes, and wald gladlie have forborne to do him fauour, if his maieſties letter, and the reſpect to eſchew ſclander, had not forced him to giue him condicions of the teynds, to which he wes kyndlie. At his deſyre, I ſpak to my Lord of Glaſgow to have concurred, to except your vaſſals teynds owt of the tak to be ſet to the Lord Garleis, bot thay could not find any reaſonable pretext for it. For your Iriſh affaires, I can wryte no thing, being ignorant of the eſtate thairof, bot be report. I heir that the biſchop of the Iles is to repaire to court, be whom yow may try thair wourth, for it is ſaid that the ſame is well knowne to him. So, wiſhing yow much happines and contentment, I reſt

Your moſt affectionat freind at command,

Speciallie, in regaird the Witſounday terme, whiche, by your maieſties commandiment, hath ſum dayes exemed from ſitting, maketh a great interruptioun in the adminiſtratioun of iuſtice; wheras, if the vacance ſould continew induring the haill moneth off Maij, the ſaid feaſt of Witſounday wald moſt vſuallie fall within that ſpace, and ſo the lieges micht ſo muche the better, and more convenientlie, attend the diſpatche off thair affaires in the tyme off the terme. And ſo, yff it may ſtand with your maieſties gratious pleaſoure to allow heiroff, we haue heirwith ſent vp a forme off ane article to be ſigned by your maieſties hand; vpoun returne wheroff, we ſall giue ordour for the dew and ſpedie publicatioun thairoff, at all places neceſſarie: And ſo, humblie kiſſing your maieſties ſacred hand, and praying the Almightie God long to preſerve your maieſtie with all increſce off honour, health, and happines, heir and elſwhere, we reſt

CXIX.—LORD BINNING TO JOHN MURRAY.

SIR,

I EXPECTED the cumming heir of the Bifchop of Galloway, to ane meitting of the whole bifchopis, be appoyntment of the Archibifchop of Santandrois; and expected that, be his meanes, my lord of Scone might have learned the certantie of findrie of the archideanes fpeaches, for I beleve his father repeated fum of thame to the Bifchop of Galloway. My lord of Gairlies wes to have bene in this towne, bot his wyfes feiknes maid him to returne hame, till he fould fie what fould become of hir difeafe.

When James Makcullo reffaued my letter, willing him to try the veritie anent the wrong done to the place of Broughton, he wes not neir that pairt off the cuntrie; bot he hes promeifed, be his letter, to do his exact diligence, and to aduerteis according to the trueth of his tryall.

The ftorme hes impefched the convening of the moft pairt of the bifchops, fo that my Lord of Galloway is fcaircelie expected, nather is thair certantie of my Lord of Glafgows cumming this oulk; bot be ane letter, which I latelie reffaued fra him, I vnderftand that he is greived with his collegues vndewtifull behauiour to yow, and that he intends to remayne conftant and thankfull for your kyndnes.

Yow will vnderftand, be letters from my Lord of Scone and Baluaird, the conferences paft betuix thame and the Archibifchop of Santandrois, concerning the Perfon of Dyfert; which bewryes fuch dealing, as no honeft man wald do or allow, fince he nather can alledge any mifbehauiour in the perfon, nor will giue him ane teftimonie of his dewtifull behauiour, albeit he confeffe it to be true and notour; bot remeid will be fund for that. Alwayes, it is certane, that if his maieftie permit liears to columniat honeft men, and put not the authours to the pruif of thair mifinformations, he will bring vpon him felf great vexation; and fum of his beft fubiectis may be iniuftlie wronged, without hope of redreffe, if the authours of the mifreports fall not be maid knowne, nor thair fpeaches put to tryall. Bot, hoping that his maieſtie, in his ſingular wiſdome, will prevent ſuch miſcheiffs, I commit yow to God. Edinburgh, 26 Januar [1615?]

Your truelie affectionat freind,

BINNING.

The Archibiſchop of Santandrois hes paſſed ane dangerous fit of apoplexie. It is ſupponed that ane new aſſault may be more difficill to put af. If his place vaik, and his maieſtie might be pleaſed to mak Glaſgow his ſucceſſour, and promoue Orknay to Glaſgow, it wald recompens thair knowne merite, and gude ſeruice, incourage vthers to imitate thame, and reduce the churche gouernement to that happie eſtate, which his maieſtie hes long wiſhed, be the wiſdome and godlie exemple of theſe wourthie men.

CXX.—LORD BINNING TO JOHN MURRAY.

SIR,

As be your letter yow deſyred, I haue bene moſt curious to learne Maiſter William Murray, the Perſon of Dyſerts behauiour and profeſſion of his dewtie and reſpect to the biſchops, and of his opinion of the preſent Churche gouernement; and have fund it moſt faithfull and dewtifull, not onlie be the report of gentilmen of the beſt ſort, to whom his actions ar well knowne, bot alſo be ſindrie biſchops, who beare him witnes of ſinceritie and gude conuerſation, and that he hes neuer ſwairwed in his obedience to thame, and concurrence to the eſtableiſment of the preſent diſcipline. This being my privat tryall, it wes confirmed more publictlie and be better warrand, vpon Friday laſt, at ane meiting of ane number of the counſall, with the Archibiſchop of Glaſgo, Biſchops of Dunkell, Caitnes, Dumblane, and Orknay (the reſt being hindered to cum be ſtorme, and Sant Androis be ſeiknes). When we wer convened, the perſon of Dyſert gaue in his ſupplication, regraiting the wrong done to him be report to his maieſtie, that hes ſince his laſt returne from England profeſſed him ſelf oppoſite to the preſent gouernement of the churche, and to the authoritie of biſchops, it being true that he wes broght vp be ane biſchop, and from his youth had euer thoght thair authoritie neceſſar, for the ordour of churche gouernement, and ſince his maieſtie began to aduance that gude courſe, no man in this kingdome of his eſtate had bene more reddie or conſtant in ſynodall and generall aſſemblies, and all vther places, to giue his profeſſed and faithfull concurrence for acknouledgeing, eſtableiſſing, and obeying the biſchops, nor he had done; becaus he thoght it his dewtie to God, his king, and cuntrie; and thairfore deſyred that he might be tryed be that number, and aither puneiſſed, if the report wer fund true, or if it wer tryed fals, as he wes confident it wald be, he might be fauoured be the teſtimoniall of the counſall and biſchops. It wes anſuered be the counſall, that albeit his gude behauiour and faithfull dewtie in that mater wes notour to thame, yet thay wald forbeare to vndertak the tryall of it, becaus it wes competent to the biſchops, to whom thay wald refer it, being aſſured that thay wald proceid juſtlie thairin: The which, all the biſchops then preſent promeiſed to do, without delay, acknowledgeing the notorietie of the perſons dewtie in his loue and obedience to thair eſtate, and regraitting that any man ſould have bene ſo imprudentlie malicious, as to have wronged that honeſt man, by ane report, not onlie wanting trueth, bot contrare to all probabilitie.

I vnderſtand that my Lord of Scone and the Laird of Baluaird ſpak with the Archibiſchop of Santandrois, and hard of him ſum ſpeaches which I will be loath to beleive, and will forbeare to expres thame for the reue-rence of the place whairwith his maieſtie hes honored him. I pray God he had bene and may be cairefull to honour it, if he ouerput his preſent infirmitie; and if it pleaſe God he die, that his maieſtie may mak that choice of ane ſucceſſour to him which may beſt agrie with Goddis ſeruice and his owne; for it is manifeſt what diſgrace and miſcheif may enſew of vnwyſe, vnhoneſt, or vngodlie behauiour in ane man of that rank, and no leſſe notour, how greatlie it may availe to the eſtableiſment of religion, that godlie, wyſe, faithfull, and well affected men to his maieſties ſeruice be ſetled in ſuch rowmes. Of this I will not preſume to wryte at this tyme to his maieſtie, bot will ſay to yow, vpon my ſaluation, that I am perſuaded, if Glaſgo and Orknay wer aduanced to the firſt places in the clergie, I think he ſould be als wourthelie ſerued be thame in thair eſtate, as be any ſubiects in his dominions, and many wald giue thair concurrence to wyſe, conſtant, ſecret, and faithful men, who will declyne all aſſociation with men who want theſe graces. Bot thir thinges muſt be remitted to his maieſtie, who, no dowt, will reſolue more wyſelie, and do better in pourpoſes of this conſequence nor we can conſaue. So, wiſhing yow health and happines, I reſt

Your moſt loving freind at power,

BINNING.

CXXI.—THE LORDS OF PRIVY COUNCIL TO KING JAMES VI.

PLEIS YOUR MOST EXCELLENT MAIESTIE,

THAIR wes preſentit vnto ws, a ſignatour exped your maieſteis hand, in fauouris of Sir Johnne Lindſay of the Bathe, knight, granting vnto him, during his lyffe, the keeping of the moore of Moorerowmond, and preſerving of your maieſties gayme thairin, and thairwithall pouer to call and perſew euerye ſuche perſone, who hes tilled and convertit ony pairt of the ſaidis boundis, in making the ſame thair proper landis, with the gift thairwith alſo vnto him, of the leveying of all ſuche penalteis, as ony of theſe delinquentis, in the courſe of law, haif incurred by reaſoun of thair ſaid wrangous intruſioun. Whilk ſignatour, belyke haueing bene procured by ſome importune ſute, hathe bene drawne vp noway after the ordinair ſtyle and forme, ſo as in dewytie we could not bot mak ſtay of it, vntill your maieſtie wer certifyed thairof, for as anent the perſute of ſuche as haif encroitched vpoun that moore of Moorerowmond, in vſurping ony pairt thairof, and by tillage, or vtherwayes, making it thair propirtie, the ſame can by no meanes be better proſequuted, then at the inſtance of your maieſteis aduocat (who will not be in that, or ony other poynte of his dewytie, any way wanting), and yf ony will informe, and give goode euidence againis ſuche as haif tranſgreſſit in this poynte, your maieſtie may be pleaſit, for thair overture maid, and thair panes and chargeis whiche the proſequuting of the buſynes will enforce, to allow vnto thame ſome reaſounable proportioun of conſideratioun, furthe of the benefeit, whiche will aryiſe oute of theſe penaltyis, whiche by law importe, no leſs then the forfaite of his landis, who offendis heirin; whereas, the geving to ony privat ſubiect a commiſſioun in this kynde, by daylie experience, proveth to be troubleſome to the cuntrey, geving mater vnto theſe who ar imployed, according as thay ar diſpoiſed and affected, to grant connivance and ouerſight to the greateſt offendours; and vpoun otheris, of whom the moſt parte perhaps may be innocent, to vſe ſuche hard formes in continuall citeing and troubling of thame, as it comes litle ſhorte of manifeſt oppreſſioun, wherewith your maieſties counſell (as being thairof ignorant) can noway tak ordour, the pairtye wronged making choiſe rather to compone then to compleyne. And, thairfoir, yf it may ſtand with your maieſteis goode and gratious pleaſour, at ony time, when ony ſuche ſutes ar preferred, before the granting of thame, to refer the conſideratioun of the equitie and iuſtnes of the demand to your maieſteis counſaill heir, your maieſtie ſould be freed of muche importunitie, and our preſent greif removed, that we ſould mak ony halt in expeiding of that, whervnto your maieſtie hathe ones ſett your hand, whiche nottheles, in this caiſe, we ar forced vnto, bothe for diſcharge of oure dewytie, and freetheing oure ſelffis of your maieſteis iuſt reprooffe heireſter. Alwayes ſubmitting our ſelffis wholie to your maieſteis moſt excellent iudgement, by whiche, as the loadſtone in all our actionis, we ar deſirous to be direct, we humblie pray God to grant vnto your maieſtie a lang and happie reignn, and we do reſt for euer

CXXII.—LORD BINNING TO JOHN MURRAY.

SIR,

I SEND this vther letter to yow, and the Perſons ſupplication, to the effect yow may ſchow thame to his maieſtie, or mak ſuch vther gude vſe of thame as may beſt availe your wourthie cuſing; aganis whom the malice of liars, and thair pernicious courſes, haue cheiflie bene intended; bot I hope his loyaltie, affiſted be his true freindis, ſall diſapoynt thair proiects.

The extraordinar ſtormes haue ſtayed the biſchop of Gallowayes cumming to this towne, and thairby will hinder my lord of Scone to try ſo perfytlie as neid wer, that whairof yow deſyre to be certified: Bot yow will find that he who attempted that pourpofe, to your preiudice, will find als litill affiftance in it, as he had fcaircetie of gude counfall in the devyce, for I think all, or the moft pairt, of his bretheren will difavow him. My lord of Scone, and Baluaird, will wryte more particularlie, becaus the[y] have verie fpeciall warrand, from conferences with findrie who knew the trueth of all mens pairtis heir.

In the pourpofe of Eglinton, all will be done as his maieftie hes commanded, as yow will know be oure nixt letters, till which tyme I will fuperfeid to anfweir any farder to your letters of the 20 of this moneth; bot, with remembrance of my loving dewtie, commit yow to God. CXXIII.—EARL OF DUNFERMLINE TO JOHN MURRAY.

RIGHT HONOURABLE AND WEILBELOUED COUSING,

YOUR letters of the firft inftant, concerning the finall end off the Earle of Eglintouns befines, came not heir before the 13 inftant. All that bifines is now (praifed be God), in all points, according to his facred maiefties will and pleafour, endit, and my Lord Secretair, in prefence of the Counfall, has deliuered to my lord his infeftment, with his fpeache, as he had in directioun frome his maieftie: Wee haue giuin baith to my Lord Secretair, and to my Lord off Glafgow, all thankis, and has teftified to thame baith, quhow far wee onderftand be yiow, this earand has been aduanced be thair guid report and aduys. I will nocht extend me ſelf to gif yiow monye thankis, the earand itſelf, and the diuerſe toiles and facheries I haue had in it, bindis me to acknawledge myſelf in all deutie bound to yiow: this, I can aſſure yiow, thair is nathing contentis me mair in the haill courſe of this beſines, nor that my ſpeciall obligatioun for the guid ſucces thairin, onder his ſacred maieſty, is to yiow onlye;—quhat neidis mair? Friendis and kinſmen as wie are man daylie be doand to otheris all guid offices thay can, eurie ane in his vocatioun, place, and calling: reckin, ye may ſpend me as onye yie haue maiſt powar off.

I ſend unto yiow herewith, ane letter to his maiſt ſacred maieſtie, quhilk I pray yiow deliuer, and as yie may, retiere agane, becauſe I deſire nocht my letter to his maieſtie to fall in menye hands; it is nothing els but my purgatioun of thatt imputatioun laid on me, off onye articles or directions I ſould haue ſend with George Grahame to the rebelles of Ila, I hoipe it ſall ſatiffie his maieſty, and yiow, and all my friends, for I went na farder in that, as my letter beiris, nor for the relieff off the priſonars, quhilk I am certane nane will think bot werie guid ſeruice; and, ſpeciallie as maters ar fallin out in rigour, for I wald rather haue bein in debt of 20 thowſand to thame, or to onye, or the priſonars had bein in thair handes quhen his maieſties force came thair, for thair harme could nocht haue been bot diſpleaſant to his maieſtie, and diſhonrabill to the haill countrie. This, I man entreate, that cair and aſſiſtance that yie will trie be Vrchill or onye other, quhair George Grahame is, that he may be examined, for he is preſentlie thair at Court, or at Londoun. Latt it nocht be knawin quhairfore he is deſired till he be preſented. Latt him declair all he knawis, and eurie mannis pairt.

I haue alſo includit in the ſaid leter, my humbill and hartlie thankis for this preferment to my nefuieu Eglintoun. I haue no farder for the preſent, bot to remember my hartlie kindneſs to your good half-marrow. Sua wiſſing yiow baith all happineſs and contentement, I reſte

beloued Couſen, Jhone Morray of his ſacred Maieſtys Bedchalmer.

CXXIV.—THE EARL OF DUNFERMLINE TO KING JAMES VI.

Maist Sacred Soueraine,

I can na-dayes ſufficientlie declare vnto yiour maieſtie the greatte contentment I haiff reſſaued be yiour maiſt princelie letter of the firſt of this inſtant, albeit the ſame conteyne ane challenge and accuſatioun of great owreſight and onworthy dealing in me, gif I had ſua proceedit in George Grhaymes trafique for the Laird Ramfurdlie, and Biſchope of the Iles, his ſonnes libertie, as the informatioun and articles geiven to your maieſtie, as proceiding from me, beiris. Whereanent, to clear and reſolue yiour maiſt gracious maieſtie at ane word, as yiour highnes declairis in yiour awin letter, yee could nocht eſteeme theeſe articles to be other nor fals and ſuppoſiticious, of thair awne inventioun, whairein I haue fund great joiye that yiour maieſtie ſould ſua cleirly tak up and conſaue the ſinceritie of my mynde. I certifie yiour ſacred maieſtie, on my faithe, honour, and on that deutie of treuthe and fidelitie I aucht to yiour majeſtie, I gave nather theeſe directiouns or articles to George Grhayme, whereoff yiour maieſtie ſend me copie, nor nayne other directioun or article at all, ather be woord or wreitt, other nor this ſimpill directioun be tung allenarlie, (for I refuſed to giff him any writt, in regaird all dealing was onlie betuix him and me), to uſe any lawfull meanes he could, be anye good addreſſe or dexterritie, to releave the twa gentilmen priſſoners, whilk, giff he could be anye meanis attayne to, I promeiſt to be his debtour, and ſua ſoone as he ſould preſent to me the ſaidis priſoners, or ſure aduerteiſment and teſtificat of thair freedome and libertie, I ſould deliuer to him reallie ane thouſand merkis, for his charges and recompence: farder he had nather directioun, article, nor promeis, of me. And this I obſerued maiſt preceſly to him, for ſua ſoone as he returned hayme, I maid him inſtant payment of the ſoume promeiſt; whilk yiour maieſtie hes ſenſyne maiſt royallie cauſſed yiour theſaurar here reſtore againe to me. The wtter veritie of this, I hope yiour maieſtie ſhall haue werie good opportunitie and occaſioun to trye, at this preſent inſtant; becauſe I onderſtand, the ſaid George Grhayme is preſentlie ather at Court, or at Londoun, for he went thair from this 20 dayis ſence. Be the Laird of Vrchill, I think yiour maieſtie may eaſilie haiff inquiſitioun of him, and mak him be examinat heirupon: And gif he ſay anye farder, or otherwais, contrair to this, my declaratioun, as I think he ſhall nocht, yioure maieſtie may cauſe him be ſend hayme; for I think Angus Oig ſhall be heir ſchoirtlie preſented be Caddell, and be thair confronting, wee ſhall find out the haill veritie. Beſide that, gif he wald alledge he had anye ſic directioun from me, he ſhould ſchaw my hand writte, whilk he will newer be habill to doe, nor of nayne apperteynis to me, in onye degrie or reſpect; and this I hope ſhall ſatiffie yiour ſacred maieſties heyht and juditious conceptioun, for my purgatioun of any ſic imputatioun: I war ane onworthie man, et me ipſo judice, woorthie of all rigerous puniſchement, gif I had committed ſua lourde ane faulte againis a prince, his honour and dignitie, after ſua lang apprentiſage and training up in yiour ſacred maieſties ſchoolle of honour, in ſua mony and ſua honorabill chargis, and imploymentis, as hes oft pleaſed yiour majeſtie honour me withe; and wharein I thank God, and your highnes clemencie, and fauorabill interpretatioun, I haue hitherto till euer geuin yiour maieſties reaſonabill contentment and ſatiffactioun. This may not mak me forgett nor omitt my deutie, in all humilitie and thankfulnes of hairte, to acknowledge yiour ſacred majeſties greatte bountifulneſs and gracious diſpoſitioun, in granting to my nefuieu, (whome I may now, be yiour ſacred majeſteis fauour and permiſſioun, ſtile Earle of Eglintoun), that honour and dignitie, whilk ſua manye of his predeceſſoures enjoyed, and whairbye thai haue done to yiour maieſties maiſt nobill progenitours good and acceptabill ſeruice; I hope in God yiour majeſty ſhall find him prowe nather onwoorthie nor encapabill of yiour royall fauour, as your highneſs may haiſſe occaſioun to imploye him. Sua, wiſcheing to yiour highneſs, from the King of all kings, a lang and proſperous regne, withe the ſubmiſſe kiſſe of yiour royall hand, reſtis

Your maiſt ſacred maieſties maiſt humbill and obedient ſubject and ſeruitour,

CXXV.—LORD BINNING AND SIR GIDEON MURRAY TO KING JAMES VI.

MOST SACRED SOUERANE,

As your maieſtie wes pleaſed to command Sir Gedeon Murray and me, we haue diuers tymes delt with the ſchiref of the forreſt for renunciation of his heritable office, and I haue aſſured him, that your maieſtie wald not mak the conuerting of his halding of his landis from waird to blenche ane pairt of his ſatiſfaction, bot wald rather content him with money, nor yeild to ane preparatiue, which might incourage others to importune your maieſtie with ſutes for ſuch conuerſions, which your maieſtie wes reſolued not to grant. And ſo, having vſed the beſt reaſons we could to perſwade him to be content of ane reaſonable pryce, we haue with difficultie broght him to accept of tuentie thouſand merkis; and tolde him that he had not to expect reddie payment of the whole, bot be portions, at fuch termes as the great burdingis of your maieſties coffers might permit; and to moue him to this, haue promeifed humblie to requeaft your maieftie to grant him the fie of fyue hundreth pundis, which he hes for his feruice, as one of the commiffioners of the Middlefchyres, converted in ane lyfrent penfion, vpon condicion that he fould ferue now, and in all tyme cumming, when thair fould be vfe of fuch feruice, during his lyfe. We haue thoght that his fatiffaction might be the better performed with tyme; that fex thoufand pundis is faued of the precept of thrie thoufand pund fterling, granted to the lord Gray, for his fchireffchip; and that the eafe of his pryce might be ane argument to bring others, who might be heirefter delt with for renunciation of the lyke offices, to be content with moderat fatiffaction. If your maieftie allow of this appoyntment, it may pleafe your maieftie to figne and fend downe to ws the precept fent heirwith, for his payment, and the fignatour of his penfion.

Maifter Thomas Knox broght ane remiffion to Cole Makgillefpik, which requyres to be renewed, becaus the former wanted the prouifion for confent of the officers. It is to be fufpected that the counfell will think the exemple preiudiciall, if he obteane remiffion, withowt caution for obferuing the peace in tyme cumming; and for his compeirance before the counfell, when he fall be cited, becaus the Makgregours, and all vther notable rebels of the Hielandis, have bene bund to that affurance of their obedience. Bot if your maieftie intend to grant him remiffion, withowt that furetie, it feemes expedient that your maieftie fignifie your expres pleafour, be your letter to counfell, for that effect. The way to bring Jura and Colanfa to your maiefties poffeffion, can not be fo fummarlie and ordourlie as be fignifieing your royall pleafour to Sir George Erfkin, who hath the right and poffeffion of thofe Iles, be your maiefties gift to him, of the erle of Argyles lyfrent; and becaus fmall beginnings of difcontent, in that barbarous cuntrie, may breed more tumult nor the proffit of fo much land, may import the good of any who may mak fute to your maieftie for any of thofe two Iles, it appeiris convenient that your maieftie command the counfell fo to deale with ony who fall craue that benefit, as all occafion of trouble may be prevented, which we humblie ſubmit to your maieſties moſt excellent iugement. And, prayeing God long to preſerue your maieſtie in perfyte health, and wiſhed contentment, we reſt

Your Maieſties moſt humble, faithfull, and bund ſeruants,

CXXVI.—THE LORDS OF PRIVY COUNCIL TO KING JAMES VI.

PLEIS YOUR SACRED MAIESTIE,

ABOUT ſome nynetene yeiris ago, thair wes mariage contracted betuix Gilbert Kennedy, then appeirand of Barganye, and Miſtres Jeane Steuart, ſuſter to the lord Vchiltrie; in whiche contract the quenes heighnes, and your maieſtie, for your entres, and the ſaid lord Vchiltrie, and vmquhill ſir Williame Steuart of Tracquair, knight, become cautionaris for payment of the tocher thairin mentioned; the ſame beareing ane expres claus of the releif of the cautionaris: And now of laite, Thomas Kennedie, now of Barganye, being the ſone begottin in that ſame mariage, hathe moved ane perſute for tranſferring of the ſame contract, to the effect he may haif executioun aganis the heire of the ſaid ſir Williame Steuart of Tracquair, knight, for recouerye of the tocher promiſed be the ſaid contract, for the whiche he wes cautionair, as ſaid is. Wherupoun Johnne Steuart, now of Tracquair, heire, by progres, to the ſaid vmquhile ſir Williame, and ſir Robert Steuart, his tutour, by ſupplicatioun

haif meaned thame felffis vnto ws; fheweing that the faid vmquhile fir Williame, his becomeing cautioun at that tyme, wes onlie at the particulair directioun of your maieftie, and your heighnes darreft bedfellow, whofe commandment wes euer vnto him a law (howeuir it fould haif bene with neuir fo grite hurte and lofe to his priuat eftate); and that, be the claus of releif contenit in the contract, it appeareth verye weele, that it wes nevir intendit that he fould be diftreffed for the fame. And, thairfoir, by thair fupplicatioun intreating ws to certifie your maieftie heirof, that fome courfe may be tane to frie thame of the event of this perfwite; whairupoun, we haif tane the bauldnes to acquent your maieftie with the trew eftate of the bufynes, referring to your maiefteis owne wifdome, what yow think fitteft to be done heirin: ffor as it noway becometh ws, in oure place, to be movearis of ony thing that may breid ane vnneceffarie charge or expence to your coffers, fo we could do no lefs in dewytie, then, whair your maieftie, and the quenes heighnes, ar perfonalie bound in the contract, for the releif of the cautionair, to mak your maieftie thairwith acquented; wherein, expecting fuche directioun heiranent as your maieftie fhall pleis returne, whiche fhalbe accordinglie obeyit, we pray God to preferue your maieftie in all happynes and felicitie, and we do reft for euer

Your Maiefteis moft humble and obedyent

CXXVII.—THE EARL OF DUNFERMLINE TO LORD BINNING.

Maist Honorabill Good Lord,

I write this to informe yiour lordſhip off ane extraordinar riott fallin out in this pairtis off late, to be imparted by yiow to his ſacred maieſtie; that, be his heighnes heigh wiſdome, the counſall may haue directioun quhow far to proceid in the correctioun off the ſame. On the laſt ſetterday, before Paiſe, the queens maieſties officiar off Domfermeling was direct, be hir maieſties chalmerlane, to execute preceptis off warning, to remoue upon the toun off Bruntiland, according to commoun ordour; quhilk was to byde the awin commoun courſe in law after, before the ſeſſioun, and was nawayis intendit to be uſed or execute to ony rigour; alwayis, vpon ſuim vane and proude preſumptioun, ſuim peopill of that toun was ſteired vp to reſiſt this warning be force and violence, quhilk was neiuer done yit to the meineſt ſubject in this cuntrie. Sua, quhen the officiar was executing this preceptis of warning, quhilk war ondir baith thair maieſties handis and ſignes, be the caſchiettis we haue heir to that effect, and thairwith alſo lettirs ondir his maieſtie ſigned for this ſame purpois; the officiar, at the corſe of the toun and other pairtis, being in execuitioun of his office, is, be ane multitude off weemen, aboue ane hundir, off the bangſtar amaſone kinde, maiſt oncourteſlie doung off his feitt, and his witnes with him, thay all hurt and bluidit, all his lettirs and preceptis reft fra him, reiuin and caſten away, and ſwa chaſſed and ſtaned out off the toun. This done (clara luce), leitill before none, the peopill behalding ſuim magiſtratis, as is prouin be ſuim witnes going on the ſtreetis beſide; the bailzies awin wyf, principall leidar off this tumultuous armie off amaſones, na man could eſteeme bot a premeditat deuyſe and plott laed doune, be policie and craft off men. Thairfore the counſall, for exact triell of ſic ane inſolence, called to thair iudgement a guid number of the maiſt factious of theſe weemen, be the officiars informatioun, and alſo the magiſtratis and counſall off the toun, and ſuim other honeſt witnes. The day of this triell was the 26 Aprile, all compeired. The fact neidit no probatioun; it was granted be the weemen, and ſuim mennis preſence prouin be ſindrie honeſt witnes. The greateſt was in the triell off the mennis advyſe, and hunting out of the weemen; to this miſbehauiour, albeit it could na otherwayis be, was be thame abſolutelie denied and manſworne. Neuertheleſs, be guid triell was ſufficientlie prouin, the magiſtratis of the toun, mony ſpeciall off the counſall and greateſt reulars, at this preſent, of that toun, to haue bein off the foreknowledge and aduyſe of this inſolence committed be the weemen, and, in end, is granted be thame ſelfis.

In this triell and proceiding thair off, fallis out, that be examinatioun off all was participant to the fact, it is conſtantlie deponed that Maiſter Williame Watſoun, miniſter, and quha indeid has bein principal reular of that toun this lang tyme, was participant to the foreknawledge and aduyſe to this inſolente deid; quhairfore was thocht meit, and reſolued be the counſall, he ſould be ſummond and examinat heirupon, the 28 of the ſame moneth; quhilk day he compered. Lordis off counſall was almoſt all away, nane preſent with me bot my lord erle off Cathnes, lord Preſident, lord Aduocat, and ſir Robert Meluill, yioungar off Bruntiland. We examinat him in the beſt and maiſt conuenient forme and termis we could: firſt, he denyis onye foreknawledge at all of that purpois, or onye intention to the like; alwayis in end, preiſſed be circumſtancis and confrontatioun with others, quha had granted and confeſt the ſame (we being alwayis reſolued to decerne him as conuict), he cumis to confeſſioun and acknawledgement off his offence and ouirſicht, declaris and profeſſis a greate remorſe, to haue blotted his calling and vocatioun, in being onye wayis participant, and nocht reſiſting to that fact; requiris us to uſe that als moderatlie as wee could, in regaird of his functioun, as yie will parſaue be the recorde off counſall I ſend yiow heirwith, ondir the clerks hand, off that mater. This ſua proceidit, wee thoght nocht expedient, in reſpect of his calling and vocatioun, and reuerence wee beir thairto, to proceid farder; we commandit him to wairde within the toune of Edinbrough, till farder reſolutioun ſould be tane with him; diſchairging him alwayis preaching, and reſorte to preſbiterie, ſeſſioun of the kirk, or onye other exerciſe nor preachings and prayers ordinar in the toun. Sua, wee continewed all farder till the nixt frequent meiting off the counſall, quhilk will nocht be before 17 May. Wee preſentlie wardit ſindrie ſpecialls of Bruntiland, ſuim in the toubuith, and ſuim in the toun. The counſall will tak, God willing, ſufficient ordour with all the reſt. It is expedient and neceſſair wee be ſupplied, be the beamis of his maieſties prencelie wiſdome, in directing us, quhat ordour wee ſall tak with Maiſter Williame Watſone, quhilk may be ather be his maieſties lettir to the haill counſall, or gef his maieſtie will command yiow write to me quhat is his ſacred mynde, I ſall be cairfull the ſame be obeyed; and off this I requyre to haue ſuim anſuer fra yiow, ſa ſone as yie may, war meit, if poſſibill war, wee ſould haue it before the 15 or 16 of May. Suim thing yiour lordſhip has writtin to me, 19 Aprile, be his maieſties command, anent ſuim examinatioun off George Grahame, quha procuired the releiff off B. Iles ſonne, and Ramfurlie, frome the rebellis off Ila. I haue writtin lang ſence to his maieſtie, in ane lettir off my awin, quhilk was deliuered be Jhone Murray, all my entreſs and pairt in that mannis proceidings, and all that was betuix him and me, and farder will neiuer be found off me in treuth; quhairin I think I did als guid ſeruice for his maieſties honour, and countries, as euer I could be habill to doe. The ſaid George Grahame had neiuer farder warrand off me, worde nor write, bot my naked promeis of ane thouſand marks to him ſelf, be my worde, in caice he releiued ſafelie the twa priſonars. I think he ſall neiuer ſay farder. If he ſay, I ſall proue him fals; if he hes gone onye farder, it hes bein on his awin, or ſuim other mannis warrand nor myne; latt him and thame anſuir thairfore, on thair parrell. I think, certanelie, I haue mair cauſe to rejoyce and glore in all I did in that, nor rew the ſame; and ſua I perſuade myſelf his ſacred maieſtie thinkis alſo of me. Quhateiuer onye would ſay or mantein in the contrair, I ſall eiuer be cairfull off his maieſties honour and guid ſeruice, en deſpit des enuiants. Nocht hauing farder, for the preſent, bot to wiſh yiow all happines and contentement, reſtis

Your Lordſhips maiſt affectionat to ſerue yiow,

DUNFERMELYNE.

Frome Edinburgh, ultimo Aprilis 1615.

In cace it micht ſeeme I am too ſpairing in wryting ſa nakedlie off this purpois anent Maiſter Williame Watſoun, and nocht diſcharging the deutie of ane honeſt counſalour, and officiar, in declaring my awin aduiſe; for that yie ſall haue this, quhilk alwayis I ſubmitt hallie, and in all humilitie and affectioun, to his moiſt gracious maieſties cenſure and bettir iudgement. Sould be meit, his maieſtie ſould declair this to be his prencelie will, in his royall mercie; albeit, this offenſe be extraordinar and ſuperlatef, in a man off that calling; neuertheleſs, for reſpect to his lang ſeruice in ſa honorabill a functioun of Goddis miniſterie, quhilk heigheſt prencis, and wee all ſould ſa reuerence, the puniſhment to proceid na farder, bot in directioun to the archiebiſchoppe, his ordinar, to ſuſpend him hallie for certane ſpace, fra all uſe off his calling, in onye pairt; declair him onfitt to be a miniſter, in ſa frequent and public a place, and, in the meane tyme, prouide him to the miniſterie in ſuim other mair priuat and reteired pairt off the cuntrie; and ordeine that toun to be prouidit off ſuim miniſter off mair calme pairt, to reule and circumcide ſic haitt humours as may be in that peopill.

CXXVIII.—ARCHIBALD CAMPBELL TO LORD BINNING.

Right Honorabell,

As I writt to your lordſhip from the wode of Meſſen, Sir James M'Coneill and M'Ranald went by that way; and as I was informed, he had ſtayed Wedniſday night and Thurſday in Murthlie, ſo I heaving riddin Wedniſday night, and Thurſday all day, I watchit at Murthlie all that night, bot they made no ſtay thair, bot M'Ranald ſent a man of his for a young boy of his awin that he had in Murthlie, and convoyed him with him: On Wodniſday at night they wer in a pure mans houſe in Strabrane, and on Thurſday at night thay wer in the eaſt end of Ranoch, quher I might haue bene ſex houris before thame, gif I had bene ſertane of thair way. The Erle of Atholl was advertiſed be the Erle of Mar, and he folloued thame, and on Friday, in the morning, cam in ſight off thame; bot my lordes men had run ſo far, and his ſpayis that went before him, ſo wnprovedent, that Sir Jeames and his compane wer advertiſed be Strowan his wyff, quho is M'Ranald his dochter, they wer forſſed to leave thair horſſis and clothis, and take thame to the wodis. The Erle of Atholl apprehendit Sir Jeames his man, that was with him in the caſtell, and quho ſtayed efter him in the caſtell, that morning he brake ward, and too men of M'Ranaldis; bot my lord tels me he deſmiſt thame all.

My lord, ſo far as I culd learne, the erle was exceiding willing in this perſute, bot thair was ſum wrange done him, that I beleive his lordſhip yit knous not of. Thoſe that I ſent to be before thame ar not as yit returned, nor no word from thame. I hope in God your lordſhip ſall heir that thay haue mett, ffor thay can hardlie pas by thame. The Erle of Atholl aſſuris me, that thair cam a companie of men to meit M'Ranald.

My lord, if thair wer bot too hunder men, and ane honeſt commander on the feildis, they wer not eabell to do any thing be land, nor culd thay haue tyme to mowe any to follow thame; bot, in treuth, if thay be permittit, they will no dout grow ſtronge. Sir Jeames man, that the Erle of Atholl apprehendit, told that they reſoluit to burne Cadell his landis of Mukarne, and that he thoght a great many Illenderis wer on thair courſe. My lord, ſo ſchune as I heir from thoſe I derectit efter thame, and that I kno quhat courſe Sir Jeames teakis firſt in hand, or quhich way he teakis him to the ſeie, I will, God willing, returne, not douting bot my Lord Theſaurer will haue ſum conſideraſioun of my peanis, as I ſall be reddie at all occaſiouns to adventer myſelf in his maieſteis ſeruice, I reſt

Youre Lordſhips ewer to ſerue yow,

CXXIX.—LORD BINNING TO THE EARL OF TULLIBARDINE.

My very Honorable Good Lord,

I receaved this morning your lordſhips packett, and after reeding your lordſhips owne letter, I declared to my Lord Chauncellour what letters your lordſhip had ſent to me. His lordſhip conveyned the Archbiſhope of St Androis and the Lords Preſident, Deput Theſaurer, and Clarke of Regiſter, and in their preſence opned and red the letters ſent be Sir James M'Onell to your lordſhips ſelf, the Earle of Crawford, Biſhope of the Iles, and Earle of Caithenes. The ſubſtance of the letters are for the moſt part vniforme, ſo as the copie of his letter to your lordſhips ſelf will informe your lordſhip, that he intendis to his excuſe his breache of warde, for feare of his life, offering all obedience, yf he can haue ſaiftie and libertie, intending to ſend ane petition to the Counſell to be ſent be their addreſſe to his maieſtie. Since he proteſts ſo ſolemnlie and with great oathes, that he is innocent of the taking and holding of Duneveg, I am ſorie that he is ſo vnhappie as to have broken waird, for he had great experience of his maieſties clemencie, who, after his conviction of treaſon, for many odious crymes, did furceaſe all rigour, and give thereby hope to Sir James, rather to hope for marcie nor to take any deſperate reſolution. Yf any ſuch petition had come to the Counſells handis, as without offence might have bene preſented to his maieſtie, they wolde haue ſent it to Courte, bot his lettres are out of purpoſe. I am ſorie that he aggreged his maieſties wraith, be his breatch of warde, and that hauing committed that heighnous offence, it wes not his happines to go furth of his maieſties dominions, from whence he might haue more convenientlie made offer of his humiliation, but ſo long as he remaynes within his maieſties dominionis, and hes ſocietie and dealing with rebells and broken men, I can not expect that his petitionis can be receaved be his maieſtie, vnles he wold do ſuch notable ſervice aganis ſome principall rebells as might perſwade his maieſtie to think him wourthie of mercie. My Lord Chauncellour hes promiſed to ſuperſeid your lordſhips actions till your coming here, at the tyme appoynted. Your bill is paſt for delay, that your lordſhip may called before breeves be directed at the inſtance of your partie. The Counſell acknowledgeis your lordſhips good diſcretion in the ſending of thir letters, and ar confident that your lordſhip will continew carefull and diligent, in everie thing that may concerne his maieſties ſervice, or good of the countrie. So, wiſhing your lordſhip all happines, I reſt

Your Lordſhips affectionat freind at command,

CXXX.—SIR RORIE M'LEOD OF HARRIS TO LORD BINNING.

MY LORD,

MY hwmble dewtye, after all reverence and ſeruice remembered. In the beginning of Apryll, I left Edinburgh, and paſſed till Glaſgo to viſite my barnes, who ar at the ſchoole there, where I remained the ſpace of fyifteinth dayes; and thereafter, I paſſed till Striviling, and, going into the toun, I mett my lord Fleming comeing out of the toun, who had a ledd courſhour beſyd, and I rydand on a other courſhour, both the courſhours brailes togidder; and I wes forced to leave and fall of my horſe, where I brack two ribbes in my ſyd, and lay for the ſpace of xvth dayes, in Perth, vnder the cure of phiſik, and thereafter I reteired to my owne countrey. And, in the meantyme of my abſence, Coill Makgilleſpik, and his companie, come to the North Iles, and ſtoppet, the firſt night, at the Yle of Camis, and thereafter paſſed derectlie to North Wyeſt, Donald Gorme his landis, where he wes reſeat, his men enterteaned, and Makintoſhes doghtar, Donald Gormes wyff, beeng for the tyme in that countrey, togidder with young Donald Gorme, Makkenyees good brother, ſend to the ſaid Coill, beeng ſcant of viuerſe, four horſe load of meat, in the whitche there wes two ſwyne, on ſalted, and one vnſalted: And the ſaid Coill, and his companie, wes perſwaded, moved, and requeeſted, by the ſaide Donald Gormes wyff, and young Donald, and clann Neill Vaine, the ſpeciall tenents of North Wyeſt, to paſe to a yle of myne called Zirta, a day and a night ſailing from the reſt of the North Yles, far out in the ocean ſea; and, to that effect, derected two of the tenents of North Wyeſt to be there guyd and pylat there, for they wer vnknowen thame ſelues there, and comeing to the yle, they ſlew all the beaſtiall of the yle, both kowes and horſſes, and ſheepe, and took away all the ſpoolyee of the yle; onlie reſerved the lyves of the enhabitants therof. And, when all wes done, they returned till North Wyeſt againe, where they randered there guyde and pyllats againe, and gave to the inhabitants thereof all and whole the ſpoyle of my yle; and afore my comeing to the yles, the ſaid Coill Makgilleſpik paſſed away ſouth to Ila againe. Now, ſence I perſave ſir James hes brocken warde and come to Lochquhaber, and out of that come to Moron and Knoddort, where he took perforce a young youth, the ſecund ſone of Glengarrie, on a worſe, and keepes him ſtill in cuſtodie, and the captanes ſone; and thereafter come to Sleat, to Donald Gormes bounds, where he gatt a bigg boat with oares, ſale and taikleing, and entercomoned, at lenth, with Donald Gorme there, and a nomber of Donald Gormes folkes of Sleat, called clann Tarlich, is gone with him: And thereafter paſſed till the Yle of Egga, where he mett Coill and his companye, togidder with his bafe fone, and a fone of fir James MakSorle of the Route; and they ar in nomber, as I lerne, tuelfue or thretteinth fcore, at the prefent tyme, and whidder they go fouth or north, I can not tell, at the wretteing heerof. It is my aduyfe to your lordfhip and counfall, that your lordfhip derect a ample command and charge, till all and findrie the fuperioures of the Yles, till convocat thame felues in armes, with a full commiffion till everie one of ws till perfew the faid rebelles, by fea and land, with fyre and fword, in this forme, in thrie feuerall armyes and companyees; that is, Makclaine of Doward, and Makcleane of Lochbuy, in a companye and armye; Donald Gorme, and the captane of Clannronald, in a other armie; and I, the larde of Coill, and Mackynnoun, and my lord of Kyntailes forces, in a other companye; and let euerie one of thir armees endevoire thamefelues in his maiefties feruice, and he that doeth beft therein have the greateft honour and preferrment, and reward of his maieftie and counfal. And becaus the faid fir James and his companyee hes taken thamefelues to the fea, in two barkes, and findrye other boates, it were expedyent that your lordfhip and counfell would fend me ane commiffion and powar to embark any fhip I can apprehend, in thir Iles, to the better perfute of thame in thir Iles; otherwife your lordfhip and counfell till furnifhe out two or three fhippes, well provyded, to thir Iles, and derect one of thame to me, that I and they may concure togidder in his highnes feruice; and I defyre the Iles fuperiours to be devyded in three factions, for this caus. Sir James and the rebelles of the clann Donald ar of kyn, blod, and alia to Donald Gorme, and to the captane of clann Ronnald; and fir James and his rebelles ar deadlie enemies to Mackelene and his name, and they will never aggree in a companyee and armee; and as for me, your lordfhip knowes verie well that I have geven a proof of my obedience and feruice to his maieftie and counfell alreddye, in taking and apprehending, and delyuering my own name and blood, the rebellis of the Lews, and in making thefe lands peaceable to his maieftie. Lett the reft do the lyk feruice now to his maieftie. And it is verie well knowen to his maieftie and nobilitie of Scotland, that my hous neuer rebelled, nor yett fhall rebell; but as it hes beene ay fubiect to his maiefties will, fa fhall I contenew, God willing, to my lyves end; and ſhall endevor my ſelue, with all poſſible force and powar, till perſew theſe rebells, and all other rebells that ſhall rebell againes his highnes authoritie, yea, if it wer my father, brother, or ſone; for, bliſſed be God and his maieſtie, I have whereon to leeve his maieſties peacyable ſubiect, whilk I will not loſſe for my lyve and all the world: and, if your lordſhip thinkis it expedyent, I care not ſupoſe your lordſhip preſent this my letter to the counſall. I receaved my commiſſion concerning Coill Makgilleſpik on Witſounday, afore I com home, and after that Coill wes away till Ilae. I requeaſt your lordſhip, in hombilitie and homlienes, till aduerteſe me of all occurrent newes. I end, geveing your lordſhip to God's moſt holie tuition,

Your Lordſhips homble ſeruitour at powar,

CXXXI.—EARL OF TULLIBARDINE TO LORD BINNING.

MY VERRIE HONOURABILL GOOD LORD,

I HAUE reffauit McAllan McEan, capitane of the Clanronnald, his anſwer of my letter, quherby I perceaue that he is nocht previe to Sir

James his brekking of waird, and is refoluit nocht to mell with thair courffis; for Sir Jameis and McRonnald did all that thei culd be meffages, to haue met with him vpone pretence to haue delyuerit him his fone, bot he on nawayis wald haue ony midling with thame, nor wald nocht reffaue his fone, becaus he wes in thair cumpany, without ane warrand of your lordfhips of the counfell. Bot I heir that fenfyne, quhen Sir James tuik the fea, he fend him frome him. Sir Jameis, at his paffing out of Lochabber, wes only accumpaneit with fourtene men and boyis, and McRonnald followit him with fextene men and boyis: they paft out that to McEan of Ardnamurchayis cuntrie, quher I heir that McEan himfelff, with all his cumpany, ar with him, at the leift thair is ane great pairte of them. He gat fum boittis thair, and paft therfra langis the coift; bot he culd haue no landing, nather in McAllan McEan his cuntrie, McClewd Hereis, nor Donald Gormis cuntrie, ffor thei pat forcis on all the fea poirtis to ftoip his landing; and I think thej hed maid fum onfet on him, if thair boittis hed nocht bene all funk of befoir, for feir of fuppryfing thame. I heir he landit into the Iles of Rowme and Eg, quher Coull McGillefpie did meit him with ane cumpany of hagbutteris, about the number of fewin fcoir of men. Thair forme of meiting, as I heir, wes this: Sir James and his cumpany ftude in ane plaice be thame felffis, quher the wthyr with his cumpany went round about him onis, and at the nixt going about falutit him with thair woly of fhoittis, and continowit fua fhuitting and inviring of him for the fpaice of halfe ane hour, and therefter com to him euerie man, particularie chapping hands. Wpone the morne thei conuenit all the haill beftiall, hors and ky, to one plaice, quher thej thocht to haue flayne haill; bot vpone bettir aduyfement, thej flew onlie ane number of ky for meat, quhilk thej caryit immediatlie to thair boittis, and therefter tuik the fea, to the number of thre hunder men of all. Cole brocht him tua crearis and fum boittis, with fum wthyr boittis that Sir James himfelff gat in Ardmurche, and fuppryfit in wthyr pairtis. It is thocht that thej haue tane thair woyage to Ilay, and if the cuntrie be vpone thair gaird, as thei fuld, I think thej fall nocht perfeitt mekill. The occafioun of my mannis ftay, it wes lang befoir he culd get tryell quher McAllan McEan wes, for he wes buſſie in gewing of ordour that Sir James ſuld nocht land on ony of his Iles, and obſcuring himſelff that thej ſuld nocht get him. I vnderſtand he hes ſend ſum letters to the counſell, quhilk I think your lordſhip knawis of beſoir now. I will requeſt your lordſhip to lat me vnderſtand quhat directioun is cummit yit frome his maieſtie concernyng Sir James McConeill, and quhat concluſioun your lordſhips of counſell hes taikin thairanent. Swa, hawing na farder at this preſent, committis your lordſhip to the protectioun of God, and reſtis

Your Lordſhips euir aſſuirit freind and ſeruant,

TULLIBARDINE.

Perthe, the 24 of Junij 1615.

I vnderſtand Glengarrie is preſentlie in Edinburgh, and is trublit be my Lord Lowat in ſum actionis betuix thame. I wald requeſt your lordſhip to be his freind, and to forder him hame ouir, for I mynd to meit with him in his by cumming, and ſall lay him ryght to any thing that concernis his maieſteis ſeruice to his power, and becaus he is dealler betuix me and McAllan McEan, capitane of the Clanronnald, pleas your lordſhip wret to me quhat particular ye wald haue me to lay to thair chairge, and I ſall do the beſt.

The pretext that Sir James McConeill and McRonnald myndit to haue vſit, to haue perſuadit McAllan McEan and Glengarry to haue taikin thair pairte, is this auld actioun that my Lord Lowat hes aganis thame, and the taikin McAllan McEanis landis ouir his head be Sir James Steuart. In my opinioun, your lordſhips of the counſell ſuld do weill to delay the diſcuſſing of thir debaittis for ane quhyle, till thir wthyr materis of Sir James war ſetlit.

CXXXII.—MAKNEILL OF THYNEIS TO THE LORD SECRETARY BINNING.

My Lord,

Your lordſhip, accepting ſo weill of my laſt newis of the eyllis, hes emboldonit mee now with moiſt expedition to foirſee your lordſhip of this lait accidence fallin out; for the xxiijth of thes inſtant, Sir James McDoneill landit in Yllay, and cam onpercaved niar Doneweage, and be traine of a craftie fellow of the contree, the conſtable of the caſtell, be name Alexander McDowgall, brother to Raraye, was broght furth be thes fellow and fyw ſoldiouris with him, and, cwming a little ſpace frome caſtell, war ſett upon be Sir James and Coill McGilleſpith, and all thair contpanie. The gentleman ſpying them, maid for the houſe, and is ſlaine, and thrie of his companie; the houſe taine, and the pryour and his twa ſonnes, quha war within the houſe, but ar now at libertie, be Sir James. Calder his haill companie is cum frome Eyllay. Sir James was four nights in ane little Yllan callit Collinſaye, and ſlew ane numir of merttis; he hes maid ane ſtrenth in it vpon ane freſch wattir loch in ane eyllane. Thair is no apeirence but ane vttir wrake for the haill ſuith eyllis, except ſom heiſtie remeid be founde, for the morne they dewyd theam ſelf. Sir James cwmes to Iuray, and Coill cwmes to the little eyllan that I poſſes; for the quhilkis, I byde twa extremities, for thir rebellis perſeuis my lyff and guidis, and my lord of Meidope be ragour of law. In thir twa extremities, I moiſt mein me to your lordſhips fawour, that for any ſerwice or pleiſour I can do, that your lordſhip hawe ſume compation on my preſentt aſtaite. Becauſe the perticular war longſum to wreat, I hawe appoyntit ane of my advocatts, Adame Cwningham, to confer [with] your lordſhip at lenth, that your lordſhip may find remeid, that I be not trubillit be waris and law at anes. This I refer to your lordſhip, and my puir ſerwice to your diſpoſitioun moiſt humble remembred, and my baldnes excuiſed, I ſhall ewir reſt

Your Lordſhips moiſt humble, and reddie to ſerwe yow to death,

CXXXIV.—THE LORDS OF PRIVY COUNCIL TO KING JAMES VI.

Pleis your Sacred Maiestie,

We haif this moirning reffauit advertifment that fir James M'Donald, and his complices, hes furprifit and tane the caftell of Dunnyvaig, and hes flane the capitane and fome of the keipairis thairof; fua that now thay ar enterit in a oppin rebellioun, and will not faill to procure fome grite difordour in the Yllis, gif a prefent and fubftantious courfe be not tane for preventing and fuppreffing thairof. And whereas the geving of thair landis, over thair headis, to the erll of Argyle, and his freindis, is pretendit be thame to be the caus, quhairby thay ar inducit to this desperat and treasounable rebellioun; and it being expectit that the said erll and his freindis sould not onlie haif retenit and haldin these landis vndir a persyte and satled obedience, sua that your maiestie nor your cuntrey, sould neuir haif bene forder troublit in that mater, bot that thay otherwyse sould haif disabilled thir rebellis and lymmairis to haif attemptit ony disordour heirefter: We haif, thairfore, thocht meete that the chairge and burdyne of this seruice salbe layd vpoun the said erll, and that he and his freindis be send home with all diligence, with a strait chairge and directioun to him to accept vpoun him the lieutennandrie and chairge of this seruice, and to prosequute and follow oute the same, in his awne persone, with his haill pouer, freindschip, and forces, and with all kynd of celeritie and diligence; and for this effect, that he go in persone to Ila, and thair persew the house and the rebellis, and neuir leave af the persute of thame, quhill the house be recouerit, the rebellis dissipat and suppreft, or put af the cuntrey, and that the cuntrey be restorit to obedience and quietnes. And whereas your maiestie had formarlie appointit a schip with a pinnace to come to the Yllis for the persute of Coill M'Gillespik, we will humelie requeist your maiestie, seeing your maiesteis cannoun can not be transportit frome hense to Ila, that your maiestie wilbe pleased to gif new ordour and directioun for sending of the ship and pinnace to Ila, prouidit with cannoun, and vther wearelyke furnitour, to attend your maiesteis seruice thair, in the persute and batterie of that house; and that your maiestie will resolue with the erll of Argyle agane what tyme he will vndirtak to be thair with his forceis, to the effect your maiesteis cannoun may be reddy to meete him thair at that tyme, and that your maiestie gif vnto him a strait chairge and directioun to haif a cair of the keeping of your maiesteis cannonis, and that the same come not vndir the pouer nor reverence of the rebellis, as he will be ansuerable vpoun his lyff. This being a mater requireing haist and diligence, we will humelie beseik your maiestie to be so mutche the moir instant with the erll of Argyle, to mak his addresse home, to follow out this busynes.

So, in all reuerence, recommending your facred maieftie to Godis divyne protectioun, we reft

Your Maiefteis moft humble and obedient

CXXXV.—LORD BINNING TO SIR RORIE M'LEOD OF HARRIS.

SIR,

YOUR letters, of the 18 of this monethe, wer this day delyuered to my lord Chanceller and me, quherby we perfaue your faithfull affectioun to do his maieftie good feruice againes his rebellis, quherin I pray yow to perfeuere, conftantlie following the good exemple of your foirbeares; affureing yow, that if your weele doing differue his maiefties favour and liberalitie, he is bothe als willing, and more powarfull, to recompens good feruice, nor ony king that euer reigned in this ile. We haue knawne this day that the rebellis hes teane the caftell of Donyveg, quhiche makis thair rebellioun moir manifeſt and odious, and will force his maieſtie and counſell to vſe the greater powar and dilligence to ouerthraw and puneis theme. I pray yow ſiek all good occaſiounes to hairme the traitouris, and giue your true concurrance, with your beſt forces, to thoſe quho ſall perſew theme be his maieſties commiſſioune. Your opinioun for thair perſute, mentioned in your letter, is verie gude, and weele allowed, as yow will perſaue be the commiſſiounes gevin to your ſelf and your nightbouris, principall commandares of the Iles and Hielandes. His maieſtie is adverteiſed with the rebellis proceedingis, with aduyce from the Counſall to ſend ſchippis and cannons againes theme, with all other neceſſare forces and prouiſioune, as forder ſalbe concluded, yow ſalbe aduerteiſed. Nathir ſall the wrangis done to yow be your nightbours be neglectit, bot according to the tryell yow ſalbe repaired. In the meantyme, the Counſall deſyres yow to foirbeare all violence againes your nightboures; bot if thay intend ony violence againes yow, defend your ſelfis with all convenient moderatioun, leaſt your particulares bread hinderence to his maieſties ſeruice. So, hoiping yow will let me know with diligence, all thingis falling furth, quhiche yow ſall think fit to be ſignified to the Counſall, I commit yow to the protectioun of God. Edinburghe, the laſt of Junij [1615.]

Your verie loveing freend,

BINNING.

My Lord Chauncellare, and the reſt of the lordes of his maieſties Counſall, hes deſyred me to adverteiſe yow that this letter muſt be accompted as ane anſuer from the hail Counſall to yow.

I ſall preſentlie wryte to his maieſtie the contents of your letter, and ſignifie to his hienes your faithfull pourpoſe to giue him pruif of your true hairt to do him ſeruice; therfore, I pray yow, be cairefull to ſchow it be gude effects to eſchew your owne repruif and myne, which can not be done, if, efter ſo dewtifull promeiſſis, you aither kythe ſlewthfull or vndeutifull, which I will no wayes ſuſpect.

CXXXVI.—SIR JAMES MACDONALD TO LORD BINNING.

My verie Honourabill Gud Lord,

Pleis your lordſhip, I wald haue writtin to your lordſhip long or now, had not I culd find no bearer, becaus nane of my awin dar go thair : aluyſe I will euir think my ſelf bund for the fauour your lordſhip ſchew me, at my being laſt in the caſtell, whome God knawis vtheris wes bent to wrong me be thair fals accuſationis, whoſe feir, and the report they gaue out that my lyfe was onlye in thair willis, was the onlye motione of the braik of ward, and no intentione nor deſyre I had or hes to live as ane ribell or outlaw, whiche traid, the Lord knawes, I abhore, bot that I wald gladlie live at libertye, with my lyfe ſaif. And now, my lord, I beſeik your lordſhip, for the fauour of God, and my perpetuall ſeruice, pitie me, and be my freind, that his maieſtie may be gratiouſlye moved not to yeild to my vnfreindis to ruit me and my whole race out, being fyve or ſex hundret yeiris poſſeſſouris, and now willing to obey and ſerwe his maieſtie in all humilitie, I ſeing how I and my pure freindis may live : And if your lordſhip culd find the meanis, that his maieſtie and counſall may be moved to let me poſſes this pure iland, paying for it as anie vther may, or hes yit offerit to do, and getting my pardone, [I] ſall find ſufficient ſuretie both for my yeirlie dewtye and the peace and quyetnes of me and all that dwellis vnder me. Gif your lordſhip may or will do me any guid in this, I will not onlie be ane to do your lordſhip guid ſeruice, bot, with Goddis graice, let your lordſhip ſie my thankfulnes. I beſeik your lordſhip, for Goddis cauſe, be playne with me, and if his maieſtie may not be moved to let me haue this iland, diminiſſing nothing of his maieſties commoditie, that your lordſhip will let me know be your adviſe, be what vther meanis his maieſtie may be moved to grant ane generall pardone to me and all myne, and that we may haue to ſuſteine ws in ſum meaſour, leiſt we be forcit, being without anie living, to oppreſs vtheris. This, abyiding your lordſhips anſuer, committing yow to God, I reſt

Your Lordſhips euir to command,

Sr. Ja. Makdonald.

July 1 [1615?]

My lord, if his maieſtie be not willing that I ſall be his heighnes tennent in Ila, for Goddis cauſe, let his maieſtie hauld it in his awin hand, for that is certane, I will die befoir I ſie a Campbell poſſes it; and his maieſtie haulding it in his awin hand, his maieſtie may haue ane thouſand merkis mair be yeir nor Calder ſuld pay, I making it quyt of me and my kin, whiche I will do, vpoun ſuche reaſonabill conditionis as I will ſchow your lordſhip, if ye may aſſure me that ye may get his maieſtie brocht to this poynt, and in the meantyme no imployment to be givin aganis me till your lordſhip ſie how this may be brocht to pas. As for this houſe of Duneveg, whiche I tuik in four and tuenty houris frome Calderis men, your lordſhip getting me fauour of his maieſtie, the houſe ſalbe to ſerve his maieſtie, and neuer to be keipit aganis his hienes; and if his maieſties awin gaird or the biſchopes had bein in the houſe, befoir God, I wald neuer perſew it; bot finding theſe in it who crewellie oppreſt the pure cuntrie, wes the onlie ſuitteris both of my lyfe and landis,

I wald I culd do thame mair difgrace. Referring all to your lordfhips confideratione and anfueir, I reft

Your Lordfhips euer to be commandit,

CXXXVIII.—[MAKNEIL OF THYNEIS?] TO LORD BINNING.

My Lord,

My humble dewtie remembred; it will pleis your lordſhip, that ſene I wret to your lordſhip laſt, Donnald Gorme, Sir James baſtard ſone, came into Kintyre, the number of tuentie four ſouldiours, and finding the kingis houſe in Keanloch woid, without any in it, hes tane the ſame vpone Wedneſday laſt. Sir James, Coill McAllibit, and the haill rebels, of the number of foure hundreth, came to Yla to Kintyre, and ar glaidlie reſſaved of many of cuntrie men thair. The haill ſpeciall inhabitants of Yla ar alſo with the rebels: two ſpeciall men that held of Argyle befoir ar newlie rebellit with thame. McDuphe of Collinſon and his haill name, and Donnald Gigaith Makeain, who held Jurah of Argyle, thoſe two chiftanes ar gaine with the rebels, threſcore and foure, and remaines in Kintyre in pairtis neireſt Argyll, as yet making thair boaſt, and working to be at the Tarbert, quhilk is nyne myls within Argyles boundis, this night or the morne. Auchinbrek hes convocat all that he could, and is to reſiſt thame, and to perſew in cace they pas the boundis of Kintyre: He hes left companies to keip all boundis and coiſtis near thair perſute: he is cairfull to diſchairge ane honeſt dewtie in that he hes taine in hand. Many pairtis neireſt Kintyre caſtin weaſt, inſpeciall my haill eſtate and my freindis, which, if the treuth war knowne to your lordſhip, your lordſhip wald lament it. The rebels, in ſo ffar as I can learne, preſumes to no les nor more then euer thair forebeiris had, except it pleaſe God and his maieſtie to provyd ſum ſuddane remedie, for the rebels diſpairis of any perſute, and allures many to follow thame, be aſſuring thame of Argyles death, ſo Argyles lang ſtay makis all thair pryde to increas: all the cuntries ar aloft. Quhat ſall ſucceid, your lordſhip ſall heir, as all occaſions offers. So long as I bruik liff, your lordſhip ſall be aſſured of the poore ſervice I may or can be able to do. Praying God for your lordſhips happines, I reſt, and ever to death ſall remaine, CXXXIX.—LORD BINNING TO THE EARL OF ARGYLE.

MY MOST HONORABILL GOOD LORD,

THINKING my ſelff aſſured that your lordſhip wald, according to your promeis contenit in your letter of the 24 ſent to me, begin your journey, ſomeward vpone the nixt day, and end it, at fardeſt, within ten or tuell dayes, I certified the counſall thairof, and, be letteris to

Auchinbrek and vtheris, affirmed, wndowtedlie, that your lordſhip wald keip that dyet; bot now wnderſtanding your lordſhips cairleſnes of that weightie chairge, quhilk ye have wndertaine aganis the tratours who daylie growes in number, force, and preſumptioun, becaus they find no reſiſtance, far les perſute aganis them, quherby they have left ſum forces in Ila to keip Duneveig and Lochgorne, and Makoneill ſelff, and ſex hundreth with him, having maid thameſelffis maiſteris of Kintyre, ar ſo ſwelled in pryde, that they have ſent the fyre corſe throw the cuntrie, and wairned all the inhabitants betuix Tarbert and the Mull of Kintyre, to tak thair land of the traitour Makoneill. We heir of ſo much boldnes in the rebells, and fear in the cuntrie people, as we expect daylie to heir of thair farder futting vpone your lordſhips cuntrie of Argyle, which your owne people does fearfullie apprehend. We ar aſſured of Auchinbrekis faithfulnes to his maieſtie and your lordſhip, bot do exceedinglie diſtruſt his gouernement, in reſpect of his owne ſeiklines, the diſloyaltie of many of the Iriſhe people, and boldnes and ſubtilitie of the rebels, too able to kep advantage of him: nather will I conceall that your lordſhips name is envyed; your owne autoritie and wounted eſtimation infinitlie impaired be your abſence and neglect of your cuntrie, and releiff of your freindis engadged and wraiked for your debtis: and now, if your lordſhip ſall kythe cairles or ſlouthfull and ſluggiſhe in this great chairge, ye will increas the libertie of your ewilwillars, who have boldlie ſpokin to your diſadvantage and diſcredit, diſcourage his maieſties good ſubiects, embolden the rebells, and mak your taſk more difficle nor your lordſhip apprehends. My affectioun to my maieſties honour and reſpect, and goodwill to your lordſhips ſelff, makis me to wryt more liberallie in this matter nor vtheris will, which I hope and requeaſt your lordſhip may tak in good pairt; earneſtlie beſeiking your lordſhip, all empeſchments removed, to come heir with all poſſible expeditioun and reſolution, to go fordward with wiſdom and diligence. Your lordſhip will find that your following your owne will aganis my opinion, in purchaſſing ane commiſſioun in this ſervice, to ane particular number of the counſall, will do hinder to the buſſines, bot the nixt beſt muſt be done, nothing being able to remove all difficulties, bot your lordſhips preſence and diligence, which

I recommend to your lordſhip, as ye affect your maiſters favour, and your owne honour. So, luiking for your lordſhips extreame diligence, to amend bypaſt ſleuth and ouerſights, I commit your lordſhip to the protectioun of God. Edinburgh, this fyft of Auguſt.

CXL.—LORD BINNING TO KING JAMES VI.

MOST SACRED SOUERANE,

BE the copies of the letters writtin to me be the Laird of Auchinbrek, and Hector Makneill, ſent heirwith to your maieſtie, the eſtate of the Hielandis will be trewlieſt knowne, and how neceſſar it is that the Erle of Argyle haiſt thither. His ſlow returne hes emboldened the rebels. I perſuaded the Archibiſchop of Santandrois to ſtay in Edinburgh till the erles cumming, and I came to this place to meit him, and haiſt him; and this day having rencontred him, have prayed him to diſpatche letters from the counſall to the commiſſionars of the Iles, to be in Edinburgh vpon Sonday at night, the 20 of this moneth, that he being advyſed and authoriſed be thame, may with all ſpeid go to the Hielandis aganis the rebels. He is this night to wryte to his freindis in Argyle of his being in Edinburgh, and reſolution to haiſt to that cuntrie. He is to ſend to Aire to learne Capten Wodis eſtate, if he be cum thither, and if he be not yet cum to direct the proueſt and bailzies to mak him ſpeidie wairning when the Capten ſall cum. I have not concealed from him what is talked of his ſlownes, and what opinion is conſaued and vttered be ſum, that ſince his infeftment, and Cadels, of the lands of Kintyre and Ila, hes driuen thir rebels to attempt thir deſperat courſes, that they having ſufficient power to repreſſe thame, ſould do it be thair owne forces, and at thair owne chairges. He aunſwers that he will do ſo for Kintyre, and doubtes not but Cadell will do all that he can to debate Ila, bot thay can not hinder the rebels to go to vther pairtis of the Iles and Mayneland, whair thay can not be preaſed to perſew thame. I did not inſiſt in the pourpoſe, which I onlie moved to wairne him of the danger of his reputation, if he ſall not proceid ſincerelie and forwardlie in the buſines, whairin he profeſſis verie dewtifull affection. None of his freindis ar yet returned from Court except Lundie. Auchinbreck is vnfitt for ſeruice, which I think ſall be beſt ſupplied be Lawers. Yiſterday, the Archibiſchop of Santandrois cauſed your maieſties commandement concerning Sinclair, Wilkie, and Cruikſchank, reſettars of the Jeſuites, to be executed with great ſecrecie, well kept to the very moment of the expected execution, and then cauſed convoy thame bak to priſon, to be baneiſſed according to your maieſties laſt warrand. It may pleaſe your maieſtie to cauſe tak ordour with the Erle of Caſſils, for renunciation of his heritable bailzerie of Carrik. So, beſeiking God long to preſerue your maieſtie in health, happines, and contentment, I reſt

SIR,

IT hes plaeſed God to uiſite me ſo, that I am not hable to undergo any long jurnay. I haif thairfor ſend, by the ſecretaire, ane nott of ſouch things as I think moſt fitt for your maieſties ſeruice in the Iyls, which I knou will performe als mouch as I could haif done myſelf: When I had helth, I did beſtow it on your maieſties ſeruice, and nou I uill beſeich you to pardon me, when I am nott hable. When it plaeſes God to ſend me helth, I ſchalbe, as heirtofoir your maieſtie hes found me,

Your Maieſties obedient ſubject,

CXLII.—LORD BINNING TO JOHN MURRAY.

SIR,

I HAUE ſene ſo many pruiffs of the toune of Edinburghs euer reddie affection and fordwardnes in all his maieſties ſeruices, as I might be accompted more vndewtifull to his maieſtie nor to thame, if I ſould not beare witnes thairof at all occaſions. Thay ar informed that John Young is gone to court, with commiſſion from Leith, to informe his maieſtie, ſiniſtrouſlie, of thame, and to requyre things to thair preiudice; whairby thay ar moued to ſend this bearer, Maiſter John Hay, thair clerk, to anſueir for thame, with warrand of trueth and reaſon. Your fauour in the help of his gude acceſs, and your aſſiſtance in thair laufull affaires, may greatlie pleaſour thame, and obleis thame to yow. At your being with thame, thay expreſſed thair loue and reſpect, and profeſſe thair deſyre and honeſt intention to giue yow better pruif, if yow haue occaſion to imploy thame, which makis me the more willing to recommend thair agent to your fauour and gude aſſiſtance, becaus I know thame euer faithfull to his maieſtie, and am aſſured that thay will alwayes be dewtifull, when your affaires ſall requyre pruif of thair thankfulnes. So, hoping that yow will freindlie aſſiſt the bearer, according to your wounted kyndnes, and the expectatioun of your freinds and comburgeſſis, I commit yow to the protection of God. CXLIII.—THE EARL OF ARGYLE TO LORD BINNING.

My verie Gude Lord,

As I wret to your lordſhip, in my laſt lettres, from the Lodinnis in Ilay, that efter I had landit my men, I maid ane onſet on the rebels, quher they war incampit at Ilanourſa, in Ilay, quher the greateſt pairt of the rebels boattis was apprehendit, and if it had not bene, that ſum of the tennents war neir to my camp, and ſeing my forces row away in thair boattis, the moone ſhyning, who preſentlie maid on great beakins vpone the tope of ane hie hill, the quhilk, ſo ſone as Sir James did ſie befor my men war at him be ſex or ſeavin myllis of ſea, he went to his boat, accompanied with McRannald, Sorle McJames, and ſum four and tuentie or threttie with thame, vtherwayes he could not have eſcaped. As they war going into thair boattis, ſum of the principall tennentis of Ilay deſyred him to have ſtayed, and becaus they had hazard all for him, and knew thair wald be no mercie ſchawin to thame, they ſould all die at his feit, bot McRannald perſwadit him to the contrar. Efter his going from Ilay, he maid his firſt cours towardis Inchedaholl, ane ile vpone the bak of Inchewin, in Ireland. Sorle McJames, and his cumpanie of Iriſhmen, did leave him thair, and ar fled to the woodis of Ireland. I have writtin to the commanders of theſe places to be cairfull in apprehending of thame; and vther of his boattis being manned with ſum of the tennenttis, in Kintyre, who neuer left Sir James, wntill he was brought to ſuch extremitie, ar fled from him and cum to Kintyre. They affirme that Sir James his reſolution is, to caſt himſelff in ſum great mans lap, who will interceid at his maieſties handis for him. I have ſent ſpies both to Lochaber and to the North Iles, if he go thair, for, in my opinion, he dar not adventure to ſtay in thir pairtes. I am certanlie informed thair is not ane man with him bot thrie ſaue and himſelff. At Sir James his way going out of Ilay, all the tennentis of the cuntrie ſtayed behind him: Coll McGilleſpic having the keiping of the caſtle of Duneveg, and the Ile of Lochgorme, he ſtayed in his ſtrenthis, and followed not Sir James. Befor the landing of his maieſties cannon to the caſtle, Coll ſubmitted him ſelff and cam in: he hes randerit both the caſtle and ile to me, and hes delyverit Coline Campbell of Kilberrie, who was his priſoner: lykwayes he has wndertakin to do ſuch ſervice as may releif himſelff. I have apprehendit all the principall ringleadars, and ſuch as could be tryed to have gone willinglie with Sir James: ſum of them I am to ſend to the Lordis Commiſſioners, and the reſt I will execut heir. I have preſentlie imployed Coll McGilleſpik in ſervice againſt theſe that ar outlawis, whois ſucces your lordſhip will know at my nixt adverteiſment. McRannald his ſonnes, and Glengarrie his brother, ar gone to their owne cuntries, and I haue ſent efter thame. So ſone as I have endit heir in Ilay, I intend to returne bak to Kintyre, and to ſpair none that willinglie joyned with the rebel Sir James, for the greateſt part of thame ar in Kintyre and Arran. So ſone as I can try quhat pairt of his maieſties dominions Sir James hes takin him to, your lordſhip ſall be aſſured I ſall not be long wnperſewing him. I ſall lykwayes, God willing, tak ſuch ane ordour with thoſe that hes followit him, as his maieſtie ſall not neid to dowt of gude obedience in thir pairtes in tyme cuming. My lord, the extremitie of the wether, and diſtance of the place, hes bene the caus that I haue bene ſo long in adverteiſing of your lordſhip of my proceidings: ſo, for the preſent, I reſt

My most Honorabill Gud Lord,

I ressaved, this night, your lordſhips letters of the 13 of this moneth, from Duneveg, making mention of Coles incuming to your lordſhip, and Sir James his eſcape, with all theſe that ever I had naimed principall men in this cumpanie; bot I hope your lordſhip will have cair, ſo far as can be, to mak ane gud count of them to his maieſtie: your lordſhips letters have cum heir with gud ſpeid, being writtin vpon the 13 at Duneveg; bot ane paket ſent from this to court, vpone the 12 of this inſtant, conteinit aduerteiſment from my Lord Chancellour to court, of all that your lordſhips letters of the 13 hes now brought to me, quhilk I ſall ſignifie to court with all convenient diligence, expecting better nowellis be your lordſhips nixt adverteiſment, quhilk I pray God to ſend. At the nixt meiting of the counſall, I think thair will be ane great number of the commiſſioners, to whome all your lordſhips proceidings ſall be communicat. I think your lordſhip will do wyſlie, to advyſe quhat courſe is moſt fit to be taine with his maieſties ſchippis, for, if your lordſhip have no neceſſar vſe of thame, thair ſtaye in theſe ſeas idillie can awaill nothing, bot may put his maieſtie to great charges, and bring danger to the ſchippis (quhilk God forbid): alwayes ſo long as your lordſhip has neceſſar vſe of thame, his maieſtie and the counſell will vndowtedlie allow that your lordſhip reteine thame, and imploy thame in any neidful ſervice. This Moſſe will bring to your lordſhip ane lettre of the erle of Lowthians, quhilk miſſed the laſt paket, with ſum vthers ſent to me ſenſyne be Maiſter Williame Browne. Thingis heir ar quyet, prayſed be God. I think befor this tyme your lordſhip hes hard that vpone the 26 of September, the Lady Arbella deceaſed in the Towre. In France the troubles increaſſes, and, nevertheles, the king goes fordwart to his mariage. So, beſeiking God to grant your lordſhip the honour and happines to cut off the ruttes and headis of the Iles rebellioun, and expecting that heirefter, your lordſhips fallowars or nighbouris, fall not prevent your lordſhip in the report of your proceidings, I reſt

LOVING FREIND,

I RESSAVED your letters of the 15 of this moneth, from Duneveg, bot no newes in thame; becaus, vpone the 12 day, I hard the ſubſtance of all that your letters beares, quhilk that ſame 12 day was writtin to court be my lord Chancellour. I am glad that my lord is maiſter of theſe ſtrenthis, and ſorie that all the principall men ar eſcaped, except Coil, who hes gottin conditions; bot I hope that my lords diligence, wiſdome, and gud luk, fall overtak thame, and red his maieſtie, and the cuntrie, of thair cummer; for, if it ſould fall vtherwayes furth (as God forbid), yow know quhat conſtructions men wald mak of the great preparatioun maid be ſea and land, at ſo great charges to his maieſtie, without any effect, bot the wrack of the poore beggerlie tennentis of Ilay and Kintyre; for ſince Sir James, and his ſone, with M'Rannald and his ſone, and Glengarries ſone, and M'Sorle, ar all eſcaped, and Coll pardoned, I know not quhat ringleadars theſe ar whome ye wryt ye ar to bring in; alwayes, it is gud that thair forces ar ſcattered, without harme or danger; yit, ſo long as the heades ar all to the fore, the rebellioun will never be thought quenched; quherfor, I know my lord will have ſuch cair as agrieth with his honour, and his maieſties expectatioun. I have no certantie of the theſaurare deputes dyet, bot I hope he will be heir about Hallowmes, and will aſſuredlie performe his promeis, yours being obſerved, quhilk I hartelie wiſhe. So, remembring my loving commendatiounis to your brother Collin, and praying yow to prevent your curious nighbouris in the adverteiſments of my lords proceidings, quhilk I wiſhe may be proſperous, I reſt

CXLVI.—ARCHIBALD CAMPBELL TO LORD BINNING.

MY VERIE HONOURABLE GUDE LORD,

YOUR lordſhips lettres of the 4 and 5 of October, from Edinburgh and Barnbougall, came heir to my lord vpone the 18 of this inſtant; the caus of thair ſtay ſo long be the way, and that your lordſhip hes not more frequent adverteiſment ſent from this, is the extremitie of the windis and the currenttis that runis ſo ſtronglie in thir ſeas, quhilk makis it almoſt wnpaſſable betuix this Ile and the Mayn. My Lordis lettre heirin incloſed will ſufficientlie informe your lordſhip of the ſucces of his maieſties ſervice. Thoſe that ar already execut, ar not of the number that Coll M^c^Gilleſpik hes apprehendit. My lord intendis tomorrow, if wind and weather ſerve, to go to Kintyre, and hes left a roll of certain perſones with Caddle, who ar to be takin ordour with, and to that effect hes gewin him commiſſioun. So that, on my credit to your lordſhip, thair is nothing left vndone in Ilay that concernes the weill of his maieſties ſervice, or can do gude to Caddle, quherof I dowt not he will acquaint your lordſhip himſelff. The greateſt number of the rebels ar in Kintyre: they ar watched ſo that they can not eſcape. I hope my lord ſall no ſoonner cum to Kintyre, bot your lordſhip ſall heir of deu executioun. I can heir no certantie if M^c^Rannald be gone to his owne cuntrie; or if he be gone to ſchift a bark or a ſchip to carie him away; bot it is certane that he hes pairted cumpanie with Sir James. As I wret to your lordſhip befor, my lord hes ſent both to Lochaber and Glengares boundis, to ſie quhat may be done againſt the rebels. Your lordſhip may eaſelie conſidder how difficle a thing it is, to find out ſuch a number of ranagates, who drawis themſelfis to lurk in diverſe corneris of the kingdome; yet, I hope in God, although it be paines to the Erle of Argyle, and to thoſe that fallowis him, his maieſtie ſall have a ſufficient compt maid, or it be long, of theſe vilanis. As concerning the reſt of the Ilanderis I will wryt nothing at this tyme, bot I hope the exact performance of this ſervice ſall mak them a littill more tractable then they have bein heirtofore. I beleif, ſeing the ſervice is cum to ſuch perfection, that my lord expectis not any more pay from the Theſaurar, vnles it be for a verie few number, and a ſchort tyme. Quhen your lordſhip heiris the particular, I dowt not bot your lordſhip will find it verie reaſonable. I think it expedient, that, in your firſt lettre to my lord, your lordſhip wryt, that, ſeing thair is not ſex of the rebels togidder, it is thought expedient that thair be no more pay ſent, wntill your lordſhip know from my lord quhat number it requiſed for the preſent. I will not trouble your lordſhip with remembrance of any particular any more; nather dowt I of your lordſhips favour, if it be my gud hap to deſerve it, as, God knawis, I am moſt deſyrous, and ſall ever remaine

Loving Freind,

I have, according to my dewtie, adverteiſed my lord, be my letter, that the commiſſioners for the Iles, and ſuch of the counſall as conveined this day, mervell, that my lord wret nothing in his laſt letters concerning the diſſoluing of his men at the end of this moneth, before quhilk tyme they think the opportunitie, tyme and power, to do all that force requyred; and if any thing ſould therefter reſt to be done, he might eaſelie performe it be his privat meanes: therfor, ſince many ar ſo ready to turne his actions, be thair report, to the worſt, I pray yow propone to his lordſhip how ſmall advantage it will be to keip men vnneceſſarelie vpone his maieſteis charges, quherof they will affirme the greateſt pairt to cum to my lordis benefit, the mater being vnworthie of the ſcandall, and able to hinder him in ane greatar purpoſe, ſo vnles his lordſhip be able to qualifie iuſt and neceſſar cauſes of keiping men vnder pay, I hartlie wiſhe that his maieſtie may be fred of that neidles burdene. It is alſo expedient, that ſo ſone as the neceſſitie of the ſervice may permit the returne of his maieſties ſchippes, that my lord conſent to it and vrge it; for, beſydes the great coſt thair ſtay thair bringis to his maieſtie, thair danger vpon that ſtormie coſt, in this winter ſeaſon, is greatlie to be conſiderit, and ſo fracas may be eſchewed. His maieſtie is exceiding deſyrous to have trew and ſpedie knawledge of my lordis proceidings, quherin I wiſhe my lord may vſe diligence, at all occaſions; and ſo, till farder occur, I commit yow to God. My most Honorabill Gude Lord,

Your lordſhips laſt lettres concerning the diſcours of your lordſhips proceidings againſt the rebels, the taking of thair boattis, diſſipating thameſelffis, and puting to flight, ſo ſcattered, and in ſo ſmall number, as your lordſhip hardlie knew quher to fallow the leadars, furniſſing me warrand to informe the counſall (as I wes requyred) of the account of your lordſhips bypaſt actions, I maid trew report therof, and of Coles yeilding to your lordſhip, and puting in your handis the houſes of Duneveg and Lochgorme. My lordis of Glaſgow, Clerk of Regiſter, and Advocat (the remanent commiſſioners for the Iles being abſent), conſidering the eſtat of the affaires, and that thair was no knawin vſe of waiged men now, quhen your lordſhips privat forces, to be aſſiſted be the power of ſuch pairtes of the cuntrie, as any of the ſcattered rebels war ſuſpected to luirk into, war more then ſufficient to fallow, ſchearch, and overthrow thame, haue thocht it vnneceſſar, that his maieſtie ſould be any longer burdened with interteining ſouldiours vnder pay; and that theſe, who have ever bene ready, vpone ſmaller occaſions, to ſpeak vnkyndlie of your lordſhip, will tak advantage, both to blame your lordſhip, if ye requyre any ſuch pay, and the commiſſioners, if they allow it, vnles your lordſhip will qualifie any iuſt and neceſſar cauſe; in quhilk caice, it will be moſt readelie furniſſed. It is alſo thocht moſt neceſſar, that your lordſhip eſchew all neidles detentioun of his maieſties ſchippes; and ſo ſone as your lordſhip ſall ceaſe to have vſe of thame, that ye have ſpeciall cair of thair ſaif and ſpeidie returne to England.

Be theſe who cum from court, I am certified, that his maieſtie is moſt deſyrous to be frequentlie adverteiſed of your lordſhips proceidings and gud ſucces, quherin I pray your lordſhip to giue his maieſtie all dew

CXLIX.—THE EARL OF ARGYLE TO LORD BINNING.

MY VERRY GUID LORD,

As I wrait to your lordſhip, in my laſt lettres from Dumbar [Duneveg?], the xiij day of this inſtant, that Coll McGilleſpick, befoir the landing of his maieſties cannon, had geivin vp the caſtell of Dunovaig, and Ile of Lochgorme, haid delyverid Colin Campbell of Kilberrie, and wes gone about to do forder ſervice for himſelfe. So this day he hes returnit to me, and hes brocht withe him nynetene of the rebellis that followit Sir James: of thir, thair ar tua or thrie of the cheif and principallis that were withe Sir James: one of thame had the commandement of fourtie men. His name is McDuffie. I purpoſe to preſent ſum of thame befoir your lordſhipis, that your lordſhips may be the moir certefeit of Sir James proceidingis ſince his laſt rebellioun; the reſt of thame intend to caus execute heir. My lordis, the caus of my ſtay ſo long heir, is waiting vntill I heir what Sir James intendis to do. At the wryitting of my laſt lettres vnto your lordſhipis, I vnderſtood not whiche way he wes gone out of Inchedaholl, ane ile on the bakſyde of Ireland, to the whiche he went, whenas he wes forcit out of this ile. Bot I am now ſuirlie informed, that he is pairted withe McRannald, and landit in a place callit Rowvalin, in Ireland, neir whair the vmquhile Lord Terchonellis ladye duellis, for ſche is his father ſiſter. His intentioun is, as I vnderſtand, to go to the deputie and to delyver himſelfe in his handis; ſo, how ſoune as I haif donne what I intend, God willing, in Kintyre, I will mak your lordſhipis certefeit of the whole eſtaite of the ſervice, whairwithe I hope his maieſtie ſalbe welle pleaſit, and my freindis ſufficientlie ſatiffeit; for I purpoſe, God willing, ſo to conclude it, as thair ſalbe no place left for any evir to attempt the like in thir pairtis. Leaving to truble your lordſhipis with any farder, for this preſent, I reſt

Your Lordſhipis affurit freind,

Efter the wryitting heirof, I am informit that Sir James Makoneill bocht four horſſis on the coſt of Ireland, and ane gentleman callit McKarie hes followit him, and, as I beleue, he can hardlie eſcape. This day I haif cauſit execute nyne of the principallis and leaderis of the rebellis, whois names I haif heirwith ſent to your lordſhipis. CL.—CAPTAIN WOD TO LORD BINNING.

Right Honorabill and my verie Gud Lord,

I ressaved your lettre of the 16 of October, and thinkis my felff verie much bund for your honorabill favour. My lord of Argyl hes bene verie cairful, and hes fettelled thingis in Ilay, and the greateft he found thair, adherent with the rebels, he hath caufed execut: others of them he hes brought heir to Kintyre, and hes poffeffed Sir John Campbell peaceablie in the two ftrenthis, quhilk the rebels did hold in Ilay. The caftle of Armorthy is to be delyvered to his lordfhips fervand, and the keipars to prefent themfelfis to his lordfhips fervice. Sir James McConeill is difcoverit, and my lord knowis quher he is, and, for the apprehending of him, he hes fent ten fufficient men, ather to attack him or kill him. He hes wrought all meanes poffible to affect the fame, as your lordfhip fall know in my nixt lettre. Thair is heir ane great number in Kintyre, quhilk hes bene affociate with the rebels, and for that caus I have defyrit his lordfhip to keip aboord his maiefties fchippis, to fuch tyme, that his men repair from onfetts, quher he hes appointit them, at quhilk tyme he will tak ordour with them. The rebels hes fpoilled mightilie the land, that the poore tennents is almoft vndone. I fie it will be neir the end of November, befor my lord mak ane end heir; therfor, becaus it is the deid of winter, I meine to remaine in fum gud harbour in Oyde, quher his maiefties fchippis may be in fafetie, except I receive warrant from your lordfhip, and the reft of the counfell, to the contrare. I will be fo fpairing, to burdene the cuntrey of Scotland, as poffiblie I can. My lord of Argyle tauld me he wald wryt to the counfell, to know if I fall leive the munitioun heir, quhilk is not fpent, quhilk I could not do, as I tauld his lordfhip, without fpeciall warrant from his maieftie, in refpect I reffaved it by warrant from him, and hes indentit for the fame in the tour, quher I muft be countable. All vther proceidings concerning me your lordfhip

"Reſſ. 22 November 1615."

CLI.—EARL OF ARGYLE TO LORD BINNING.

My verie Gud Lord,

Having done quhat was requiſed for the weill of his maieſties ſervice in Ilay, and in ſum vther places nixt adiacent, I came with his maieſties ſchippis from thence on the 16 of October, and arryved in Lochkilcheren the nixt day, a ſafe harbour for his maieſties ſchippes. I had no ſonner cum to that place, quhen thair cam to me one that had bene of late in Sir James McConillis cumpanie, who ſchew me of all Sir James his proceidings, and that he and his ſone war in Ireland; lykwayes, he hes vndertakin, on certane conditions to himſelff, to bring ſum of my ſervandis to the place quher Sir James is. My lord, althocht this be without the boundis of commiſſioun to mak ſcheirſe for any of the rebels, having fled to ane vther kingdome; yit to kyth my zeall in his maieſties ſervice, I have ſent ſum of my ſpeciall ſervandis, accompanied with thret-

tie of the ableſt men I had, to that place in Ireland quher I am ſurlie informed Sir James is. I hope in God they ſall ather bring him to me, or vtherwayes atteich him, quher he is, in ſick foirt that he ſall not eſcape. As to Sorle McJames his ſone, he and his few companie ar into the rowt, and thair about he hes obteinit a two monthis reſpit from the deputie of Ireland. As to McRannald and his ſones, I have directed ane onſett on them, as I wret to your lordſhip, who I hope ſall ather apprehend themſelffis, or mak it knowin in whois boundis they have actuell reſidence, quherby the landiſlord may be obleiſt to preſent thame. As to Glengarrie his ſone, I have the lyk onſett on him, and if his maieſtie and your lordſhip will haue bot a littill patience, I hope in God to mak ſuch a cleir reckining of the ſervice, as thair ſall no man neid to dowt that in thir pairtis heireſter, thair ſalbe the lyk attempt. Thair reſtis ſum thing yit to be done heir in Kintyre, and in places nixt adiacent, quhilk I am preſentlie about. My lord, I thank God that the ſuppreſſioun of this rebellioun was in tyme prevendit, for, on my credit, if it had bene 20 dayes longer protracted, few of my cuntriemen betwix Tarbert and Innerrarey had provin gud ſubiectis—mekill les could ther have bene any gud expected of farder remot places, quher thair was no trew obedience to his maieſtie at all. At my cuming heir, I have diſmiſſed Captane Merick, and the Wictueller, quherin the ordinance war, and hes ſtayed Captane Wood with the ordinance, wntill I know your lordſhips pleaſour heiranent, ſeing I am ſurlie informit, that Captane Wood his ſtay heir, wilbe no more charges then if he war diſmiſſed from hence. Quher your lordſhip blames me that I ſent not word before the beginning of this month, anent the diſſolving of his maieſties fied ſoiours, pleaſe your lordſhip, that in regaird of my ſending to Ireland, and the onſetis I haue ſent to Lochaber and Glengarries boundis, and theſe that I have in preſent ſervice againſt ane number of the owtlawis, that ar in thir pairtis, I fand not, that I could diſmiſſe any of my cumpanies, and I aſſure myſelff quhen your lordſhip ſall conſidder dewlie of thir my proceidings, your lordſhip will acknawledge that I draw not his maieſtie to any vnneceſſarie charges, and heirin will abyd your lordſhips awin cenſure; and however your lordſhip pleas to deall with me, it ſall be ſeine, that I ſall frielie adventar lyff, land and all, befor thair be any thing wanting that may accompleiſe his maieſties ſervice. Sua, leving the to the ſufficiencie of the bearar, I bid your lordſhip fairweill.

Your Lordſhips affurit freind,

ARGYLE.

CLII.—LORD BINNING TO JOHN MURRAY.

SIR,

I DID expect that your nevew, Kirkonell, ſould haue gevin yow ane perfyte accompt of all your affaires, before this letter could haue cum to your handis; bot I haue hard ſenſyne of the delay of his iournay, be the deceas of his father, and am perſuaded that ſo ſone as he can ſettle his turnis, he will haiſt to yow.

Drummorell hes writtin to me this incloſed, ſince I ſaw my lord of Gairlies; for if I had reffaued it ſoner, I wald haue dealt with my lord; albeit I can not beleive that my lord meanes ſo hardlie to him; nather is it expedient to vrge any farder, bot to haue the warrand of my lord Gairlies wourd, that, directlie nor indirectlie, he will not do nor allow any wrong or hairme to be done to him. As to the letter, I think it impertinent to be ſchowne; nather wald I haue ſend it, if it had not conteaned this motion of the Iriſh land for his ſone, with excambium to yow, as the letter beares, whairof yow may be pleaſed to conſider; and if yow ſie your owne gude in it, yow may purchaſe ane patent of the tuo thouſand aikers of Iriſh land, in any freindis name, and thairefter cauſe tranſſer it to Drummorels ſone, if he mak yow ſufficient ſuretie of the vther land. What yow think gude heirin let me know, and I ſall wryte to him accordinglie.

In vther pourpoſes, I can not wryte whill I heir from yow, or from Maiſter Patrik, be your direction, to which tyme and ever, I commit yow to the protection of God, and reſt

Your moſt obleiſſed and obedient freind,

BINNING.

The erle of Kingorne is beginning to convaleſce, prayſed be God.

CLIII.—LORD BINNING TO JOHN MURRAY.

SIR,

I RESSAUED your letter of the ellevint, and will repeat nothing in ſuch of your buſſines as is relaited in my former letters. Robert Makbraire deliuered to me your letter of the aulder date, and expreſſed to me the buſſines meant thairin, and hes ſollicited and attended the reſolution verie diligentlie. I haue gottin the copie of the chartour, and proponed the generall queſtion to Maiſter Thomas Hope, forbearing all mention of perſons or landis, and find him verie dowtfull; and thairfore ſince the ſeſſion is neir ane end, and I hope, God willing, to ſie yow about the tuentie day of the nixt moneth, becaus my Lord Chancelar appoyntis his dyet thair about that tyme, I ſall informe yow amplie of all that I know, or can learne, in that buſſines; and, in the meantyme, haue willed Robert Makbraire not to attend any longer heir. I think he hes writtin at lenth, of all that he hes knowne, of your affaires ſince his returne, and ſpeciallie, of the Lady Broughtons pourpoſe to haue gone to court, and to haue tane hir ſone with hir, to haue regraited thair hairmes and ſtraittes to his maieſtie, whairof Barnbarroch aduerteiſed Robert and me; and, at oure deſyre, hes promeiſed to ſtay hir, and to go poiſt him ſelf to court, the nixt oulk, for that and vther buſſines of his owne. At meiting, he will declaire to yow the groundis of hir intended complaint, and ſayes he will ſtay thair till after my cumming. The ſubſtance of that which I hard of him this day abruptlie, and in ſchort conference, wes, that hir huſband having right to manie faire and proffitable lands in Ireland, whairof he had poſſeſſion at his deceas; the laird of Lochinvar had be your meanes acquyred ane title thairof, be the aduantage of ane failzie, for not preſeruing of condicions, which might and wald eaſilie haue bene performed, if hir huſband had liued; that albeit Lochinvar had rent and yeirlie proffeit of thame aboue ane thouſand pundis ſterling, yet he had diſpoſſeſſed hir rigourouſlie and vnkyndlie, withowt any maner of acknowledgement; that yow had the poſſeſſion of hir huſbandis landis in Scotland, which he had provyded to yow incaice of the deceas of his onlie ſone, and had ſo preferred yow to all his kin; that thay wer informed that yow wer bund to Lochinvar be contract; that if hir ſone, at his perfyte aige, ſould not ratifie Lochinvars rightis of all his fathers Iriſh lands, that yow ſall mak right to him of all Broughtons landis in Scotland, which is the ſubſtance of the pourpoſe. Barnbarroch is ane ſenſible gentilman, and, as appeiris to me, profeſſis much loue and reſpect to yow; and, thairfore, I wes glaid that he ſould rather impairt thir thingis to yow, in privat and freindlie maner, and reſſaue your anſuers, which I know yow will giue him with gude reaſon, nor that ane indiſcreit woman ſould have bene permitted to go, and, by idle and vntrue reportis, ſclander your name, whairof I know yow ar moſt cairefull and ſenſible. I pray yow offend not with the gentilman, bot deale pacientlie, or els remit all till yow, and he, and I meit, and ſpeak of the buſſines, that he may ſie that if his ſiſter be not vnreaſonable and indiſcreit, ſcho ſall have no iuſt cauſe aither to ſclander or compleane of yow. When Lochinvar vſed ſo much inſtance to haue your ſureties of Markill exped, that he might ſubſcryve thame, I thoght no thing had bene meant, bot that ſo ſone as he ſould have cauſed Schiriues ſubſcryve thame, he ſould haue ſent thame to be keiped to your behoue; bot ſenſyne, James Hamilton hes ſaid to me, that he vndirſtandis that Lochinvar intendis not to deliuer thame, whill yow ſend to him the contract paſt betuix yow and him, anent the Iriſh landis. He deſyred to haue the patentis deliuered to him which Patrik Whytlaw had, bot that will not be done whill yow direct it.

I ſall do concerning Sir William Alexander as yow haue advyſed me, and he, nor no vther honeſt man doing dewtie to me, ſall want ane honeſt meiting.

I wrait the laſt oulk, that thair wes gude hope of the Erle of Kingornes recouerie, becaus I wes ſo informed be the Erle of Tullibardin; bot, contrarie to all thair expectations, he is dead. Caire hes bene had of his ſones wairde and mairiage, and ſuch ordour tane thairin, as agries with his maieſties reaſonable proffeit, and laufull reſpect to the nobilmans houſe, as yow will know more particularlie be that which Sir Gedeon hes writtin to his maieſtie, and your ſelf.

If yow think any thing fit to be knowne to me before I ſie yow, I pray yow cauſe Maiſter Patrik wryte it to me, and I ſall informe my ſelf als perfytlie as I can of all your affaires, to the effect I may reſolue yow of any thing yow ſall deſyre to vnderſtand at meiting.

My not wryting to my Lord of Scone proceidis of your aduerteiſment of his pourpoſe to cum from court, before my letters can be thair. So, wiſhing yow all happines, I reſt

Your obleiſſed freind to obey yow,

BINNING.

Edinburgh, 22 December [1615?]

When I wes clofing this letter, when I reffaued my brothers of the fyftent. As yow haue advyfed me to accumpanie my Lord Chancelar I fall do, God willing. Sir Andro Car hes prayed me to rander yow great thankis for your fauour to him at my requeaft, which I do affectuouflie, as daylie more bund.

To the right wourfchipfull John Murray of Lochmaben, one of his Maiefties Bedchamber, at Court.

CLIV.—LORD BINNING TO JOHN MURRAY.

Sir,

I ressaued your letter, which I haue inclofed heirin, and fall keip the contentis to my felf. In your buffines with Lochinvar, nothing can be done in his abfence. I gaue to James Dowie, Drumlanriks band, and will be forced to leive Adam Cunighames buffines vndone, inrefpect of his being at the vaicance.

I haue delt with my Lord Aduocat, that the evidentis of Linclouden, etc. may be enventoured, whill ordour may be tane for thair deliuerie. Thay ar in the handis of his gudfone, Maifter John Haliday, at whoes returne from the vaicance he hes affuredlie promeifed to caufe mak and deliuer, ane perfyte inventar of thame; bot John Belches affured me that he had gevin to yow the double of that inventar, at court. I haue bene earnift to haue your whole evidentis collected, and perfytlie forted, and put togidder, which can not be fo wele done at this tyme as I could wifh, becaus fum of thame ar in Robert Makbraires hands; fum gevin to the regifter, and not yet extracted; fum fent to the cuntrie for taking feafing, and not fent bak; fum in proces in the clerkis hands; and fum in Maifter Alexander Kings; all which ar directed to be foght and collected together, with all poſſible diligence, as yow ſall, God willing, know at meiting.

My Lord of Scone promeiſed to be in this towne before oure journay. I ſall confer with him at lenth, in all affaires, and informe yow of the eſtate thairof.

I haue writtin to my Lord of Santandrois, to the effect conteaned in your letter, and haue ſet downe your opinion and reaſons.

The Biſchop of Orknay is verie dewtifull to yow, and moſt cairefull that yow may have all freindlie contentment, whairanent we conferred at great lenth, and as any farder ſall occur, yow ſall know it.

Be my brother yow will know what I haue writtin to him; and as I ſall vnderſtand your opinion be ſuch letters as yow ſall think fit to wryte, or cauſe him to wryte, before oure cumming to court, I ſall endeuore my ſelf to do accordinglie. So, wiſhing yow all conſtant happines, I reſt

Your moſt obleiſſed and obedient freind,

CLV.—LORD BINNING TO JOHN MURRAY.

SIR,

THIS night late, I haue reſſaued your letter of the 3 of Januar, and haue diſpatched theſe for my Lord of Santandrois for lyfe. Till I ſie yow I have nothing to wryte, bot that my Lord of Scone earneſtlie deſyres that the warrand concerning the Erle of Tullibairdins place, as Erle of Athole, may be haiſted downe before oure cumming to court; becaus he hes hard ſum ſpeaches that makis him beleve that ſum to be thair at this tyme, will preafe to ftay, if thay be not difapoynted, be the more fpeidie fending it to the counfall. I have mett with Lochinvar, and chairged him with all the Lady Broughtons complaints. He hes maid verie fpeciall anfuers, which I fall fchow to yow at meiting, to which tyme and euer I commit yow to God, and reft

CLVI.—WILLIAM HAIG TO THE EARL OF DUNFERMLINE AND LORD BINNING.

MY HONORABLE GOOD LORDIS,

BESYDES the preiudice I know I fufteine in my poore eftate, indifpofition of body, and greiff of mynd I haue in the apprehenfion of his maiefties difpleafour with me, till he be fully informed of my innocencie; the continuance of my reftrainte breedes in many, fo much the more fufpicion of my guylte, that my accufer, noated with fo many publik blemifhes, hes more liberty then I. My lorde, he may continew in lyes, but, God knowis, it is impoffible he can proue the leafte of the imputations wherwith he chairges me. Your lordfhips can not be now ignorant of the trewth of the bufines. If I wer guylty to fuch enormeties, it wer fitt my punifhement wer more publike; but being innocent, it is a pitty to fmother me in this loathfum holle. Sauing your lordfhips wifdomes, though I had bene all this tyme at free waird, I could neuer haue made my accufer les able to proue his denyles againft me. I fuffer too much for the lyes of that vnhappy man, God forgeue him. I alwayes hoped your lordſhips ſhowld haue put this buſines to a point, before the end of the ſeſſion. I can hold no longer; I beſeech your lordſhips pardon a poore man much diſtracted with the greiff of this place, to adiure your lordſhips, be the loue yow haue to juſtice, and to his maieſties ſeruice, either to puniſhe my guylte, if any be, cleare my innocency, or geue me leue to wryte wnto his maieſtie, both the juſte exceptions I haue againſt my accuſer, and what I can ſay to ſhaw the falſhood of his accuſations. And if, at this tyme, your lordſhips be not diſpoſed to affoord me any of theſe fauours, I beſeech humbly your lordſhips either ſuffer my freendis to cum at me, or at leaſte geue me leue to vſe pen and inke, for making vſe of my reading here, that I may haue ſum poore comfort, till ſuch tyme as either his maieſtie haue taken notice of my innocencie, or your lordſhips haue leaſour, from his maieſties more importante ſeruices, to make an end of this buſines. Thus humbly beſeeching your lordſhips anſwer, I reſte,

reſpecting ſeruand,

WILLIAM HAIG.

Tolbuith, 2 Auguſt 1616.

To the right honourable my ſingular good lordis, the Earle of Dunfermeline, Lord Chancelar, and the Lord Binning, Lord Secretary, theſe.

CLVII.—LORD BINNING TO KING JAMES VI.

MOST SACRED SOUERANE,

AT this meiting of the Counſall vpon the 20 of this inſtant, the Lordis Lauderdaill, Erſkin, Fleming, and Sir Archibald Naper, being admitted to be of that number, ordour wes geuin for wryting to the Marqueis of Huntlie, to bring with him to this towne, Geicht and the ſhiref-depute, vpon the tent of September, being the nixt counſall day, and to the Erle of Erroll to bring with him before the Counſall the brother of Brunthils at that ſame day. Thay ar bothe commanded to cum in quyet maner, with thair privat houſholdis, and to keip thair ludgingis whill thay be ſent for be the Counſall.

Forbes of Blaklandis is reported to be put to libertie, be conſent of Clokreoch, and his freindis, vpon caution, vnder great ſowmes for his re-entrie before the Juſtice, when he ſall be charged, which is ſuppoſed to proceid of thair opinion, that he committed the ſlaughter in his owne defence.

The magiſtrates of Montrois wrait to ws, that one of the waughters had cauſſin anker in thair raid, ſchot two pieces of ordonance, diſplayed hir coulours, and croſſed hir raes, and hes ſtayed thair thir eight or ten dayes withowt offer of iniurie to any. Thay craived the counſals direction in that mater, be whom thay ar commanded to be reddie to do what may concerne your maieſties ſeruice, or the gude of thair towne, if any occaſion be offered be the waughter, which we can not expect. And becaus your maieſties ſhip, commanded be Capten Dauid Murray, lyes in that harbrie, we haue directed him to keip ſtrong watche, and to be carefull of his chairge at all occaſions, thinking it vnfit to enter in any more extreame courſe with the waughter, ſo long as the actions of his lordis ſall not giue ſubiect to your maieſtie to giue expres direction to the contrarie.

Your maieſtie will vnderſtand be the Counſals note, what ordour is taken with the landiſlordis of the middleſchyres, who compeired at this meiting, and what courſe is to be takin the nixt counſall day with the reſt.

The Scheref of Tevidaill hes bene with me, and promeiſis to mak ane expres and particular propoſition of that which he will requyre for renunciation of his office agane the nixt counſall day.

The Commiſſionars of Parlement for plantation of churches haue convened and concluded that the cuntrie ſall be quartered; that ſince the Archibiſchop of Santandrois is abſent, and ſo not reddie to tak the firſt terme, which is the moneth of Nouember, that that moneth ſall be aſſigned for the kirkis of the dioceſes of Glaſgow, Galloway, and Argyle.

The moneth of December is appoynted for the kirkis of the dioceſes of Santandrois, Dunkell, and Dumblane. Januar is prefixed for Brechin, Aberdene, and Murray. Februar for Ros, Caithnes, Orknay, and the Iles.

Summondis ar preſentlie formed, and to be ſent blank to evrie one of the biſchoppis, to cauſe execute aganis the poſſeſſours of the rentis of the particular kirkis and vtheris, pretending rightis to the frutes thairof, and the miniſters ſerving the cures, if any be, for ſetling the ſtipendis be thair aduyce and conſent, or failȝeing thairof, as the commiſſionars ſall think reaſonable.

Places and tymes ar appoynted for the commiſſionars frequent meitings, efter the firſt of Nouember; and becaus the attendance vpon the Seſſion and Counſall will many tymes impeid the meiting of ſik as ar of that number, it is concluded, that theſe who ar not ſeſſionars or counſallours ſall be ſet to particular taſkis, to deale with the pairties intereſſed in particular kirkis, and ſall mak report of thair trauels and ſucceſſe to the whole number oulklie, vpon the Monnondayes, Wedniſdayes, and Frydayes, for furtherance of the gude diſpatche of the buſſines, and eſchewing of the trouble of the commiſſionars and pairties be long and vnneceſſar attendance.

The Lord Gordon has renewed his promeis to be anſuerable for Geichtis conformitie. So, humblie begging pardon for this longſum interruption of your maieſties greater affaires, I pray God to extend the courſe of your maieſties lyfe, health, and happines, to the vttermoſt period and perfection of humane felicitie. Edinburgh, 21 Auguſt [1616?]

Your moſt ſacred Maieſties moſt humble, faithfull,
and bund ſeruant,

BINNING.

[To the King his moſt excellent Maieſtie.]

CLVIII.—SIR G. MURRAY TO PATRICK HAMILTON.

WEILBELOOVIT NEPHEW,

I RESSAVED youris from Notingame, befoir I cam from Abirden, and returne yow this anſweir theirto. It is trew, that vpon two yeares ſence, or thairby, James Gardner brocht doun a precept from his maieſtie, of fourtein or fyftein hundreth pundis, whiche he alledged wes reſtand to him, in the tyme of the former officeris, with a gift of the Comptrollarie of the Ordinance vacand ther, as he alledgit, be the deceis of wmquhyll Jhone Cheſholme. As for the precept, it wes refuſed be advyſe of the Commiſſioneris of the rentis, leiſt it might haue bred ane evill preparatiue, and maid way to a number of the lyke dettis, whiche, having bein neclected in the former officeris tymes, the lordes thocht it not fitt I ſuld put thame in vſe of payment. As for the Comptrollarie of the Ordinance, the ſame wes diſponed, neirly the ſpace of a yeare befoir, to Maiſter Robert Lyndſay, be the demiſſioun of the ſaid Jhone Cheſholme, who maid ſurrender of it in Maiſter Roberts fauouris long befoir he depairted this lyff, and ſo could not be gevin to Government. Maiſter Robert beand depairted this lyff the laſt winter, I then diſponed the office to my nevoy, James Murray, who is moir fit to diſcharge it nor Gardner, and at the tyme when it wes gevin, I wreit to my Lord Secretar, who wes then at Court, and to Jhone Murray, feiring that Barnard Lyndſay ſould haue maid buſſines for it, to one of Maiſter Robertis bairnes, whiche wes ſignefeed to his maieſtie, as I remember, be Jhone Murray, and had his heines approbatioun, withe a directioun from his maieſtie to do Maiſter Robertis bairnes fauor in any wther thing he poſſeſſit. Now I can never conſider by what reaſon the fooliſche man can complein that it wes gevin by him, ſence it vaked not till a whole yeire efter he gat his maieſties hand to that ſignatour, vpon a wrong and falis narratiue. Concerning the precept, you remember he went vpe this laſt harveſt when I wes thar, and importuned his maieſtie for the ſame; at whiche tyme I reſſaved directioun ſo to command him to go home, and to tak ordour with him at my returne, by geuing him ſume ſatiſſactioun for that whiche he craved: According to the whiche directioun I dealt with him at my cuming home, and agreed with him for the ſoume of ſax hundreth poundis as I call it, (bot I can not affirme it certanlie, geue that wes the ſoume I agreed with him for, till I ſie the comptis), whiche ſoume he reſſaved, and geue a full diſchairge of all that he could craue. I leue it for yow to conſider geue I be weil dealt withall. Bot the man is furious, a deboſchit drunkard, and having ſpent his monies, goes about to get ſuſtenance by unlawfull ſkafrie and malitious informationis. This is the trewthe of bothe theſe buſſines, whiche I thocht fitt to ſignifie to yow, and will remane

Your loving vncle to be commandit,

G. Murray.

Kinnard, the 22 of Auguſt 1616.

When I come to Edinburt, I ſall informe myſelf moir particularlie, and ſignifie the ſame to yow, for I had almoſt forgottin the buſſines.

To my weilbeloovit Nephew, Maiſter Patrik Hamilton,
at Court.

CLIX.—EARL OF DUNFERMLINE AND LORD BINNING TO KING JAMES VI.

Pleas your Sacred Maiestie,

We reſſauit youre maieſteis lettre of the xij of this inſtant, bearing, that complaint hes bene maid vnto youre maieſtie be James Haig of Bemerſyde, of oure partialitie in the tryall of that mater, contravertit betuix him and his brother, and how that your maieſtie wes ſpairing to beleve the ſame. As we acknawledge oure ſelffis infinitlie bundin to your maieſtie, for not geveing eare to ſuche a miſreporte ſo far aganis

the treuth and the ſinceritie of oure proceidingis in that mater, ſo we hoip that the depoſitionis quhilkis this day we haue tane of him and his bruther, according to the command of your maieſteis lettre, and quhilkis we haue heirwith ſend vp to your maieſtie, will cleir ws in that poynte, and gif vnto your maieſtie ſatiffactioun, alſweill in that as in the haill remanent pointis of your maieſteis lettre. We haue examinat the keipair of the tolbuith of Edinburgh, in Bemerſydis awne preſence, anent the reſorting of Maiſter James Raith and Maiſter George Butlair to his bruther, whoſe depoſitionis your maieſtie ſall lykwayſe reſſaue, whairby your maieſtie will perſave that thair is ſmall appeirance that oure travellis can produce ony forder diſcouerie in this controverſie, bot muſt depend vpoun your maieſteis awne moſt excellent wiſdome and reſolution. Thair hes ſa mony groſſe ouerſichtis fallin oute in Bemerſydis bypaſt actionis, he being defamed for counterfeiteing of your maieſtes ſignet, and the ſubſcriptioun of his awne brother, for the whilk he wes brocht in queſtioun before your maieſteis Seſſioun; and the breking of your maieſteis waird furth of the tolbuth of the Cannogait, beſyde findrie vtheris foleyis, quhilkis hes maid him ſo infamous, that we haue tane the leſe holde of ony thing that he hes ſaid againis ws. And wheras he hes complenit of want of moyen to interteny him ſelf in waird, in that poynte he hes lykwyſe ouerſeene him ſelff, ſeing fra the firſt day of his entrie in waird, he hes had and ſtill hes in daylie allowance of your maieſtie viij ſs. iiij d., whilk is more nor is gevin to wairdouris of his rank and qualitie interteneid vpoun your maieſtes chairges. And ſo, with oure earneſt prayeris to God for your maieſteis lang and happie regne, we reſt

Your Maieſteis moſt humble and obedient
ſubiectis and ſeruitouris,

CLX.—THE LORDS OF PRIVY COUNCIL TO KING JAMES VI.

Pleas your Sacred Maiestie,

Vpoun the refett of your maiefteis lettre, concerning that patent whilk your maieftie commandit to be exped to your feruitour, Robert Hay, for making of rid hering, we caufit warne the pairtyis who had interes in the firft twa patentis grantit be your maieftie in this mater, and who, as your maieftie wes informed, had gevin thair confent in fauours of the faid Robert Hay; as alfua the proueft and baillies of Edinburgh for thame felffis, and in name of the burrowis, to compeir and declair quhat thay had to propone and obiect aganis the faid patent; and the xviij day of September laft, being the dyet appointit for that earand, the faidis pairtyis, with the baillies and fome of the counfaill of Edinburgh, compeirit, and after mony exceptionis tane be the faidis baillies aganis this patent, as being a monopole of a dangerous preparatiue and example, and hurtfull and preiudiciall to the haill burrowis, in the fredome and preuiledge of thair commerce and trade, and that the faidis pairtyis had no confent to gif to the faid Robert Hay in this mater, becaus, at the laite conuentioun of burrowis, thay compeirit befoir thame, and acknowlegeit thair ouerfight in futeing fuche a patent fo far aganis the freedome and preuilege of the burrowis, and fimpliciter renunceit the fame. In end, thay come to this mayne pointe, that the making of rid hering wes no new trade, practize, nor inventioun broght in this cuntrey be the faid Robert, bot wes a trade formarlie practized and vfed within the fame, diuers yeiris afoir ony motioun wes maid thairof to your maieftie, outher be the faid Robert or ony others, and that thairfoir the faid Robert could not, with reafoun, clame ony fuche preuilege or fredome, as in fome caifes is tollerable, in the perfonis of thefe who ar the firft difcouerars, interprifaris, and inbringars of a new and proffitable trade within the cuntrey, not formarlie knowne within the fame. This allegeance being verie pregnant, and fund relevant to ftay the faid patent, it wes admittit to probatioun, and this prefent day wes affignit for proveing thairof. And diuers famous witneffes being produceit and admittit in the prefence of Williame Barclay, brother to the faid Robert Hay, it wes cleirlie verifeit and provin, that in the fax hundreth and nyne yeir of God, thair wes a nomber of rid hering maid at Dunbar, be certane maircheantis of this burgh, and that thay wer goode and fufficient maircheant wairis, and that ane pairt thairof wer caryed to Newheavin, Deip, Burdeaulx, and otheris pairtis in France, and thair fauld as goode and laughfull maircheandice, and that the reft wer fauld in this cuntrey. This probatioun conjoyned with moft apparent and probable likliehodis, that the faid trade is lyke to prove verie proffitable to the haill cuntrey, whairof thair hes bene a verie goode prooffe and begynning this prefent yeir, in fo far, as there is tua or three fhippis laidnit with this forte of hering maid within the cuntrey, and grite preparatioun and prouifioun daylie making be nombers of marcheantis agane the nixt yeir, hes moved ws to ftay the faid patent, and to declair the trade of making of rid hering to be free to all laughfull fubiectis: nawayes doubting bot your maieftie will gratiouflie accept of this our conclufioun, whairin we had no other refpect bot that of the commounweele, whilk we knowe your maieftie hes euer preferrit, and will prefer to all priuat refpect of pairtyis. And fo, with our humble prayeris vnto God for your maiefties lang and happie reigne, we reft

fubiectis and feruitouris,

Pleas your Sacred Maiestie,

Haveing, according to your maiesteis directioun, caufit chairge the Lord Sanquhair, and Williame Creichtoun, bafe fone to the laite Lord Sanquhair, and his curatouris, to compeir befoir ws this prefent day, for fubmitting of all thingis queftionable betuix thame, thay bothe keept this dyet, and feamed to be verie willing to gif vnto your maieftie fatiffactioun; and the faid Lord Sanquhair offerit himfelf moft willing for his pairt, to do in that mater as your maieftie had directit, fo as he might haif feene a fuirtye. But quhen it wes demandit of the faid Williame, yf he wes of laughfull aige, and yf he had gottin any laughfull certificat thairanent frome the place of his birth, and freindis in France, to whome he promeift to haif writtin in that earand, he declairit that he could not conftantlie afferme that he wes of laughfull aige, bot he wes of opinioun, that he wes verye neir thairunto, and bothe he and the Erll of Roxburgh, one of his curatouris, affermed, that thay had vfed all goodelie meanes, and had writtin to France to haif bene cleirit in that poynte, bot had not as yitt reffaued ane perfyte anfuer. And neuirtheles, for teftificatioun of thair reddynes, and willing difpofitioun to gif vnto your maieftie fatiffactioun, the faid Williame offerrit him felff reddie and willing prefentlie to fubmitt in the eftate that he now is in. Thay being at lenthe hard in this mater, and it being fundin, that this fubmiffioun, whilk in effect is the conclufioun and cloifing vp of youre maiefteis royall decreit and fentence, gevin and pronunceit betuix thir pairtyis, will not produce that goode effect for thair fuirtye, whilk your maieftie fo earniftlie wifhes, and for the whilk your maieftie hes tane fo grite panes and trauellis, it wes thairfoir thoght expedient, that the vrgeing of this fubmiffioun ſould yitt reſt ſome ſhorte ſpace, vntill the tyme of the ſaid Williame his aſſured and knowne majoritie: that then materis may be ſo handlit and ſetled betuix thame, as all futur occaſioun of queſtioun, trouble, or play, whilk may reſult vpon your maieſties decreit and ſentence foirſaid, may be fullie and finallie removed and tane away. This being the ſume of oure procedinges in this buſſynes, we humelie preſent the ſame to your maieſteis conſideratioun; and hairtelie praying God to bliſſe your maieſtie with a lang and happie reigne, we reſt

PLEAS YOUR MOST EXCELLENT MAIESTIE,

YOUR maieſties Deputie Theſaurair and Clerk of Regiſter come no ſounair to this toun, whilk wes vpoun Sonday at night, the xv of this inſtant, bot thay preaſt ws to conveene, and delyuerit to ws your maieſ-

teis lettre, concerning thefe preparationis whilkis neceffarlie mon be prouidit for, and had in reddynes agane your maiefteis comeing heir; and thairwithall, thay did at lenth informe ws of your maiefteis moft iuditious foirfight and intentioun, in the particularis concerning that preparatioun, quhilkis being fundin mor nor neceffair be ws, and we having at grite lenth conferrit and advifit thairupoun, and vpoun the moft probable and liklie meanes, how all thingis may be tymouflie, ordourlie, and fubftantiouflie done, to your maiefteis contentment, and credite of the cuntrey, we find it a mater verie vncertane, and we dar not hafaird your maiefteis neceffair furniffing, vpoun the naked hoipis and efperance of ony voluntair fupplee that may be expectit frome the people. And we can not foirfee, nor yitt affure oure felffis, how this furniffing may be feafounablie, and in dew time, layed in and had in reddynes without prefent and reddy money; and feeing your maiefties awne cofferis ar alreddy, vpoun occafioun of thir preparationis, fo far exhaufted and emptyed, as thay ar not able to do the turne, we think that the fame mon be fuppleit be a taxatioun to be layed vpoun the whole cuntrey, whairin we affure oure felffis no honneft fubiect wilbe failling. And whereas the confent of the efteatis mon be had heirunto, oure opinioun is, that ane conventioun falbe appointit to be haldin at Edinburgh, vpoun the fyft of Marche now approtcheing. And we haif heirwith fend vnto your maieftie ane lift of thefe, whome, we think mete to be writtin for to this conuentioun, with a forme of the miffiues to be directit vnto thame: And althoght this taxatioun will not be gottin in agane the tyme of your maiefteis comeing heir, yitt your maiefteis officiaris wilbe fo refpectiue and cairfull of your maiefteis honnour, and of the tymous prouiding of all thingis requifite for your maiefteis furniffing, as no thing falbe inlaiking whilk prefent and reddy money may afforde; feeing thay ar weele affured that all thair advancementis and deburfementis wilbe relevit in fhorte tyme be the taxatioun. And humelie befeiking your maieftie, with the firft occafioun of your maiefteis laifer, to returne vnto ws, your maiefteis refolutioun and commandment heiranent, and for fuch otheris thingis as your maieftie will haif to be proponned and handlit at this meeting, wherunto we fall conforme oure ſelfis. And praying God to bliſſe your maieſtie with a lang and happie reigne, we reſt

MOST SACRED SOUERANE,

SUCH of your maieſties counſeill as wer commanded be your letter, ſent be the Clerk of Regiſter, and Sir Gedeon Murray, to aduyſe vpon the meanes to furniſh your maieſties houſes of wheat, beir, aittis, wyne, ſpyces, beif, mutton, and vther prouiſions of that ſort, efter conſideration of the buſſines, could not reſolue vpon any vther gude meane be truſted, bot be taxation, which requyres ane conuention of the eſtates. The forme of the letters, and roll of the perſones to be ſent for, ar to be preſented to your maieſtie, to the effect that your maieſtie having commanded any thing to be altered or added, in aither of thame, James Douglas may thairefter be directed to vſe diligence in wryting the miſſiues to be ſigned be your maieſtie, and ſent downe with ſpeid; becaus the number of the perſones, diſtance of thair duellings, and tyme requiſit to the Commiſſionars of ſchyres and borrowes to conſult and reſſaue thair directions from thair collegues, will mak the day inſert in the letters ſchort aneugh for thair convening in this towne.

The Laird of Cumlege, who wes ſchiref depute of the Merſe, to the Erle of Home, preſented your maieſties miſſiue to the counſall, commanding thame to appoynt him depute in that office, during his lyftyme; which thay intending to obey before his commiſſion wes exped, Sir Gedeon Murray preſented your maieſties roll of the names of theſe elected this yeir, be your maieſtie, to be ſchireffis in the ſchyres of your maieſties appoyntment; Alexander Home of Renton being named to Beruick, who being called before the counſall to accept the chairge, declaired what he had hard of Cumlege deputrie, which he thoght ſo preiudiciall to the power of the principall ſchiref, and to the diſchairge of his dewtie, as he deſyred aither to be excuſed to accept the principall office, or els to haue it, as it vſes to be granted to vthers, with power to chois thair deputis and members of court, for whom thay ſall be anſuerable. The mater is delayed till your maieſties pleaſour be ſignified. Bot it wes remarked, that if your maieſtie, having ſo great deſyre to aboleis heritable ſchiref-ſchips, and to redeme thame at ſo deir rates, ſould begin to giue lyfrents of the offices falling in your handis, the heritable officers wald be the more vnwilling heirefter to tranſact. Whairin, ſubmitting my ignorance to your royall wiſdome, I beſeik God to grant your maieſtie moſt happie and long lyfe. Edinburgh, 20 December [1616?]

PLEAS YOUR SACRED MAIESTIE,

VPOUN refett of your maiefteis lettre, writtin vnto ws, in fauours of the Archiebifchop of Saint Androis, anent the reftoiring and repoffeffing of him to that affignatioun of victuall, quhilk is difponit furth of the thriddis of his benefice, to the caftell of Edinburgh; and for prouiding of the faid caftell with als mutche goode rent oute of your maiefteis rentis, we conferrit at lenth with the faid archiebifchop, and with the Erll of Mar, captaine of the faid caftell, thairanent; and, after dew examinatioun and confideratioun of the eftate of this mater, we find, that the Erll of Mar is verye weele prouidit to the faid affignatioun, be warrand and auctoritie of Parliament, and to difpoffes him of a conftant and fure rent, vnder pretext of that whilk wilbe vncertane, and to difpone the fame to the faid archiebifchop, nather can the one nor the other be availlable of the law, becaus this affignatioun maid to the faid caftell is not onlie annext thairunto be Parliament, as faid is, bot lykewayes in that fame Parliament of the fax hundreth and fax yeir of God, whairin the bifchoppis wer reftoirit to thair levingis and digniteis, thair is a fpeciall and particulair referuatioun and exceptioun, of the affignationis and prouifionis maid to youre maiefteis caftellis; and thir affignationis and referuationis being yitt in force, vnquarrellit or difchargeit by ony fubfequent Parliament, thair can no thing be done preiuditiall thairunto bot be a Parliament. Alwayes, feeing it is your maiefteis gratious will and pleafour to gratifie the faid archiebifchop in this poynte, whairof we weele allow, oure opinioun is, that in place of this affignatioun maid to the faid caftell, your maieftie fall gif vnto him ane penfioun oute of youre maiefteis rentis, anfuerable in proportioun to the faid affignatioun, to be broukit be him allanerlie, vntill a Parliament, at whilk tyme fuche folide and goode courfe may be then tane for the full and perfyte fecuritie of bothe pairtyis, bothe anent the reftitutioun and repoffeffing of the faid archiebifchop to his awne patrimonie and rent; and anent a new prouiſioun to be maid to youre maieſteis ſaid caſtell, as ſalbe thoght expedyent. CLXV.—LORD BINNING TO KING JAMES VI.

MOST SACRED SOUERANE,

ALBEIT I have ſuſpected and bene affrayed, that your maieſtie, longing for aduerteiſment of the progres of thir two great dependances of the day of law and conuention, might impute my ſilence in bothe to ſlewth or vndewtifulnes; yet having writtin vpon the firſt of this moneth of the eſtate of the criminall perſute, and iudgeing it more pertinent to informe your maieſtie of the concluſion of the conuention, nor by ane imperfyte and incertane relation, to diſturbe your manifold, extraordinar, and moſt weghtie reſolutions and directions, at the verie poynt of your

maiefties remoue from London for your wifhed profperous journay to Scotland, I refolued to fuperfeed wryting till the buffines fould reffaue determination. And now the conuention being diffolued, will crave your maiefties permiffion fummarlie to relate thrie dayes exercife. The firft meiting wes verie frequent, vpon wednifday the fyft of this moneth, and the buffines begun by reiding your maiefties letter to the Counfall, and ane wyfe, learned, and eloquent difcourfe of my Lord Chancelar, exponing the true caufe of your maiefties intended journay, to be your loue and longing to fie your natiue cuntrie and good fubiectis, and to bring to thame, the bleffingis which haue alwayes accumpanied your maiefties prefence, dilaiting the iuftice and neceffitie of your maiefties defyre to haue ane fupplie from your people for the chairges of your journay, as wes vfuall to be contributed in all aiges, not onlie for reception of natiue kingis, bot even of ftreinger princes, be the law of hofpitalitie: For which pourpofe, having adduced many pertinent authorities and exemples, he proponed the mater to be reafoned be the eftates, firft demanding the opinion of the Archibifchoppis, and being fatiffied be thair graue and good reafons, founded vpon oure duetie to your maieftie, for procuring to ws religion and iuftice, and all ordinar bleffingis following the fame, he proceided to inquyre of the opinions of nobilmen and vthers of the eftates, who all concurring to the confeffion of oure great obligation to your maieftie, and for the moft pairt granting that ane fupplie wes neceffar for the chairges of your maiefties intended journay. The nixt deliberation wes of the maner, whairin wes debaited, whether it fould be by voluntar contribution or taxation; and the taxation being fund to be the moft vfuall, cleir, and equall meane, and in that refpect allowed, it refted, to refolue vpon the fowme and tyme of payment, which gaue libertie to fum to fay, that it wes expedient to delay it till your maiefties prefence in the approcheing parlement; whair, thay, requyring of your maieftie affurance, that thair fecurities and eftates fould not be inverted nor hairmed in parlement, vpon grant of that affurance, thay wald then grant to ane greater fupplie nor could at this tyme be yeilded. Sum of the Weftland, agrieing to the fubftance, vrged that no conclufion might be takin, till thay wer releived of the importable burding of ane vndue proportion impofed vpon thair cuntrie be inequalitie of the wourth of merklandis, thairs, being fo far inferiour in rent and proffeit, to the lyke number of merklandis in vther fchyres and pairtis of the cuntrie, as thay wer forced to vnderly more nor the quadruple of thair due proportion, whairby thair tennantis wer becum fo poure, that it wes impoffible to thame to pay any taxation till that inequalitie wer reformed. The aduyce of vthers being alfo hard, and the regrait of the pouertie of the cuntrie much enforced, it pleafed my Lord Chancelar to command me to declaire my opinion, which being deliuered owt of my zeale and duetie to your maieftie and my cuntrie, wes, as fenfyne I haue hard, tane fumwhat hardlie, becaus I faid, that the propofition wes fo iuft and neceffar, that whofoeuer fould, aither directlie or indirectlie, preaffe to hinder it, wald be thocht execrable to all good fubiectis; whairby fome, who had fpokin before me, judged thame felues fumwhat taxed far vtherwayes nor I meant. My generall ground wes, that ane great taxation fould be hairtelie granted, and fpeidelie payed: My reafons wer deduced from the eftate of your maiefties affaires, and oure obligation and duetie; that your maiefties affaires requyred fupplie, becaus your journay drawing yow to infinit extraordinar expenfis, whairby your coffers wer emptied, ane extraordinar contribution of your people behoued to fupplie that want; it nather being feemelie to be requyred, nor probable to be obteaned, of the eftate of England, (being auerfe from the journay, which depryued thame of your wifhed prefence), wes to be expected and exacted from ws, who wer to enioy your maiefties long wifhed and almoft difpaired returne to this kingdome: That the quantitie wes not fo much to be proportioned to oure eftate, as to your maiefties honour and affaires, for which we fould be aboue power, being more obleiffed to your maieftie nor any nation in the worlde wes to thair king, the want of confideration whairof, and the motion to delay oure grant till we obteaned condicions in parlement, I imputed, rather to the ignorance, nor malice, of thefe who feemed to think that the baffe fupplie which we wer able to affourd could draw your maieftie to indent with ws; prayeing thame to acknouledge, that fince God had geuin ws the moft excellent king that euer profeffed Chriftianitie, and who had bleffed ws with more reall and conftant profperities, nor oure hairtes durſt haue wiſhed, or any vther nation euer reſſaued of thair king, albeit oure pouertie denyed ws abilitie of due requytall, oure duetie band ws to acknouledgement, and endeuour to go beyond oure powers: And, omitting to particularife the generall benefites done to oure people in England and Ireland, I ſchew that the bleſſingis of juſtice and peace, and fruttis arryſing thairof, did ſo obleis eurie one of ws, as no thing in owre power could equall it, deſyring that it might be remembred, that whairas the Ilanders oppreſſed the Hielandmen, the Hielanders tirannifed ouer thair Lawland nighbours; the powerfull and violent in the in-cuntrie domineered ouer the lyues and goodes of thair weak nighbours; the bordourars triumphed in the impunitie of thair violences to the portes of Edinburgh; that treaſons, murthours, burningis, thiftis, reiffis, hearſchippis, hoching of oxin, breaking of milnes, diſtroyeing of growand cornis, and barbarities of all ſortes, wer exerced in all pairtes of the cuntrie, no place nor perſon being exemed or inviolable, Edinburgh being the ordinarie place of butcherlie reuenge and daylie fightis; the paroche churches and churche-yairds being more frequented vpon the Sounday for aduantages of nighbourlie malice and miſcheif, nor for Godis ſeruice; nobilmen, barrons, gentilmen, and people of all ſortes, being ſlaughtered, as it wer, in publict and vncontrollable hoſtilities; merchandes robbed, and left for dead on day light, going to thair mercats and faires of Montrois, Wigton, and Berwick; miniſters being durked in Stirling, buried quick in Cliddiſdaill, and murthoured in Galloway; merchandis of Edinburgh being waited in thair paſſage to Leith to be maid priſoners and ranſoumed, and all vther abominations which ſetled be inveterat cuſtume and impunitie appeired to be of deſperat remeid, had bene ſo repreſſed, puneiſſed, and aboleiſſed be your maieſties wiſdome, caire, power, and expenſis, as no nation on earth could now compaire with oure proſperities; whairby we wer bund to retribute to your maieſtie, if it wer the verie half of oure hairt bloud. Thinking that none of the eſtates could harbour any thoght to the contrarie, I added, that I vnderſtude two obiections to be moſt common, the one proceiding of the pretext of the peoples pouertie, and the vther of the diſtribution of your maieſties moneyes, which being well managed, might fuffice all your chairges. To which I anfuered, that I wes confident that none of the eftates wald now obiect thair owne pouertie, when your maieftie neided thair fupplie, fince the prelates acknouledged thair eftate and fortunes to proceid of your maiefties mere liberalitie, and had freilie expreffed thair hairtie confent to ane taxation; that the nobilitie could not oppofe, whom your maieftie had honored with dignities and inriched with erections, benefited with landis, patronages, taxed wairdes, blanches, preceptis, penfions, and fo many vther liberalities, as had almoft ouerthrowne both the Churche and the Crowne; of all which the barones and frieholders wer participant; that the welth of bourrowes wes fo vifiblie increafed be your maiefties bontie and fauvour, that if thay did not contend with the moft forward to your maiefties fupplie, thay wald prouoke your maieftie to cloffe the conduict of your euer flowing bontie touards thame. As to the diftribution of your maiefties rentis and deueis, your debt wes fo great before your going to England, that the payment thairof exhaufted all the taxation granted for that pourpofe in the parlement 1606, and the erle of Dumbars journayes to this cuntrie, for executing and eftablifling your maiefties moft prudent and fatherlie deuyfes for reformation of intolerable abufes in kirk and commonwealth, had bene fo coaftlie, as your maiefties whole Scottis rentis being allowed thairon, could neuer haue bene able to haue performed the buffines, withowt verie lairge fupplie from the exchekker of England. Since his deceas, your maiefties rentis, and the taxation granted in anno 1612, wer fo proffitablie beftowed in the purchafe of Orknay, owtreck of fchippis and waidgeing fouldiours for repreffing publict rebellions, reparation of your maiefties caftellis and palices, and vther commendable deburfementis, exceiding fevin hundreth and tuentie thoufand pundis, that if any of the eftates wer curious to know the particulars, your thefaurar depute fould glaidlie refolue thame, knowing that the proffitable diftribution of byganes wald induce thame to more liberall contribution at this tyme: Prayeing thame, befydes, to confider how great fowmes your maieftie furneiffis from England, for the furnitour and chairges of this journay, and how your maieftie deburfis yeirlie in penfions to oure cuntrie people, fies to the Lords of Seffion, pay to the guairdes and bordour commiffionars, enterteaning ane ſchip in thir ſeas for ſecuring merchands and repreſſing pirates, and vther deburſements of that ſort, as the ſame amounting yierlie to ane hundreth and tuentie thouſand pund, whairof your maieſtie might juſtlie declyne the burding, and lay it vpoun ws,—we might be reputed the moſt ignorant and ingrate of all men, if oure affection at this tyme ſould not counteruaill oure benefites to the vttermoſt of oure power. As to the pretended pouertie of the people, it wes not to be alledged for ſtay of the taxation, becaus that pouertie proceided of oure owne waiſtfull ſuperfluities in all maner of expenſis; and the poure ſort wer not to be burdened with any pairt of the taxation, vnles it wer be thair maiſters oppreſſing thame aganis the ordonance of the eſtates. Sum vther reaſons being proponed be vthers, delay wes ſoght be the moſt pairt of the eſtates till the nixt day, that thay might convene with theſe of thair owne rank, to conſider of the quantitie of the taxation and termes of payment; which being yeilded, and thay convening vpon the ſixt of this moneth altogidder, efter ſum ſchort reaſoning vpon the quantitie, which depended vpon the difference of two hundreth and thrie hundreth thouſand merkis; at laſt the mater wes voted, and the number of thoſe who yeelded to thrie hundreth thouſand merkis prevailling be foure or fyue, ane new queſtion arraiſe, vpoun the power of counſallours votes, not being officers of eſtate, the nobilitie, barrons, and burgeſſis, contending that ſuch counſallours had no vote in conuention; and ſo thair votes being abſtracted, theſe who reſtricted the ſowme to two hundreth thowſand merkis ſould prevaile. To which it being anſuered, that the queſtion wes vntymelie, and vnneceſſar, ſince it wes not proponed in the beginning of the convention, and could be grounded on no better reaſon at this tyme nor in former tymes; thay ſaid, that thair wes no warrand for the vote of ſuch counſallours in conuentions, and albeit thay wer all aſſured that your maieſtie wald neuer intend iniurie, wrong, or preiudice to any of your eſtates and ſubiectis, vpon whom your maieſtie had beſtowed ſo many great benefites, yet, if this preparatiue ſould haue withgait, efter-cuming princes counſalled be ſtrengers, might appoynt ſo many counſallours, as thair number might ouerſway the eſtates, if thay had vote, and bring what burdingis vpon the cuntrie be taxations and vtherwayes the prince pleaſed: And preaſſing my Lord Chancelar to put the mater in voting, which he caire-fullie declyned, to wyn tyme, and find ſum expedient, he commanded me to reaſoun the mater, alledgeing that I wes ane olde counſallour. I anſuered, that albeit for yeires I might be reckoned amongis your maieſties olde ſeruandis, yet I wes reduced to be ane prenteis be the noueltie of propoſitions now made: that I neuer hard this dowt moued in any preceiding conuention, whair I had ſene counſallours many tymes ſit and vote, and that none appeired ſo bent in the mater as the ſmall barrons, whoes privilege being latelie purchaſſed with thair money, the eſtate of the bypaſt conventions wes better knowne to many vthers nor to thame. I thoght it neidles to luke to far bak to the antiquitie, contenting my ſelf with the relation of that which in the long courſe of your maieſties bleſſed regne had bene obſerued, during which tyme I vnderſtude that almoſt in all conuentions, and ſpeciallie when taxations and vthers moſt important maters wer to be concluded, theſe of your maieſties Privie Counſall had comonlie vote, for which I alledged ſum notable inſtances. To all which, the greateſt number of the eſtates, except the prelates, oppoſed ſo inſtantlie that thay wald not conſent to proceid, whill the queſtion of taxation wer of new voted, your maieſties counſallours not being officers of eſtate, being ſecluded, as having no vote in the conuention, which your maieſties officers thoght ane poynt of ſuch moment, as we counſalled my Lord Chancellar rather to tak any vther gude expedient, nor ſuffer thame expreſlie to prevaile in thair deſyre, withowt your maieſties knouledge, which he wyſelie conſidered and cairfullie debaited. Oure opinions concurring, that your maieſtie wald rather allow or ouerſie any vther courſe, nor, that we ſould haue preſumed to determine vpon ſo heigh ane poynt, before it wer ſignified to your maieſtie, and we directed in oure dewties be your maieſties anſuer; and ſo, thay perſiſting, and we not yielding, we intended rather to haue continowed the conuention to the ſecond of Apryle, nor to haue geuin way to thair deſyre; bot my Lord of Santandrois, diſlyking ane diſſolution of the eſtates and counſall, in contrarie termes, and the nobilitie, barons, and burgeſſis ſtill vrgeing that the propoſition of the taxation might be of new voted, and the counſallours to be aither excluded or commanded to be ſilent, and notwithſtanding all the entreatie and reaſons could be geuin to thame be my Lordis Chancelar, Theſaurar, and Archibiſchops of Santandrois and Glaſgo, thay remaning vnalterable from thair begun oppoſition, it wes at laſt reſolued, as minus malum, that the counſallours being the nixt day abſent from the conuention, it ſould be generallie motioned be my Lord Chancelar to the eſtates, and to your maieſties officers of eſtate, that thay wald declaire what thay thoght moſt fit to be done for the wyſe and dewtifull concluding of the mater for which we wer convened, and that the opinion of foure or fyue of the principals being demanded, the whole number ſould generallie applaude to thair grant of two hundreth thouſand pundis at verie ſchort termes; theſe who wer moſt ſtrict, profeſſing that thay caired not ſo much for the money, as for the danger of the conſequence, which thay feared might enſue be thair admiſſion of counſallours to haue vote amongis thame. So, as all men being in expectation of ane peaceabill and vniforme concluſion, I wes this morning forewairned be my Lord Chancelar, that he hard that thay wer to impugne the Theſaurar deputes vote, becaus he wes not ane officer of eſtate. I anſuered, that I had euer ſene Sir Robert Meluill and Sir John Arnot, when thay poſſeſſed the lyke office, have vote bothe in conuentions and parlements; bot becaus I wes aſſured be his lordſhip and vtheris, that the oppoſants wald ſtand to the mater, and rather delay all, nor admit Sir Gedeon, I forewairned him, and fand that he wald neuer, for the ceremonie of one dayes acceſſe, diſturbe ane mater ſo neceſſar for your maieſties ſeruice, ſince your maieſtie, at the parlement, might do what you fand good and iuſt in that and vther pourpoſes of the lyke nature, whairin your maieſtie had greater intereſt nor your temporarie and alterable ſeruants. And ſo the eſtates convening, and ſeing him and the counſallours abſent, my Lord Chancelar proponed the mater as wes proiected to the Erle of Mar, who voting that he thoght it expedient that your maieſtie ſould haue ane taxation of two hundreth thouſand pundis, the half thairof to be payed at Mertimes nixt, and the vther half at Witſonday 1618, all the nobilitie followed his opinion, with vniforme applauſe of prelatis, barons, and all the reſt of the conuention. If thair be any thing in this whole mater, whairof your maieſtie aither diſlykes the ſubſtance or forme, I moſt humblie beſeik your maieſtie to reſerue your reſolution to your ſelf, and not to expreſſe be wourd or letter any paſſion or offence, ſince, at your maieſties being heir, your maieſtie may expect more perfyte ſatiſfaction nor can be wroght before that tyme; and if your maieſties pourpoſe be ſoner expreſſed, it will be more eaſie for theſe that hes ane contrare diſſein (if any ſuch be, which I can not ſuſpect) to ſuggeſt indirect diſturbance, nor thay can be able to do, if your maieſties intentions be concealed. So, wiſhing that the ioy and happines of your maieſties journay to Scotland may equall and exceid that of your firſt entrie in England, which is the true paterne of the moſt acceptable and proſperous iournay that euer any king made before this day; and beſeiking God to protect your maieſties perſon, direct your affaires, and prolong and proſper the yeires and felicities of your maieſties lyffe and regne, beyond the tyme and ſucceſſe of the happieſt that the worlde did euir ſie, I reſt

and moſt bund ſeruant,

CLXVI.—THE LORDS OF COUNCIL AND SESSION TO KING JAMES VI.

MOST SACRED SOUERANE,

YOUR maieſteis gracious favour having placed ws in your College of Juſtice, wyſelie inſtituted be your moſt renouned grandfather, King James the Fyft, of ane definit and certane number of Ordinar Senatours, with ane Preſident, and the Lord Chanceler, and ſic vther Lordes as ſould pleas the kinges grace to inioyne to thame off his great Counſell, to haue vote with thame to the number off thre or four; our want off that grace and favour, which your maieſtie being in this kingdome, did vſuallie vowchaiff to ws, be your royall preſence amongis ws, and conſtant protectioun in everie thing which might concerne the dignitie, authoritie, and privileges of this ſenate, conſtraines ws to trouble your maieſtie with this moſt humble petitioun: That your maieſtie may be graciouſlie pleaſed to remember, that iuſt occaſiones, beſt knowne to your ſelff, having moved your maieſtie to remove the Lord of Blantyre from the Extraordinar place poſſeſſed be him in Seſſioun, and to diſpone the ſame to the Lord Elphinſtoun, the humble and inſtant interceſſioun of the Lord Blantyres freindes, and your maieſties gracious conſideratioun off his long ſervice, did ſo prevaile with your maieſtie, as yow wer induced to appoint him to haue ane ſupernumerar place amangis the Extraordinars. At which tyme the Lordis of Seſſioun, informing your maieſtie of the preciſe ordour off the firſt inſtitution, which appeired to be greatlie preiudged be the Lord Blantyres admiſſioun, your maieſtie wes not onelie then pleaſed to promes, in verbo principis, to ſupprefe the fyft place ſo ſone as it ſould vaick, bot ſenſyne in the yeir off God 1610, your maieſtie, having be your warrand ſend to ws with the Erll off Dunbar, diſcharged all the Extraordinars, and thairefter reponed four of thame, as the number agriable to the firſt inſtitutioun, without any warrand for readmiſſioun off Maiſter Peter Rollock of Piltoun,—his freindes repreſenting to your maieſtie, the vndifferued diſgrace which he ſhould ſufteane, iff, having allwayes behaved him ſelff faithfullie in your maieſties ſervice, and dewtifullie in his publict imployment, he ſould onlie ſufteane the mark off diſgrace, being excluded when his collegues wer repoſſeſſed, your maieſties deſyre to reduce our number to the firſt inſtitutioun wes thair greateſt and onlie difficultie. At laſt, your maieſtie wes pleaſed to remove, with this claus added to his new preſentatioun, that your maieſtie promitted, whenſoeuer any off the fyve Extraordinar places ſould vaick, your maieſtie ſould ſupprefe the ſamyn, and neuir grant preſentatioun to any Extraordinar places above the number of foure; as the act of the ſaid Maiſter Peters admiſſioun, extractit furth off our Sederunt booke, ſent heirwith, dois cleirlie teſtifie; and thairfoir the Lord Blantyres place being now voyd be his deceis, our knawledge off manye incon-venientis, which may refult off the exceffe off that number, which wes firft appointed be our inftitutioun, hes induced ws moft humblie to befeik your maieftie, be thir lynes, to embrace the occafioun now offered, to performe your moft wyfe and juft intentioun, and to fend to ws your maiefties grace's warrand in wreatt, for our perpetuall affurance thairof, whairby your maieftie may be releived from the importunitie off the iniuft fute off fuch as fall defyre to be provided to ane place, when none is dewlie vacand; and we alfo may be fred off all conteftatioun with any who fall feik entrie amongis ws, with preiudice and derogatioun off our privileges. So, hoping your maieftie will adde this fauour to the infinit benefites beftowit vpoun the whole bodie of your Seffioun, and the particular members thairoff, we will faithfullie promitt, that our caire and diligence, in the difcharge of the dewtie off our places, fall mak the increas off our number als vnneceffar, as it is hurtfull to the dignitie off the judgement and integritie off our firft inftitutioun; and fall endleflie pray to God, that your maiefties regne may be memorable beyond all that euir preceided yow for number off yeeres, and accompleiffed profperiteis, and that your royall iffue may be worthie fucceffours off your vertue and happines, to the worldis end.

CLXVII.—LORD BINNING TO KING JAMES VI.

Most Sacred Souerane,

The Conuention being concluded in maner conteaned in my letter of the 7 of this moneth, the perſute criminall wes renewed aganis Geicht, whoſe lawers, according to thair cuſtume, ſeiking delayes, began to diſpute iudiciallie vpon the Counſals power to appoynt ane juſtice depute. One of the Ordinars being deadlie ſeik, and the vther laufullie declyned, ſo ſone as I hard of it, I ſoght the approbation and aſſiſtance of my Lord Theſaurar, the Clerk of Regiſter, and ſum nobilmen of the Counſall being preſent, to repreſſe the inſolence of that attempt; and with thame went directlie to the Juſtice Court, and repreſenting to the lawers the enormitie of thair fault, gaue preſent command to the clerk to deleit furth of thair boukes all that was writtin vpon that ſubiect, with publict intimation to theſe lawers, and all vthers of thair profeſſion, that if thairefter any ſould preſume to moue the lyke queſtion, the rigour to be vſed be the Counſall in thair puniſhment, ſould mak them to know and feele thair power; which my Lord Theſaurar confirmed with ane verie graue and wyſe ſpeich, whairby the lawers wer broght to acknouledgement of thair fault, and craving pardon for it, with promeis not to commit the lyke; whairvpon enſewed ane verie modeſt and ciuill diſputation. And albeit the defendars did vſe many meanes of delay to gayne tyme, whill thay might find tyme for ſum beginning of hope of grace and fauour from your maieſtie, yet it wes with reuerence to the Juge and aſſeſſours, and in termes of law. Whill be packet of the 7, my Lordis Chancelar, Theſaurar, and I, reſſaued your maieſties letter, commanding ws to intimat to the Erle of Erroll, your maieſties permiſſioun to him to heir and accept offers of condigne ſatiſfactioun for iniuries or wrongis done to him or his freindis: which being accordinglie performed be ws, he then kythed als willing to accept, as before he had bene conſtant (if not obſtinat) in the refuſall of all freindlie dealling, profeſſing that beſyde the pruif of your maieſties many preceiding benefites, he wes ſo far bund to your maieſties vnchaingeable reſolution to furder him to iuſtice in this cauſe, that he might be reputed the ingrateſt of all men, if he ſould not be equallie reddie to perſiſt or deſiſt, as your maieſtie ſould be pleaſed to command him; and wes ſo conforted when I ſchew to him that your maieſtie had cauſed my brother wryte to me, to giue him your maieſties hairtie thankis, for his dewtifull inſtance in his perſute, and not yeilding to any offer of ſatiſfaction without your maieſties direction, that he craived, as ane ſingular fauour, that we wald permit him to ſchew to his principall freindis your maieſties letter, and that I ſould declaire, in thair heiring, what your maieſtie had commanded my brother to wryte thairanent. So, as I cannot expreſſe which of the two pairties acknowledgis thameſelfis moſt obleiſſed to your maieſtie, for the moſt wyſe and gracious ordour preſcryued be your maieſtie in this buſſines, whairin the Erle of Errol wald yield no farder, bot to ane continowation to the 18 of Junij, vpon ſure caution for Geightis compeirance at that dyet, profeſſing that he wald accept no ſatiſfaction of the pairties, whill firſt thay ſatiſfie your maieſtie.

The Gudeman of Rentons abſence from this towne forced me to delay the accompt of my proceiding in your maieſties direction concerning the ſchiref-clerkſchip of Berwik. Rentons reaſons wer, that be his commiſſion he had power to appoynt officers and members of court; that be the actis of parlement, the ſchireffis wer haldin to anſuer for thair clerkis, which they could not do if thay had not libertie to place and diſplace thame; that he could not expect obedience of ane clerk not depending vpon him, nor ſubiect to his cenſure; that it wes not expedient that the clerkſchip ſould be geuin to ane non reſident in the ſchyre to attend the ſeruice. My humble opinion is, that the geuing power to ane ſchiref, hauing commiſſion onlie for one yeir, may produce many inconvenientis; for it is to be expected, that the ſchiref of the nixt yeir, will, owt of his acquentance or affection, mak choice of ane vther the nixt yeer; and ſo from yeir to yeir, making the clerkis alterable, thair court boukes ſall fall in confuſion, and the ſchyre in diſordour, all the members of court being alyke ſtrengers to that which hes bene done in that jugement before thair entrie; whairas ane ſufficient man being appoynted clerk ad vitam, as your maieſtie hes done in the moſt pairt of all the ſchyres, being in your maieſties handis, thair knouledge of the courſe of the affaires, and ſtyle and ordour of the iuriſdiction, will bothe inable thame to diſchairge thair owne place with ſufficiencie, and ſupplie the inexperience of the new entering and oft chainged ſchireffis. It is trew that it wer proffitable that the ſchiref-clerk ſould mak conſtant reſidence in the ſchyre, bot the moſt pairt of thame that does ſo ar of ſmall meanes and ſkill, and many tymes of dowtfull integritie; whairas, if ane honeſt man of gude knouledge haue the office, with power to depute ſik as he muſt anſuer for, he will be bund to haue ane watchefull ey vpon his clerkis diligence and trewth; and when any dowt or queſtion arryſes in that inferiour court, exceiding the ſkill of the ſchiref and clerk, the mater being ſignified to him, he may aither be his owne knouledge, or conſultation with his collegues, aduocats of the beſt ſkill, direct be his counſall the judge and clerk, to do that which with beſt warrand may determine the controuerſie, and ſatiffie the pairties be juſtice; the conſideration whairof, I humblie ſubmit to your maieſties heigh wiſdome.

The Lord Blantyre being now deceaſſed, the Senatours of your maieſties College of Juſtice haue ſent heerwith thair moſt humble ſupplication to your maieſtie to ſuppreſſe that ſupernumerar place, according to your royall and moſt gracious promeis.

Sir George Erſkin having deliuered your maieſties preſentation, is put to his tryall, and hes geuin ſo gude ſatiffaction in the beginning thairof, that he is to be admitted to morrow, God willing.

My Lord Theſaurar being informed of the exorbitant preiudice done to this cuntrie, be tranſport of the beſt of your maieſties coyne, and inbringing of forayne gold and ſiluer, and expoſing thairof aboue the iuſt availl, hes urged reformation of it, which all men acknouledge to be rea-ſonable and neceſſar; bot becaus vntymelie reformation may mak remedia malis peiora, the officers of your maieſties mint and vthers, of beſt knouledge in maters of coyne, ar ordaned to be before the Counſall vpon Wedniſday nixt, to conſult of that buſſines, the event whairof ſall be ſignified to your maieſtie.

Sir James Cuninghames propoſition, concerning the Indian Cumpanie, is alſo continowed till the Counſall heir the opinion of ſum of oure merchandis of beſt experience, vpon the condicions and prouiſions neceſſar in ane mater of ſuch conſequence and noueltie in this eſtate.

Sir William Hairt being now deceaſſed, who had ane yeirlie fie of your maieſtie of fyue hundreth pundis, my Lord Chancelar thinkis, if your maieſtie may be pleaſed, to delay the appoynting of any new depute or judge for that court, till your cuming to this cuntrie, your maieſtie may haue opportunitie, in the approcheing parlement, to reforme and eſtableis the criminall judicature, in more perfyte ordour nor hes bene done in any bygane tyme within this kingdome.

The Counſall intendis to command your maieſties Maiſter houſhaldis, and ſum of the ancient ſeruandis of your maieſties houſe, to convene and vndertak the direction of all thingis concerning your maieſties houſe, and to appoynt ſeuerall officers to all ſeuerall chairgis, whairin much may depend vpon the information of James Maxuell and William Rydar, who wald be haiſted hither for that effect.

Kinfawnis is writtin for to be heir to tak ordour for the Erle of Craufurds tranſport; bot I heir that he will not vndertak ſo much as hes bene promeiſed in his name in that pourpoſe, whairof your maieſtie ſall haue farder certantie be my nixt.

Capten Murray, who hes bene long hindered be contrare windis, is now vpon his voyage touardis London, for tranſport of your maieſties prouiſions to this cuntrie.

The Maiſter of Elfinſton hes promeiſed to ſignifie to his father, your maieſties pleaſour concerning his ludgeing neir Halyrudhous, and to report his anſuer to the Counſall, which no dowt will be moſt hairtelie obedient. So, begging pardon for this too great interruption of your maieſ-ties royall affaires, I pray God to grant, without difturbance or interruption, the longeft and happieft regne and lyfe to your maieftie, that euer any king enioyed. Edinburgh, 14 Merche [1617?]

CLXVIII.—THE LORDS OF PRIVY COUNCIL TO KING JAMES VI.

MOST GRATIOUS SOUERANE,

WE reffauit your maiefteis lettre, with the petitioun preferred vnto your maieftie, on the behalff of the foure ordinair maiffaris, by the whiche thay craued that your maieftie wald be gratiouflie pleafit to modifie vnto thame a certane fee and dewitie, to be payit be noble men and knightis, the tyme of thair preferment to thair degrees and rankis of honnour; and how that youre maieftie hes delayit the granting of thair petitioun, till we, after confideratioun of the nature and confequence of thair fute, fould refolue youre maieftie of oure opinioun thairanent. According to your maiefteis directioun, we haif confidderit thair fute, and we find, that, as thair attendance vpoun youre maiefteis honnouris, bothe in parliamentis, and at all other tymes of ony folempnitie, is verie requifite and neceffair, and hes beene in continuall cuftome and obferuatioun, paft memoir of man; fo thay haif euer bene in vfe to reffaue, frome noblemen and knightis, the tyme of thair creatioun, fome free and willing acknowledgement for thair panes and attendance, whilk verie aft did furmont that whilk thay now crave to be modifeit vnto thame. And becaus the herauldis and trumpettis, whofe fees and dewyteis wer formarlie arbitrall, according to the difcretioun and liberalitie of the pairtye, hes of laite gottin a conftant and certane dewitie modifeit and appointit vnto thame, to be payit at fuche folempniteis, the maiffaris tooke thairupoun purpois to be fuitaris vnto youre maieftie, leaft that pairtyis taking holde of the not appointing and modifeeing of a conftant and certane dewytie to thame, as is done to the herauldis and trumpettis, fould mifknowe bothe thair attendance and acknowlegement. And thairfoir (faulffing youre maiefteis better opinioun), we think thair fute and petitioun reafonable, except in that pairt thairof anent the fee of knightis, whilk we haif modifeit to tuentie merkis; and we allow of the other fees as thay ar fett doun in thair petitioun, viz. for ane erll, fourefcoir pundis; for ane vicount, ane hundreth merkis; for ane lord, fourefcoir merkis; and for a knight, tuentie merkis, as faid is. And yf it fhall pleis youre maieftie to allow of this oure opinioun, and accordinglie to expeid thair fuite, it will putt thame in a certantie quhat to craue, and the pairtyis in a certantie quhat to pay. And fo, with oure humble prayers vnto God, recommending youre facred maieftie to his divyne protectioun, we reft for euer

fubiectis and feruitouris,

CLXIX.—LORD BINNING TO KING JAMES VI.

Most Sacred Souerane,

Remembring your maieſties expres direction, that ordour might be tane for releiving your maieſtie from the importunitie of vntymelie and vnreaſonable ſutars, and ſpeciallie theſe who might interceid for forfalted or diſabled perſons, I haue framed the ſubſtance of ane proclamation, which I ſend herewith to your maieſtie, to be ſene at your gude laiſer, and directed to be amended, whair your maieſtie findis any thing to be added, paired, or altered. I haue alſo maid mention of ſutes of all vther kyndis, and inſert ane clauſe aganis the releif of bankrupt priſoners, all which I humblie ſubmit to your maieſties cenſure, which, being expreſſed be letter, and this forme ſent bak, ſall be corrected and publeiſſed according to the ſignification of your maieſties pleaſour.

The note ſent heirwith will informe your maieſtie of all that we haue done in counſall the laſt of Apryle.

The greateſt difficultie which occurris to ws in the preparations for your maieſties remoues, is in the tranſport of your maieſties cumpanie, and cariages, at Leith and Dundie, whairof thair is no poſſibilitie, in reſpect of the ſcaircetie of boates, if the moſt pairt of all your maieſties trayne ſall not pas at Leith, Queniſſerrie, and Stirling, before the day of your maieſties remoue from Edinburgh to Falkland; and when your maieſtie goes from Falkland, it is not poſſible to the boates of Dundie to tranſport, in one day, the tent pairt of your maieſties trayne. The onlie remeid will be, if your maieſties followers prevent the day of your remoue from Falkland, going be Sant Jhonſton, and taking thair bagage with thame. Beſyde that, it is not ſene how your maieſties ſtuffis can be tranſported, and in due tyme placed at Kinnaird, vnles your maieſtie ſtay two nightis at Dundie, in your firſt paſſage, and mak the lyke ſtay at Dundie in your returne from Kinnaird. And albeit, I feare, that this neceſſar chainge of giſtes may offend your maieſtie, yet, ſince thay can not well be remeded, I think it more agreable to my duetie to ſignifie it to your maieſtie in tyme, nor by concealing it now, to expreſſe it when the difficultie of remeid ſall mak the vntymelie diſcouerie more iuſtlie offenſiue to your maieſtie. So, humblie prayeing your maieſtie, to allow and command the counſall to preſcryue the ordour which may beſt agrie with the eaſe and vſe of your maieſtie, and your followers, I beſeik God to encreas the happines and contentment of your journay, and bring it to ane moſt proſperous and joyfull end. Edinburgh, firſt of May [1617?]

Your moſt ſacred Maieſties moſt humble,
faithfull, and bund ſeruant,

CLXX.—NOTE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL, REFERRED TO IN THE PREVIOUS LETTER AS TO HIS MAJESTY'S RECEPTION.

VLTIMO APRILIS 1617.

THAIR is a proclamatioun publiſt at the mercat croce of Edinburgh, and accordinglie is to be publiſt in all the heade burrowis of this kingdome, declairing at length his maieſties eirniſt deſyre to viſite this his antient kingdome, and the naturall longing that his maieſtie hes had thir mony yeiris bigane to come heir, and how that now all the impediments quhilkis hinderit his majeſties reſolutioun anent his heircomeing being removed, his maieſtie hes begon and almaiſt accompliſheit his jornay and progres, with moſt confortable and happy ſucceſe; and thairfoir commanding all his maieſties goode ſubiectis of this kingdome to be thankfull to

God for the confortable and happy ſucceſſe, that his maieſtie hes had in his jornay, and nixt to be thankfull to his maieſtie for the panes and travellis that his maieſtie hes tane in his awin perſone to come to this cuntrey, and in manifeſtatioun of thair thankfulnes to his maieſtie, to ſhowe taikynnis of curteſie, hairtlynes and humanitie, to the noblemen and otheris of the kingdome of England, that ar to come heir with his maieſtie, and to offer na mater of offence to thame by reprotche, worde, deid, countenance, nor otherwayes, and that all the ſubiectis of this kingdome contene thame ſelffis in quietnes and in ciuile ſotietie, euery one of thame with another, and on nawiſe to perſew nor invade one another by worde, deid, countenance, nor otherwayes, vnder the pane of deade.

And becaus in the placeis of his maieſties aboade in this kingdome, his maieſtie will ſometymes neceſſarlie haif occaſion to recreat himſelff in the feildis, proclamationis ar exped and publiſt, diſchargeing the ſlauchter of moorefoule, partridges, and pouttis, within ten myllis of the placeis of his maieſties aboade, and commanding the ſame to be cairfullie preſerued and hayned for his maieſties paſtyme and gayme.

In reſpect of the diſordour and confuſioun that hes been in preceding parliamentis anent the putting of a confuſed nomber of articlis and petitionis, without forme, ordour, and formalitie, a proclamatioun is exped and publiſt conforme to the act of Parliament, concerning all perſonis that hes ony articlis or petitions to gif in to the parliament, that thay gif in the ſame in dew and lauchfull tyme afoir the parliament to the Clerk of his Maieſties Regiſter, to the effect the ſame may be conſidderit be thoſe quhome it apperteyneth, with certificatioun to thame that failyes, that the ſame ſall not be reſſauit thairefter.

Thair is new aduertiſement ſend to the biſhop and to the magiſtratis of the citie of Brechine, and to the magiſtratis of the toun of Monrois, to caus all neceſſar prouiſioun of viuers for horſe and men, be abundantlie prouydit in thair townis, for his maieſtie and his tryne, and to caus haikis and mayngeris be ſett vp in barnis for the better ſtaibling of his maieſties and his trynes horſſes.

Directioun is ſend to the Erll of Home, that he, accompanyed with the baronis and gentlemen of his kin, freindſhip, and dependance, all in goode equippage, and weele horſit, ſall meete his maieſtie at the boun rod, and convoy his maieſtie thairfra to Dunglas, and fra that to Pencraik, beſydis Lyntoun boiggis; and the lyke directioun is ſend to the Erllis of Wyntoun and Lothean, the Lordis Yeſter and Cranſtoun, and to the Vicount of Lauderdail, to meete his maieſtie, accompanyed with the baronis and gentlemen of Lotheane at Pencraik, and to convoy his maieſtie thairfra to Seytoun, and vpoun the morne thairefter fra Seytoun to Edinburgh; and the lyke directioun is ſend to the ſhireff of Fyffe, for the ſhirefdome of Fyffe; and to the ſhireff of Forfar, and to the Erll of Errole and Lord Carnegy to attend his maieſtie to Doundie, and to convoy his maieſtie thairfra to Kynnaird; and to the ſhireff of Kincairdin, that he or the Lord Keith his ſone, accompanyed with the baronis and gentlemen of the Mernis, all weele horſit, and in goode equippage, ſall attend his maieſtie at Kynnaird, and mak his convoy thairfra to Dundee.

Directioun is ſend to the magiſtratis of Arbrothe and Forfar, to caus thair townis ſufficientle prouide and furniſh with all kynd of viuers and otheris neceſſaris for horſſe and men.

Becaus thair is a nomber of difficulteis proponned and obiectit anent his maieſties cariage at the ferry of Dundee, in reſpect of the multitude of paſſingeris and cariage, and the few nomber of boitis to tranſporte the ſame, that mater is remittit to be reſolued vpoun be his maieſtie and his counſaill at thair meeting at Beruick.

And to the effect that in the meantyme all thingis may be the better prouydit and in reddynes, in caiſe his maieſtie, vpoun goode conſiderationis, ſall tak occaſioun to mak his progres fra Falkland to Dundee, to be the firſt night at St Johnneſtoun, and fra that to Dundee; directioun is ſend to the magiſtratis of St Johnneſtoun, to prouyde thair toun with all kynd of viuers and neceſſaris for men and horſſe, and to reporte to the counſaill vpoun Satterday nixt, how and quhair his maieſtie may be commodiouſlie ludgeit in thair toun, and how his maieſties cariage may be careyed alangis the bridge without harme to the bridge.

The counſaill hes writtin to the convenour of the iuſtices of peace within the ſhirefdome of Perth, that ordour be tane for lifting of the cariage at Perthe, and careying of the ſame thairfra to Forfar, and the lyke directioun is gevin for the ſhirefdome of Forfar, anent the careying of the cariage fra Forfar to Kynnaird.

And becaus the townis of Forfar and Arbroithe lyis eweſt to Mure Rewmonth, ſua that it is liklie that ſome of his maieſties tryne and followars ſall mak thair addreſſe thair for ludgeing, the magiſtratis of theſe townis ar writtin to, to caus thair townis be weele and abundantlie furniſt with all kynd of viuers for men and horſſe, and with goode naiprie and bedding.

CLXXI.—LORD BINNING TO KING JAMES VI.

Most Sacred Souerane,

Since my laſt, we ar aduerteiſed that the Lord Olifant, having conſaued ane deſperat malice aganis Patrik Olifant, his neireſt kinſman and heire apparant; withowt any diſcouerie or denunciation of his evill will, enterteaned him in his howſe, and at his table, with ſuch familiaritie and freindlie countenance, as became men ſo neir in bloude, till Wedniſday laſt, that having ſouped together in Dipline, and ſtanding in the hall before the fyre efter thay had ſowped, Patrikis doublet and cloathes being lowſe, the Lord Olifant, vpon the ſuddane, withowt any ſchew of diſpleaſour in wourdis or countenance, gaue to Patrik ane great and dangerous wound in the bellie vnder the navill, which is iudged to be moſt deadlie. As yet we haue not aſſurance of the gentilmans death, bot none that have ſene him think he can leive. The malefactour is fugitiue; and, if the patient die, it is thoght it will equallie indanger the offendars lyfe and eſtate, whairin I will affirme no thing raſhlie, bot onlie entreat your maieſtie to forbeare to diſpoſe vpon his eſcheat or eſtate, till your maieſties chancelar and theſaurar cum to yow to Berwik, with whom yow may reſolue what is moſt convenient thairin.

All your maieſties ſtuffis ar now arryued, praiſed be God, withowt ſkaith, bot not withowt danger. Vpon Fryday the 27 of Apryle, one of your maiefties ſchippis, laidned with the moſt of your precious furnitour, wes forced to ſaill ane anker and ane cabill; and, vpon Thuriſday laſt, ane bark carieing aboue the value of twentie thouſand pundis, wes conſtrained to hew hir maſt, and is now ſaif in Leith harbrie. So I hope in God that all perrell, both be ſea and land, is paſt. I have ſent the forme of ane letter with ane roll of the counſallours names to be conſidered and directed be your maieſtie, as your excellent wiſdome ſall ſeme convenient. So prayeing God, who hes conducted your journay by ſo happie progres, to bring it to ane proſperous and joyfull end, I reſt

Your moſt ſacred Maieſties moſt humble, faithfull,

CLXXII.—THE LORDS OF PRIVY COUNCIL TO KING JAMES VI.

PLEAS YOURE SACRED MAIESTIE,

VPOUN the firſt aduerteiſment maid to youre maieſteis ſeruitour, Sir And. Bowye, of the vnfortunat deathe of his laite ſuſter, youre maieſteis laundreſſe, he craued licence of ws to mak his addreſſe to youre maieſtie, to be a humble ſuitar, that youre maieſtie wald be gratiouſlie pleaſit to prefer his wyfe to that ſeruice; and the rather for that his moder, grandmother, and laite ſuſter, cairfullie and faithfullie ſerued thairin. Bot the neceſſitie of his attendance heir at this tyme vpoun youre maieſteis affairis and ſeruice being ſo vrgent, as hardlie could we yeild to his deſyre, we haif preſomed to ſupplee the ſame, by oure lettre and humble interceſſioun vnto your maieſtie in his fauour, that this ſeruice whairin he pretendis ſuche kyndnes, may be gifted to his wyffe, quhairby, as he ſalbe the more able to attend his awne ſeruice with ſuche reſpect, credite, and dewytie as apperteyneth, ſo he wilbe no les cairfull that his wyffe, with the lyke reſpect and credite, ſhall approue hir ſelff worthie of this place and charge. And ſo craueing youre maieſteis pardoun for this oure preſumptioun, and praying God to bliſſe youre maieſtie with a long and happie reignn, we reſt

ſubiectis and ſeruitouris,

ſacred Maieſtie.

CLXXIII.—LORD BINNING TO KING JAMES VI.

MOST SACRED SOUERANE,

THE occaſion of my vntymelie troubling your maieſtie with thir lynes, is for the proclamation formed be your maieſties direction, and ſent heir to be exped and publeiſſed; which being red this day at the meiting of ane few number of your counſall with my Lord Chancelar, exception wes takin aganis the article neir the end, which enioynes the payne of death to ſuch as ſall interceid for fauour to forfalted traitours, etc.; or to thair wyfes, bairnes, or vthers diſabled or diſinherited perſons, becaus thair

is no expres act of parliament for it, and that the offence of requeafting can not differue fuch payne, fince it is in your maiefties power to grant or refufe. I anfuered, that I hard that fum particular actis of parlement had bene maid thairanent in your maiefties minoritie, and that I had red fum actis of fecret counfall and proclamations maid vpon that fubiect: and confaued that your maieftie fand it more reafonable, that be publication of the proclamation, the importunitie of thefe who intended to trouble your maieftie with requeaftis of that vnreafonable kynd, might be prevented and reftrained, nor that your maieftie fould be put to the fafcherie of conteftation. Bot becaus the want of your maiefties hand to the warrand, wes the pretext of the difputation and delay to pas the proclamation, I have returned it heirwith, prayeing your maieftie to confider of this controuerted claufe; and if your maieftie find it to be altered, that James Douglas may be informed of your maiefties pleafour anent the fubftance of any thing to be reformed in it. Bot if it can not cum to this towne before Thurifday at night, it may be delayed till the counfals cumming to your maieftie to Berwik; and if it be foner fent, it is expedient that your maieftie, be your letter, lat the counfall know your pleafour anent the paffing thairof, withowt any notice of oure controuerfie, becaus it wes in verie calme and moderat termes, and the mater merites your maiefties owne confideration and refolution. It is thoght the Maifter of Olifant will not die of his wound. What is done in your maiefties vther directions will be knowne be the note fent heirwith. So, prayeing God daylie to increas the happines and contentment of your maiefties journey, I reft

Your moft facred Maiefties moft humble, faithfull,
and bund feruand,

CLXXIV.—LORD BINNING TO KING JAMES VI.

Most Sacred Souerane,

I will not abuſe your gracious patience with repetition of any pourpoſe conteaned in the note of the counſals proceidingis ſent heir-with. I expected the ſchiref of Tevidails cumming to this towne to giue his direct anſuer anent the condicions of his renunciation of his office, according to his promeis; in place whairof, having reſſaued ane generall and obſcure letter, which I intended to haue ſent your maieſtie, I haue delayed, at the earniſt intreatie of his brother-in-law, Maiſter Richard Douglas, who hes promeiſed to deale with him for ane more particular and pertinent anſuer. The cuſtumes being yiſterday to be rowped, the preſent cuſtumars, and vther merchandis, pretending the ſmall expectation of any benefite to be maid this yeir, in reſpect of the abundance of alde wynes in this cuntrie, and appeirand ſcarcetie and dearth of wynes in France, were vnwilling to mak any pertinent offer for this approching yeir, and maid inſtance for ane fyve yeir tak, which we wald not grant, nor proceid farder with thame, pretexing oure delay with the abſence of the principall theſaurer, till the nixt counſall day, appoynted to be the firſt of October. Bot the true cauſe wes, oure deſyre to know your maieſties pleaſour in the grant, or refuſe of thair deſyre of ane fyve yeir tak, and humblie wiſh that it may be returned to us before the firſt of October. At that tyme we wiſh alſo to vnderſtand your maieſties pleaſour anent ane poure fellow, maiſter of ane coaleſchip, of the Lowe Cuntries, tane and committed to priſon in the towbuith of Edinburgh, when the counſall reſſaued your maieſties commandement to ſeaſe vpon any of that cuntrie; ſo as none being at Leith bot this ſkipper, who is ſo deſtitute of freindis and meanes, heir, as he muſt leiue vpon almes, we deſyre to know whether your maieſtie will command his longer detention or libertie.

The wifdome of your maiefties refolution in the propofitions, concerning the bufinefs of the late Bordours, hes geuin fo gude fatiffaction to the landiflords, who compeired before the counfall in great number, as they have all willinglie acted thamefelues to obferue the order prefcryved be your maieftie.

The marquis of Huntlie, and erle of Erroll, efter reconciliation, gaue thair confents to the regiftration of your maiefties decreit, before thay knew anything of the tenour thairof, which being now publeiffed, is judged wourthie be all men to be reuerentlie obferued be all pairties intereffed, who can neuer be able, by feruice, to requyte your maiefties wyfe and paynefull proceiding for thair gude. So befeiking God, be the continouance and encreas of his bliffingis, to recompens your maiefties fauours and benefites to your fubiectis, I reft

faithfull, and bund feruant,

BINNING.

To the Kingis moft facred Maieftie.

CLXXV.—THE EARL OF DUNFERMLINE TO KING JAMES VI.

THIS year (MAIST SACRED SOUERANE), almaift now worne to end, hes bene vnto this land and kingdome a yeare off Jubile, and a yeare of fingulair joye; this kingdome being this yeare nocht onlie illuftrat, as all other years, be your royall and famous actiouns, bot alfo marvelouflie decored and inritched be yiour prencelie and glorious prefence and ma-jeſtie: hes furneiſt greate comfort, vigour, and ſtrenthe to this haille eſtaitt, all members and pairtis thairoff.

The particuler ſucceſſe of ſpeciall actiouns I ſhall heir breiflie, according to my bund deutie and cuiſtum, tuitche vnto your maieſtie, that ye may have a preſent vieu and jouiſſance of the froottes of yiour happie and good gouernament owir this peopill.

The end of the laſt yeare, and firſt entrie to this yiour counſall in this Eſtaitt, be yiour ordonance, beſtoued on the conſideratioun and approbatioun of certane articles, concludit at ane Generall Aſſemblie of the Kirk, keeped at Aberdene, in Auguſt before thir ſpeciall articles war approwin, that thair ſould be ane general Catechis formed, to be vniuerſalie teatched to all the youthis in this countrie: That in euirie pariſche thair ſhould be ane ſchoole; and in euirie pariſche, ane regiſter of the naymes off all borne and baptized, and off all died.

The Marqueis off Huntlie, and Erle of Erroll, be yiour ſacred majeſties good meanes, intreatie, argumentis, perſuaſiouns, and mediatioun, hes bene at laſt reduced to conformitie in all neceſſair poynts and articles of relligioun, and fullie reconciliat withe the kirk of this kingdome: Lykeas, yiour ſacred majeſtie hes alſo agreed the ſaidis tua nobillmen and thair freindis, in a particuler perrollus deadlie feade was fallin out amongs thame ſelfis, and lykelie to haue maide greate truble betuix thame, for ſlauchter and bloode betuix Laird of Gight Gordoun, and ane brother of the Erle off Errolls, and ſome others, his freinds.

The queſtioun of bloode, ſlauchter, and all criminall or ciuill actiouns, betuix the ſaidis pairteis, being remitted, and compromitted to yiour maiſt royall majeſties perſoun and arbitrall decreit, was, be yiour highnes, maiſt circumſpectlie, wyſlie, and amicablie compoſed and decydit, to baithe the pairteis eaſe and contentment; ſua that thej war baithe, by yiour prencelie command, before yiour Counſall, in September laſt, broght to full reconciliatioun and amitie.

Ane other truble, appeirand to haue fallin out betuix the Erle of Perthe and Lord Lewingſtoun, for queſtiouns of mairtchis in thair wooddis, forreſts, and hountings, be yiour ſacred majeſties wyſe commandement and directioun, was ſubmitted to freindis of thair awin, and is finalie weel compoſed.

The Erle of Mar, ane auld, truſtie, and familiar ſerwand to yiour majeſtie, from yiour infancie, be yiour prencelie ordonance, inſtalled in the full plaice, dignitie, and adminiſtratioun of the office of Threaſaurarie in this kingdome, with greatte applauſe and allowance off all.

In Januar it pleaſed your highnes, be yiour fauorabill letter, ſignifie vnto yiour Counſall, yiour full reſolutioun to honour this countrie withe yiour royall preſence in May efter, declairing thairwithe the reaſouns mowed yiour ſacred majeſtie to this determinatioun—reaſouns full of wiſdome, lowe, and kyndnes to this yiour native ſoylle. The letter was found ſua worthie, and was ſua acceptabill to the haill Counſall, as thaj thocht fitt copies of the ſame ſould be diſperſed to all ſchyres and dioceſes, to make all yiour good ſubjects acquent with this yiour highnes fauorable deſſeynge, whilk rejoyced the hairtis of all good pepill in the land.

Ane Conventioun of the Eſtaittis was drawin togither, onder yiour highnes authoritie, to mak all deu preparatioun for honnorabill reſſaitt of yiour royall perſoun, and all yiour nobill companie.

The Eſtaittes maiſt willinglie granted ane ſubſidie off twa hundrethe thouſand pundis, to ſupplie the neceſſair chargis off ſic ane extraordinair and maiſt honorabill erand.

Directiouns war gevin for reparatioun off all hie wayes, parfyting off all yiour ſacred majeſties houſſis, palices, and caſtells; innumerabill craftiſmen of all ſortis entered to all warkis, all, be cair and diligence, maide readie in deu tyme, abowe all expectatioun; ffor the lyke was newir ſeene in this land of before: greatte ordour tayne for abundance and ſtore off all prouiſiouns and viures for horſſe or men, and for honeſt ludgeings to all yiour majeſties trajne and companies, in euirie pairt where yee war to reſort.

Yiour majeſties chappell in Halyroodhous, builde wp of new, with all ornamentis and deu furnitour, micht be requyred in any royall chappell, and maiſt manificklie dek't and ſett furthe.

Furnitour off ſilwer wark, and plaitte, tapeſſerie, ritche beddis and bedding, and all ſic neceſſairis for ane royall houſe, ſend for be yiour ſacred majeſties awin directioun, and prowydit in greatte ſtore from all pairtis, whilkis, ſtill remaynis in yiour wairdropps and palices, may ſerue for many aiges, as the ſame ſerued yiour ſacred majeſtie at this tyme maiſt honorablie and plentifullie.

About the middis of Maij, yiour highnes entered in this kingdome, accompanyed withe good number of yiour highnes nobilitie, prelatts, officers and counſallours of Ingland, and good number alſo of nobillmen, officers and counſallours of this Eſtaitte, ſic as yiour majeſtie had ordoned and commandit to meett yiow at Barwicke.

Yiour ſacred majeſtie honored firſt my Lord Erle off Hoomes houſe of Dunglas, withe yiour maiſt gracious preſence; and nixt, the Erle of Vintouns houſe of Setoun; was in baithe the ſaidis nobillmens houſſis, with all yiour nobills, reſſaued and intertenyed to thair powar, althoc far onder yiour dew, yit to yiour contentment and all yiour companies, honorablie and magnificklie.

Then came yiour majeſtie to yiour awin palice off Halyeroodhouſe, making yiour entrie throw yiour good toun of Edenburght, whaire ye war maiſte joyfullie reſſaued, and viſited that kirk, hard preatching, and was conwoyed be the haill toun in honorabill ecquippage to yiour palice.

Thair was yiour majeſties maiſt ordinair reſidence Maij, Junij, and Julij, viſitting, alwayes, be tymes, Fyffe, Angus, Perthe, Sterlingſchyre, and other pairtis aboutt, baithe yiour awin palices, and nobillmenns houſſes in the countrie; till, in Auguſt, yiour highnes retired be the waſt countrie, from Glaſgow, Paſlay, Hammiltoun, Sanquhar, Drumlaynrig, and Lyncluden, to Cairleill in Ingland, and from that fordwart to yiour ordinair royall ſaitte at Londoun.

It wald require a greate volume to recompt the greatte benefitts and commodities, baithe the natiouns, Inglifche and Scottis, hes had in this yiour majeſties jornay and ſejorne in Scotland; all manifeſting yiour majeſties incomparabill wiſdome in that interpryſe.

Since yiour ſacred majeſtie attayned to the Croun of Ingland, thair hes nothing bene done, nor meaned to, could advance and furder a perfytte vnioun of the twa natiouns, ſua far as this hes done.

Yiour majeſtie had heir, in yiour train and companie, a number of Inglifche prelatts, maiſt wyſe, learned, and grave nobilles, that merited juſtlie the honour and ſtille of nobilitie, and wald haue kyithed ſua abowe others, in any ciuill corner of the warld, courteſſe, honnorabill, amiabill, tractabill, circumſpect, euer readie to all woorthie actiouns, mowed be thair good behauiour all men in Scotland, to honour, reverence, and admire baithe thame and thair vertuis.

Lykeas, on the other ſyde, be yiour majeſties prencelie directiouns, yiour Counſall in Scotland ordoned all, ſua as nayne of yiour trayne or court could fee or fynd anye thing in this land, might gif him any diſtaiſte, or occaſioun of miſcontentment.

Plentie of all to all ſorts of men; all vſed be all poſſibill ciuilitie, good ordour, and diſcretioun, ſua that thaj granted and affermed all thay fand, where ewir thaj war in this land, all the good treatment could be wiſched in any good countrie, and all far from that barbaritie, thaj war almaiſte perſwadit before, did regnne in thir northerne pairts. This maide a greate vnioun of the hairtis betuix baithe natiouns, the ane, fynding all honour and courteſie ſua frilie offered to thame, and the others, finding all ſua weell and thankfullie accepted, and ſua weill thocht off and acknauledgitt.

In all the tyme of yiour majeſties remayning in this kingdome (a mater marvelous and to be admired), in ſua greate companies, and ſua many nobillmen and great perſonages off tua natiouns conveyned, neuir any actioun, woord, or appeirance of any diſcord, variance, or offence, betuix anye of the natiouns withe other, for whatſumewir cauſe. I doubt giff euer the lyke hes bene ſene, at ſic occaſioun off ſua frequent a meiting of men, ſtrayngers, and onknowen to other.

To augment and ſtrengthin this amitie and kyndnes, yiour majeſtie, maiſt wyſlie and prencelie, admitted, ſworne, on yiour Priuey Counſall and Counſall of Eſtaitt in Scotland, good number of yiour nobles, officears, and prelattis off Ingland, was heir withe yiow in companie: was all maiſt willinglie reſſaued, maide priuey and acquent withe all our proceedings, and alwayes honored to our powars.

Yiour majeſtie had thame, alſo, all withe yiow, in our Counſall Houſe and Seſſioun, or Souerane Court off Juſtice in this kingdome, where, in yiour ſacred majeſties preſence, was ſyndrie actiouns, according to our ordinair formis, baithe diſputed and decydit; the ordour and faſioun whereoff thaj werie weill allowed and commendit, albeit, in dyuers poyntis, different and diſconforme from thairis.

In the tyme of yiour ſacred majeſties aboade in this kingdome, was alſo ane parliament haldin, in the monethe of Junij, illuſtrat be greatter concurſe and nombir of the Nobilitie and all Eſtaittis, nor hes bene ſeene before, in our aige; ciuile and weill ordered in all reſpectis, daylie honored be yiour highnes royall preſence, directed and gyditt be yiour wiſdome.

Many notable good actis eſtableiſt in this parliament, for better ordour off parliament in all tymes to cuim, for reſtauratioun of the decayed churche eſtaitt; for mantenance of peace and juſtice amongs all ſubjectis; for cleiring of rightis and tytills, and awoyding of pleas; for all good ordour in the countrie.

And, in conſideratioun the tyme was ſchorte, nocht anſuerable to yiour prencelie zealle and erneſt deſyre to liwe all heir at perfytte ordour, the maiſt important affairis of yiour Eſtaittis, baithe at hayme and withe forrayne Princeſs, drawing yow to Ingland agayne, for remeid to the greatte inconvenient hes bene parſawed and heavilie complained on, thir manye yeares, off the pouertie of the eſtaitt of the miniſters of the kirk, preatcheours and teatcheours of Goddis holie woord, and miniſters off the ſacramentis of our ſaluatioun; in yiour heiche judgement, hes this parliament furneiſt withe ſufficient commiſſioun the number of 33, mixt of all the Eſtaitts, to conveyne at certane tymes, and to prowyde, as maiſt commodiouſlie may be, to ewirie kirk ſufficient ſtipend for ane miniſter, outt of the readdieſt of the teynds of the ſaidis kirkis, withe reaſonable conſideratioun of recompence to the poſſeſſours of the teynds; ane commiſſioun

the maiſt ſolemne and beſt adwyſed on, and whilk is hoped ſhall produce als greatte and good effectis, as any hes euer bene in this land.

At yiour majeſties going furthe of this countrie, giuen on the mairtchis betuix Ingland and Scotland, it pleaſed yow direct command to yiour Counſall, to call all the landſlords and cheiffis of clannis, or other principall commanderis, in the Middleſchyres, and make thame all renew the generall band, baithe onder thair aithe and ſubſcriptioun, for manteyning of the peace; anſuering for all thair men, tenents, ſerwandis, and dependars, and to enter ewirie ane of thame, as thaj ſall be called in juſtice. This is the key of all good ordour and obedience in theeſe pairtis, hes bene preceiſlie obſerwed and putt to executioun, be the Counſall in all poyntis, conforme to yiour prencelie ordonance.

In this laſt Nouember, onder yiour highnes authoritie, and withe aſſiſtance of commiſſioners, appoynted be yiour ſacred majeſtie, did conweyne, in the cittie off Saint Androis, ane Generall Aſſemblie of the haill Kirk of this kingdome: agreed amongs thame on ſyndrie poyntis and articles, importing to the policie and good ordour in Godds ſeruice, and for vniformitie in adminiſtratioun of the ſacramentis.

This ſame monethe of Nouember, war the commiſſioners appointed be the laſt Parliament to attend on the plantatioun of the kirkis and prouiſionis for miniſters ſtipends, conweyned werie ordourlie, and entered to thair warke; proceids werie weill and circumſpectlie in the ſame, and ar lyke to bring that to good perfection.

The haill cuiſtuimis of this kingdome, vpon ſyndrie good reaſouns and reſpectis, weel weyed and conſidered be yiour officears and commiſſioners, appoynted for manageing of yiour rentis, layed doun before yiour royall majeſtie, and be your royall command, ar this yeare ondertayne onder yiour majeſties awin nayme, to be collected, on all hazarde, to your behowe, vtilitie and proffeitt; and be the directioun of your highnes commiſſioners, wha daylie beſtowis ſuim tyme on the conſideratioun of theeſe affairis, ar maiſt cairfullie attendit wpon; wee hope ſhall turne to naa loiſe to your coffers in end, will alwayes make yiour officears and counſall privey to the haill eſtaitt of theeſe affairis.

This yeare hes bene vnto your ſacred majeſtie glorious, in ſua far as it hes furneiſt vnto yiow ſubject to actions will be of memorable honour and admiratioun to all poſteriteis: hes bene alſo to this kingdome happie and fortunat be the fauour and ſchyning off yiour maiſt gracious preſence wpon ws, and be rair and manye good ordours in governament, your majeſtie hes brocht in, maid ws to ſie, and ſatled among ws, baithe in ciuill and eccleſiaſticall eſtaitt.

I man heir make end; becauſe my ingyne nor penne, is nocht habill to furneiſche me woords I may onywyſe eſteeme anſuerabill to the greatte obligatiouns all this countrie and natioun hes, to the honours, fauours, and infinit good your majeſtie hes done wnto ws. Taking, thairfore, my leive, withe the maiſt humbill and reuerend kiſſe of your royall hand, wiſches vnto yiour ſacred majeſtie, from the greatte King off all, all happines, grandeur, proſperitie, and contentment,

Yiour maiſt ſacred Majeſties maiſt humbill, affectionat, and obedient ſubject and ſeruitour,

DUNFERMELYNE.

From Edinburgh, 23 December 1617.

CLXXVI.—LORD BINNING TO JAMES DOUGLAS.

LOVING FREIND,

YOUR packet of the firſt came heir vpon the 8, and as the poſtmaiſters keip thair poſſeſſion of ſlow running, ſo intend I to do myne of ſweir wryting; and forbearing to repeate to yow what I wryte to Mr Patrik, to whom I haue ſignified that knowing be your letter his maieſties

earniſtnes to haue ane ſatiſfactorie anſuer ſpedelie returned in the buſſines of the fiſching of Faraw, I cauſed ſend with diligence for commiſſionars from Craill, Anſtruther, and Pittinveme, who this day compeirand before the counſall, ar forbiddin to fiſche any more neir that coaſt, lyke as the prohibition is to be maid generall and vnder great paynis be proclamation. Bot the people having promeiſed thair obedience, haue iuſtlie requyred the counſall, and thay granted to requeaſt his maieſtie be thair letter, that as his maieſtie finds the petition of the inhabitants of Farow reaſonable, and to be reddelie ſatiſſied be his ſubiects, ſo he may find it als iuſt and expedient, that the Hollanders be prohibited and hindred to do the lyke iniurie and hairme to his people vpon this coaſt, as the counſals letter will more largelie informe.

Ane vther letter is to go be this packet from the commiſſioners of the rentis to his maieſtie, anſuering ane direction preſented be the Lord Gray to the Erle of Mar, to ſecure the Lord Gray of thrie thouſand pund ſterling for his ſchireffchip. Farder at this tyme I haue not to wryte, bot commit yow to God.

Pleas your Sacred Maiestie,

By oure formair lettre of the fecund of October laft, we acquentit youre maieftie quhat we had fund in the rollis of your maiefteis exchekquer, concerning that mater recommendit be your maieftie vnto ws in fauours of the bearair heirof, Sir James Weymis of Bogye, anent the fowmes of money addebtit to him be the laite Erll of Gowrye, to witt, that the Lord Elphingftoun, your maiefteis thefaurair for the tyme, intromettit with the haill reftis of the faid late erllis leving, vnintromettit with be him felff, of the crope and yeir of God j^{m}v^{c}lxxxxix yeiris; and that the Lord of Scone, comptrollair for the tyme, intromettit with the faid laite erllis rentis of Huntingtour, Scone, and Strabrane, of the crope and yeir of God j^{m} and vj^{c} yeiris, and that he maid compt of the fame in the exchekquer; by the quhilk compt we lykwayes fand, that he maid payment to the faid Sir James of the fowme of j^{m}iiij^{c}xvj ℔ x ſ. money, in pairt of payment of the fowmes addebtit vnto him be the faid laite erll; quhilkis fowmes, extending to nyne thowfand and fax hundreth merkis, ar particularlie expreft in the act of parliament maid and confaued in his fauour—and, as he informis ws, he hes bene conftraned to pay annuell for the fame thir xvij yeiris bigane: And he being now to repair towards youre maieftie for folliciting of this buffynes, and of his payment and fatiffactioun, we haif prefoomed to accompany him with this fure teftimonie and reporte: that in all the directionis and feruiceis concredite vnto him, fra the firft worde of youre maiefteis comeing to this cuntrey, quhilkis wer bothe frequent and paynefull, efpeciallie the feruice of the cariage, the reparatioun of the hie wayes, the prouifioun of fed beif, and otheris viuers, for youre maiefties houfe, the ordour taking with beggaris, befydis a nomber of otheris particularis, occurring within the fchirefdome of Fyffe, quhairof the cheif cair and burdyne wes euer layed vpoun him; that he behaued him felff moft panefullie, cairfullie, and diligentlie, without intermiffioun or weyreing, omitting no tyme, feafoun, nor occafioun, with grite chargeis and expenſſis, to bring all theſe ſeruices to a tymous and goode concluſioun, whairin he had ſo goode a ſucceſs, that no thing did miſcarye that wes concredite vnto him. And now at laſt, vpoun the commiſſioun of the parliament anent the weyghtis and meaſouris, he hes attendit and awaitit all this winter ſeſſioun, and by his panes and trauellis in that buſſynes, it is lykewayes broght to a goode end. Thir conſiderationis, conioyned with the ſaid Sir James goode affectioun and diſpoſitioun to all youre maieſteis ſeruiceis, enboldenis ws, in all humilitie and reuerence, to recommend him to youre maieſteis fauour—that, by youre maieſteis gratious and comfortable regaird of him, he may find contentment in his honneſt and laughfull adois. And ſo, craueing youre maieſteis pardoun for this oure preſumptioun, and humelie praying God to bliſſe youre maieſtie with a lang and happie reignn, we reſt

CLXXXV.—LORD BINNING TO JAMES DOUGLAS.

Loving Freind,

I ressaued yiſternight, verie late, your packet of the 24, and knowing the conſequence of the direction for lyfe, cauſed Mr William Browne, at ten at night, to ſend John Murrayes letters to the Erle of Mar and Lord of Scone, bot ſuſpect that the Erle of Mars being in Inuerrugie ſall mak the anſuer be ſlower nor the direction, which will be without default aither in yow or me. When I reſſaue thame, they ſall be returned with haiſt anſuerable to your diſpatche. This packet will bring to yow ane letter to his maieſtie, with ane note maid be my Lord Chancelar and me, of the names of theſe juſtices of peace, whom, we conſaue to be moſt fit to be ſchireffis for this yeir.

Concerning the hand whairof yee wryte, vpon the information from the Lord Garleis and ſchiref of Galloway, my Lord Chancelar and I, cauſed bring to this towne one John Kennedie, notar, and his wyfe, committed him to wairde, and examined him and his wyfe, anent the finding of that hand, and the report of the blood which wes informed to follow him. He declaired that the hand, conteaning onlie ſum bones and ioyntis withowt ſkin, wes fund in his byre or midding, when his ſeruands in his abſence wer filling muck, in beir ſeid tyme. The blood wes ſene vpon ane chandler in his howſe, when his wyfe, in his abſence, wes at ſupper with ſum nighbours, none knowing from whence it came, and the lyke at ane vther tyme vpon the threiſhald of his ſellar dur, the huſband at all thir tymes being abſent, and the mater not being blood, bot ane thick licour, lyke gorred blood. In theſe, his wyfes depoſition and his agries. It is teſtified be his miniſter, and not denyed be himſelf, that whair he and his miniſter wer walking neir the paroche church, ſum droppis of blood wer ſene vpon the graſſe, whair thay walked; bot becaus he being deteaned priſoner in the towbuith, aboue ane moneth, and non furneiſſing pruif or probable information aganis him, nor anie fufpicion being of any perfon murdered in that cuntrie, or vther criminall imputation aganis him, caution wes takin for his compeirance and his wyfes, the firft counfall day of Nouember, vnder the payne of ane thoufand punds. Of this yee fall informe Mr Patrik, that he may relate this as the true eftate of that buffines. No publict maters haue this day occurred in counfell. When I fall know any pertinent fubiect, you fall be aduerteifed; fo I commit yow to God. Edinburgh, laft of Sept. [1618?]

Your verie affured freind,

BINNING.

This letter from the counfell to his maieftie conteanes the lite of juftices of peace for nomination of fchireffis. The lord* hes maried the Erle of Kingornis fifter privatlie, which I think the wifeft maner.

CLXXXVI.—NOTE TO BE SCHOWNE TO HIS MAIESTIE OF MATERS DONE IN THE COUNSELL OF SCOTLAND SINCE THE BEGINNING OF NOVEMBER 1618.

IN the moneth of July laft, the Schiref of Galloway, having writtin to the Counfell, that ane mans hand wes found in the midding of one John Kennedie, notare, ane man affirmed be the fchiref to be of no good report, and that blood wes fene drop from the ruif of this Kennedies houfe vpon

his table, and ſum vther pairtes of his howſe; and, when he wes walking with the miniſter of his parochin, that ſum droppis of blood appeired vpon the graſſe whair Kennedie walked: Vpon warrant ſent from the Counſell to the ſchiref, he apprehended Kennedie, and ſent him to Edinburgh, whair he wes kept cloſſe priſoner fyue or ſix oulkis, during which ſpace no man compeiring to accuſe him of any cryme, or to informe aganis him, he, by ſupplication, exhibited to the Counſell, compleined of his cauſeles detention, and deſired he might be diſmiſſed to attend his harueſt and lawfull adois, offering caution for his reentrie, whenſoeuer he ſould be chairged. The Counſell directed the preſident, who ſtayed in towne, to examine him, and giue ſuch anſuer to his petition, as, efter examination, he ſould find reaſonable; who, efter ſtrict examination of Kennedie and his wyfe, finding no obſcuritie or variation in their depoſitions, nor any ground of tortour or extraordinar ſeueritie, tuke caution for their compeirance before the Counſell, vpon the thrid of Nouember, vnder the payne of ane thouſand pundis; and wrait to the Schiref of Galloway to vſe all poſſible meanes to diſcouer any true groundis or circumſtances, which might verifie guiltines of any cryme againſt thame, and ſpeciallie, if it could be diſcouered that any man in the cuntrie had bene mourthured, or any who wes knowne to be at inimitie with Kennedie had bene miſſed. Becaus Kennedie had ſaid that he wes latelie cum to dwell whair the mans hand wes found; and that no thing of it reſting bot the olde bones and wethered ſinewes, it wes manifeſt that it had bene thair manie yeires, before his cumming to dwell in that place; and for the blood, had confeſſed that ſum droppis had bene ſeene vpon ane chandler, vpon his boord, when he wes abſent, and vpon the threſchold of ane dur, which wes lyke gored blood, whairof he could tell no cauſe, bot compleined that his cattell and horſes had died in great number, and that his wyfe had bene long vexed with extraordinar ſeiknes: all which he aſcryved to ſuſpicion of witchecraft, vſed againſt them. At the day appoynted he compeired before the Counſell, who, hauing conferred with the Schiref of Galloway, and finding no materiall information of any cryme aganis the priſoner, they reexamined Kennedie, of whom no farder being tryed nor he had deponed to the preſident, he is diſmiſſed.

The ſchireffis prickt be his maieſtie wer writtin for be the Counſell, who compeired and accepted of their chairge.

Sir Gedeon Murray hes communicat to the Lords Chancelar and Theſaurar, the directions geuin to him be his maieſtie, which they acknowledging to be moſt wyſe and iuſt, haue promeiſed to ſie performed with all convenient diligence.

The queſtion betuix the merchants and ſeamen, anent foreyne bottomes, being appoynted to haue bene decyded be the Counſell vpon the 12 of Nouember, becaus that day, ſindrie officers of eſtate wer abſent, and none of the nobilitie preſent, both pairties conſented that the mater ſould be continowed to the firſt counſell day in Februar nixt.

The Counſell having perceiued that thir yeeres bygane, when God had bliſſed our cuntrie with plentie of cornes of oure owne growth, the merchants, ſeiking their privat aduantage, to the vniuerſall preiudice of the reſt of the kingdome, had broght in great quantities of forayne victuall in the beginning of harveſt, which being boght be them in Danſkene at verie low rates, and ſo ſold much cheaper nor oure cuntrie victual], made oure cornes to remayne vnſold be the gentilmen and their poor tennentis, to their vtter vndoing, tranſported moneyes furth of the cuntrie, and broght oure cornes of the enſewing crope to be extreame cheap, be which occaſion the merchants boght it at verie lowe rates in the beginning of the yeir, and made their great aduantage of it, be tranſporting it ouer ſea. For reſtraint of this ſubtiltie of the merchants, the Counſell impoſed fyve ſchillings of cuſtume to be payed to his maieſtie for ilk boll of their forayne victuall, to which the merchants made great oppoſition, and efter that ane ſuſpenſion raiſed be them had bene diſcuſſed aganis them, they ceaſſed not ſtill to repyne, and to importune the Counſell to diſchairge that cuſtume, alledgeing that victuall ſould be frie of cuſtume, and the inbringers thairof fauorablie handled. It wes anſuered, that it wes trew, when it wes done for the good of the cuntrie, having neid of it; bot to bring it in, when we had to ſerue oure ſelues aboundantlie, and great quantitie to tranſport to be ſold in foreyne pairtis, wes the vndoing of oure cuntrie, the frutes whairof conſiſted cheiflie of cornes. Nevertheles, they ſo endleſlie importuned the Counſell, that, finding them als conſtant as they wer troubleſome, they intimated be bill to the Counſell, that they wald compleane of their vſage to his maieſtie, which moued the Counſell to tell them, that their preſumption wes intollerable, who, in the exerciſe of that inferiour juriſdiction which they had of his maieſtie, when they fand any man refuſe to giue obedience to the ordonances of their towne counſell, they preſentlie committed him to ſtrait waird, and manie times laid him in irnis; and when they receiued commandements from his maieſties Counſell, founded vpon law, reaſon, and the general good of the kingdome, they gaue example of diſobedience to all the reſt of the liegis. The Counſell wald not diſſuade them from compleaning, bot wer ſo confident of his maieſties great wiſdome and iuſtice, that when he ſould know how long and obſtinatlie they had refuſed to obey the Counſals laufull ordonance, and how iniuſt their complaint wes, he wald, be their pvniſhment, teache them and others the rewles of due obedience.

CLXXXIX.—LORD BINNING TO KING JAMES VI.

MOST SACRED SOUERANE,

MY Lord Chancelar being yiſternight abſent when we receiued the ſorowfull newes of the death of your moſt excellent quene of bliſſed memorie, and few of the Counſell being in this towne, at firſt I could reſolue no farder bot to aduerteis thoſe who wer preſent of the deplorable accident, and will them to prepaire themſelfis as apperteined. I ſent alſo for the magiſtrats of the towne, and gaue them the like aduerteiſ-

ment, and directed the Clerk of Counfell to Maifter Patrik Galloway, defiring him to conuene with the reft of the minifters heir, and giue order that honorable commemoration may be maid in their fermons of hir vertuous lyfe and Chriftian death; wheiranent I wrait alfo to the Archibifchops of Santandrois and Glafgow.

And albeit I haue hard no thing from your maieftie, or any of your minifters at Court, of the opinion conceiued of the hoftile intention of the Spanyards aganis your maiefties dominions, yet the rumours ar fo frequent and probable heir, that I haue thoght that my fault wald be pardonable to defire the archibifchops to cum heir, and bring with them fum of the wyfeft and moft fecret of the bifchops, that I might informe them what rumours went, and defire them by difcreit and fecret meanes to try evrie one of them in his owne boundis, be fuch as they know beft affected, what wes the behauiour or diffeins of fuch as ar fufpected in religion, or otherwayes difcontented, to the effect your maieftie might be informed, and be your direction fuch order taken, as in your maiefties moft excellent wifdome fould feeme expedient. And if your maieftie, vpon more fure information, be confirmed in opinion of any trouble intended be the Spaniard, it may appeir not vnfit that your maieftie call to Court, vpon fuch pretextes as may breid leaft diftruft, thofe who may be iuftlieft fufpected, able and inclined, to mak any difturbance, or giue fauour and ayde to ennemies, that, being deteaned their, thair pourpofes may be difapointed, and themfelfs kept as pledgis of the dewtie and obedience of their freindis and feruants; which will cairie no preiudice, if no danger be intended, and being neglected, may do great hairme, if ennemies be to moue trouble in thir pairtis. Howeuer it be, I think the prelates fitteft of all others to expreffe their diftruft and prouidence in ane mater of this kynd, whairat the Spaniards can not tak iuft offence, fince all is to be aduyfed quyetlie, and for no other end but precaution of evill, fpecially fince all their doing will proceed withowt any direction from your maieftie or the Counfell.

If any mak fute for the gift of the pryourie of Hadinton, I hope your maieftie will be gratiouflie pleafed to remember that your maieftie beftowed it vpone one fone of myne, which I humblie wifh he may reteane, more for ane mark of your royall fauour, nor any profit can arryfe of it.

So, beſeiking God to preſerue your maieſtie in long and conſtant health and happines, I reſt

MOST SACRED SOUERANE,

WE reſſaued youre maieſteis lettre in fauouris of James King, ſometyme of Barrogh, by the quhilk, it wes youre maieſteis pleaſour, that the Laird of Meldrum ſould be callit befoir youre maieſteis Counſaill, and that he ſould be delt with, to gif a lettre of ſlanes to the ſaid James and his compliceis, for the ſlawghter of vmquhile Alexander Seatoun, then appeirand of Meldrum; becaus, as youre maieſtie wes informed, diuers of the ſaid James his kinred and freindis hes bene killed for that ſlaughter, his haill goodis intromettit with, and him ſelf compellit at laſt to ſell his landis and leving, far ſhorte of the half value, and to renunce all actionis of ejectioun and ſpuilzee competent to him be the law. Vpoun the reſett of this lettre, we had conference with ſome ſpeciall freindis of the houſe of Meldrum, and with ſome otheris quho ar beſt acquentit with the eſtate of this buſſynes, and after conſideratioun of all the particularis concerning the ſame, we find that it wilbe more aggreable to the contentment of the pairtye, and will procure more aſſured peace to the ſaid James and his freindis, that youre maieſtie ſall grant ane pardoun for the ſaid ſlaughter, nor that the mater ſalbe broght to publict conteſtatioun and audience at the counſaill table: And thairfore, yf youre maieſtie wilbe gratiouſlie pleaſed to grant the ſaid pardoun, and to ſigne the ſignatour heirwith ſend vp to youre maieſtie, ſuche ordour ſalbe tane for the ſatling of this buſſynes, as youre maieſtie ſalbe no forder troublit thairwith. ployment of the cuntrie ſhippis; and by this lettre we perſave that youre maieſtie hes tane ſome offence, becauſe the lyke cours wes not tane heir, bot hes ſuſtenit a lang delay, and that we haif not anſuerit youre maieſties lettres written to ws thairanent. As we euer acknowlegeit your maieſties royall purpois and reſolutioun in the generall, concerning that mater, to be moſt juſt, neceſſair, and expedient, bothe for the ſtrenthe, ſaulftie, and honnour of youre maieſties kingdomes, and for the weele of your ſubiectis, ſo we omittit no tyme, panes, nor trauellis, to bring the ſame to ane goode concluſioun, to the contentment of all pairtyis haueing intereſſe. Bot we fand ſo mony difficulteis and impedimentis in the buſſynes, by the greevis pretendit and obiectionis proponnit hinc inde, that we wer conſtrayned to ſpend a grite deale of tyme in heiring of the reſſonis, anſweris, replyis, duplyis, and triplyis, quhilkis wer gevin in at ſeuerall termes and dyettis, be the maircheantis and ſkipparis, and quhilkis did neceſſarlie require diuers continewationis, whairvnto the ſkipparis ever conſentit. And at laſt, we, haueing cloiſed the proces, and diſchargeit all forder reaſouning or conteſtatioun, be worde or write, we tooke this courſe afoir we wald fullie determine thairintill; that in reſpect the mater wes graue and weyghtie, and that the conventioun of the burrowis did now approatche, and is to be haldin at Hadingtoun, vpoun the firſt Tuiſday of July nixt, that the ſkipparis ſould ſend ſax of thair nomber, beſt acquentit with the ſea faring trade, to the ſaid conventioun, to confer with the burrowis; and we haif recommendit to the burrowis to deale with thame in loue and kyndnes, and to reſolue mutuallie vpoun ſuche conditionis, as may, with common conſent, effectuat your maieſties princelie deſeignne and reſolutioun, and thay ar to reporte vnto ws, vpon the xv day of July nixt, thair hail proceidingis in this mater, at quhilk tyme, the ſame, without forder delay, is to be putt to a pointe, without ony forder continewationis to be grantit; and we haif ſend to the ſaid conventioun ane copie of the actis and articles ſend doun to youre maieſtie, for the better conformitie to be gevin to thame thairunto. CXCVI.—EARL OF MELROS TO KING JAMES VI.

MOST SACRED SOUERANE,

I HAUE vfed all diligence for triall of that which paffed betuix your maieftie and the embaffadors for the United Prouinces in the yeir 1594, and can find no thing bot a commiffion granted by the Eftates, vnder their feale, to Meffieurs Brederode and Valche, together with a ratification by thofe embaffadours of preceeding treaties of peace and amitie betuix your maiefteis royall progenitours and the houfe of Burgundie, and particularlie of that made at Binch, anno 1551, wherof I fend the copie heirwith to your maieftie. The principals wer fent to me by Sir Dauid Foulis, and fall be deliuered to the Clerk of Regifter, to be kept amongs the records of this your maiefties kingdome. The treatie at Binch is not found in your maiefties regifter; and therefore, if your maiefties embaffadours, with the Archeduke or Eftates, can get an autentik extract therof, it may greatlie ferue for cleiring of maters betuix your maieftie and them.

I perceiue by the commiſſioun granted to Brederode and Valche vnder the ſeale of the Eſtates, that thoſe who of late dealt with your maieſtie for the Indian trade, fiſchings, etc. did not proceed ingenuouſlie, when they pretended the letter of credite exhibited by them to be the vſuall warrand granted by the Eſtates to their commiſſioners, directed to treat in maters of ſuch conſequence, wherof your maieſtie may be pleaſed to conſider in future treaties.

The commiſſioner ſent to require your maieſties aſſiſe and teind from the ſtranger buſches, is not yet returned.

By deceas of Sir Alexander Drummond of Meidhop, ane ordinar place vaikes in ſeſſion, the preſent eſtate wherof requires the election of a man learned in the lawes and prattik, no age hauing ſene ſo few in that ſenate endewed with thoſe qualities as this time, which giues me hope, that your maieſtie will be gratiouſlie pleaſed to pardon the boldnes of my requeſt to your maieſtie, to prefer the good of your people, by choice of the moſt qualified, to that importunitie, which manie, owt of reſpect of privat freindſchip, will vſe for procuring the aduancement of ſuch as they affect; and therefore, ſince the end of this ſeſſion now approchis, if your maieſtie be pleaſed to delay the granting of preſentation till the beginning of the nixt, your maieſtie, before that time, hauing tried the qualities of the pretendents, all that affects the good of this eſtate will reſt aſſured, that your maieſtie will prefer him whom, by tryall, yow ſall find moſt fit for your owne ſeruice and iuſtice in the cuntrie. I humblie beg your maieſties pardon for this preſumption, and feruentlie beſeech God long to preſerue your maieſtie in all proſperitie and contentment. Ed. 16 July [1619?]

CCI.—THE LORDS OF PRIVY COUNCIL TO KING JAMES VI.

Most Sacred Souerane,

By oure formair lettre, of the 22 day of July laſt, we acquentit your maieſtie, how that youre maieſteis truſtie ſeruitour, the Clerk of Regiſter, and this bearair, who wes ane vndertakair with him, had, to thair exceding grite chargeis and expenſes, interpriſed and broght to perfectioun the arte of making of glaſs within this kingdome, and had ſett vp workis in ſindrie pairtis to that effect; quhilkis workis, with a nomber of ſtrangearis attending the ſame, thay haif, with mony difficulteis, intertenyed and haldin fordwart thir diuers yeiris bigane, and how that now thay ar vnable ony langer to vnderly the daylie and neceſſair chargeis and expenſes of the ſaidis workis, becaus thair hoipis wherupoun thay buildit the reparatioun and vpſetting of thair loſſis, by the diſpatche of thair glaſſe within and without this kingdome, hes failled thame, ſeeing all the cuntrey diſpatche of glaſſe in ane haill yeir will not vpholde thir glas workis the ſpace of ane moneth; and thair is ane prohibitioun maid in that youre maieſties kingdome of all inbringing or ſelling of ony foreyne glaſſe thair; by the whilk prohibitioun maid, youre maieſties preuilege and patent, grantit to your ſaid ſeruitour, will become voyde, and this worke, quhilk hes coiſt ſo grite a deale of chargeis, will periſhe, to the diſcredite and ſcandall of the cuntrey, and hurte of a nomber of poore cuntrey people, who wer haldin at worke and inſtructed in that arte, not heirtofoir practiſed amangs ws. And thairfoir, oure humble petitioun vnto your maieſtie wes, that, according to ane article aggreit vpoun in the treatie of the Vnioun, and ratifeit by youre maieſteis parliament heir, quhairby the native commodityis of ather kingdome wer declairit to be free to be inbroght and ſauld in bothe, quhilk accordinglie hes tane effect and executioun heir, inſofar as oure coale, and mony otheris of oure natiue commodityis, forbidden to be exported be oure lawis, ar, notwithſtanding, without controlment, day-lie careyed frome henſe thither, for making of glaſſe and otheris vſeis in that kingdome, that youre maieſtie wald be pleaſed, by your authoritie royall, outher to declair the ſelling of Scottis glaſs to be free in that kingdome, nochtwithſtanding ony prohibitioun or reſtreante maid in the contrair, or then, that, with your maieſteis fauour, the lawis of this kingdome maid aganis the exportatioun of coale may be revived, and ordanit to ſtand in force (with ſpeciall reſeruatioun alwayes of ſa mony coillis as ſalbe tranſportit for youre maieſteis houſe). This being the effect and ſubſtance of oure formair lettre, we wilbe bauld, of new, agane to recommend the ſame to youre maieſteis goode rememberance and gratious conſideratioun, and humelie to intreate youre ſacred maieſtie on the behalf of youre maieſteis ſaid ſeruitour, who, oute of his affectioun to the credite and weele of his native cuntrey, hes interpriſed not onlie thir workis, bot ſindrie otheris, as is notour to youre maieſtie; that youre maieſtie wald be pleaſed to hald hand vnto him, and to incourage him to proſequute and follow oute the ſaid worke, by declairing the glaſs of this kingdome to be free to be ſauld thair, as ſaid is. This gentilman, bearair heirof, who is ane vndertakair in this worke with your maieſteis ſaid ſeruitour, is come vp to attend this buſſynes, whome we humelie recommend to youre maieſteis fauourable acceptance. And ſo, frome oure hairtis praying God to bliſſe youre maieſtie with a lang and happie reigne, we reſt for ever
